

Quarterly: Congress Sees Few Changes

By Peter Lisagor
(c) Chicago Daily News

Washington — If the form charts hold, the 94th Congress will have substantially more Democrats, but its profile will not be dramatically different from the 93rd, according to a Congressional Quarterly (CQ) analysis.

And unsurprisingly, its top priority will be to deal with inflation and a declining economy, in the judgment of both incumbents and challengers polled by CQ.

President Ford, who learned about the new 6% unemployment figure while campaigning in the West, would likely agree with the CQ findings that economic issues rank foremost among candidate concerns.

However, the policies designed to combat inflation may be forced to yield to programs to cope with the recession, in the opinion of economic forecasters.

Ford has campaigned against the Democrats as "big spenders," but ironically, he may be forced to advocate additional federal outlays to cushion rising unemployment and provide a stimulus to business activity, the forecasters predict.

The CQ's projected profile shows the House and Senate to be more liberal and slightly younger. There will be a modest increase of women and blacks in the House.

But neither a woman nor a black will win a Senate seat, the analysis concludes, unless Democrat Betty Roberts should unseat Republican incumbent Sen. Robert W. Packwood in Oregon. She is given only an outside chance of staging an upset.

The slight reduction in the average age of House members and senators will follow a recent trend. The average age of senators sworn in for the 93rd Congress two years ago was 55.3 years.

If the forecasts hold, it will be closer to 55 next year. The average age of representatives was 51.1 in 1973 and will be about a year less next year.

The leadership in the House and Senate will remain virtually the same, barring an upheaval within the two bodies. The Republicans must replace Rep. Leslie Arends, of Illinois, as assistant minority leader. Arends, 80, is retiring after 40 years in the House.

A questionnaire sent to the major candidates for House and Senate seats revealed the three top issues they expect to confront the 94th Congress are inflation and the economy, campaign and congressional reform and energy and environment.

A total of 421, about half of those surveyed, responded to the questionnaire. A majority of 297 expressed opposition to wage and price controls as an anti-inflation measure. Only 106 favored controls, and 90 of those were Democrats.

Integrity in government and the need for election reforms ranked next to the economy among the top issues. Republicans and Democrats split on the methods for financing campaigns, with the Democrats favoring more public financing than the Republicans.

On energy and environment, a majority of 280 favored delaying or eliminating some deadlines in the clean air and clean water acts on a selective basis. There was substantial support for diverting federal highway funds to developing mass transit systems in urban areas.

Among the other top issues were defense spending, school busing, an antiabortion amendment and the death penalty. Most Democrats favored reduced defense budget while Republicans opposed it.

By a thin 205 to 191 margin, the candidates favored a constitutional amendment to prohibit busing to achieve racial balance in the schools. An amendment on abortion was less favorably received.

By 206 to 121, the candidates said they favored the death penalty under certain circumstances.

World Food Conference Opens Tuesday in Rome

Hungry Asking World to Pass the Bread

By Roy Larson
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Rome — Delegates to the United Nations World Food Conference that opens here Tuesday will be tested by a question that is biblical in its simplicity and directness.

From afar, chiefly from the 32 countries where the hunger problem is most acute, millions of hungry members of the human family — some say 400 million, others put the figure at 800 million or more — are asking the rest of the world to pass the bread.

The question is: Will the conference give them bread or a stone? A stone of empty rhetoric, a stone of bureaucratic plans and promises, a stone of inadequate funds.

The answer will be known by Nov. 16 when the delegates from more than 100 countries, including all the major powers, and myriad observers from a variety of non-governmental organizations complete their plan of action, close their attache cases and leave Rome for home.

By now, a large share of the world's intelligentsia seems agreed that the planet currently faces a world food crisis of enormous proportions. What's more, there is a widespread feeling that in the immediate future the situation is going to get worse.

And some responsible leaders, not normally addicted to careless language, have allowed doomsday terms to become a part of their everyday speech when they talk about the way the food supply is failing to provide for the needs of a population increasing at the rate of 1.4 million persons per week.

Ford: Need for Global Strategy

Not everyone would go that far, but President Ford, in his September address to the U.N. General Assembly, did find it appropriate to use the word "crisis" in speaking of current and projected food shortages, and he suggested the need for a "global strategy" to cope with the challenge.

Backing up the President's assessment was a recent U.S. State Dept. document stating: "History records more acute short-tages (of food) in individual countries, but it is doubtful whether such a critical food situation has ever been so worldwide."

Behind such appraisals are facts gathered by the U.N.'s Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) which monitors world food needs from its headquarters in Rome. The FAO says:

"Fifteen percent of the world's population are underfed, or actually hungry. About one-half of the world's population does not get enough of the quality foods needed for a healthy and productive life. Some 460 million persons are permanently hungry, and 40% of these are children."

To those inclined to dismiss such data on the grounds that "the poor (and the hungry) we shall always have with us," world food experts insist the current crisis cannot be understood if it is viewed as nothing more than a slight worsening of a chronic ailment.

Documents prepared for the food conference assert "the beginnings of the present world food crisis go back to 1972 when the output of cereals (wheat, coarse grains and rice) in the world declined for the first time in 20 years."

"The sudden drop in the 1972 production created a heavy deficit of food at a time when the North American countries were engaged in supply management programs to bring down their large surpluses."

"Also, this was the first time in recent decades that adverse weather affected production in several sub-continent simultaneously."

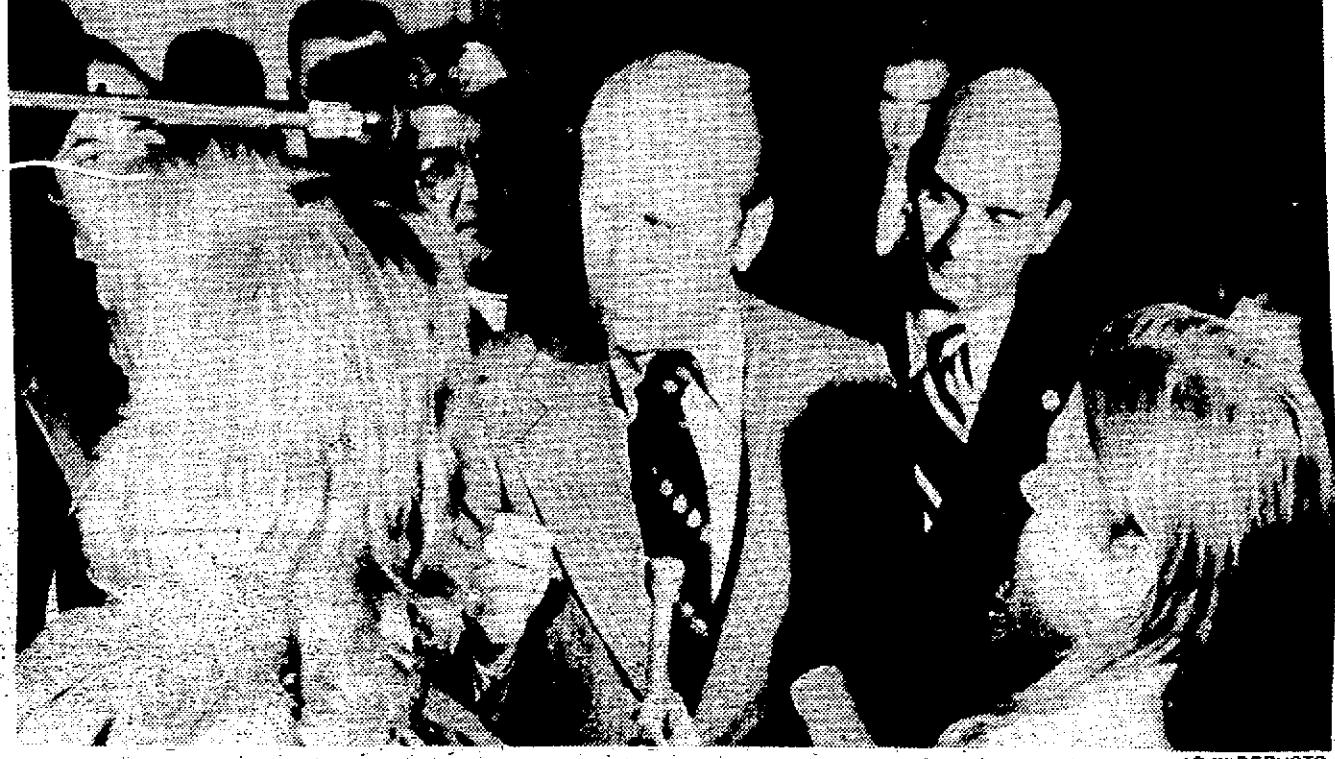

Other Major Forces

To make matters infinitely worse, the world is now belatedly beginning to respond to the food crisis at the same time it is attempting to deal with such other major (and interrelated) forces as the energy crisis and worldwide inflation.

Last year's dramatic jump in oil prices increased all agricultural costs — the price of seeds, fertilizer and transportation to markets.

And if the average American consumer is startled every time he sees the total rung up on his supermarket cash register, he needs to keep in mind that for the world's starving millions, inflation is not a source

Ford Wraps Up Crusade for Votes

Wichita (AP) — President Ford wrapped up a month-long, 22-state crusade to save embattled Republican candidates Saturday by appealing to voters to give him a cooperative Congress that will help him fight inflation.

Ford put in a long day of campaigning Saturday, concentrating on three crucial Senate seats in Utah, Colorado and Kansas. He denounced big spenders and asked for help to chop off the tentacles of "an octopus-like government in Washington."

Along the way, he engaged three Vietnam veterans in a finger-wagging, backstage debate over legislation to increase GI education benefits.

Ford has campaigned some 17,000 miles across the nation since Oct. 7 in an effort to head off a predicted wave of Democratic victories in congressional elections on Tuesday.

Ford flew back to Washington Saturday night after three receptions and a rally for Sen. Robert Dole in Wichita.

At the last stop, Ford embraced Dole and said the former Republican national chairman needed backing in "the political fight of his life."

Ford said holding down federal spending was a key to curbing inflation, sounding again his plea for voters to take a look at the records of the candidates on the spending issue.

Turning to foreign affairs, Ford said America has a unique opportunity to achieve "a better world."

"What you have to decide," he added, is which candidates are best qualified to lend vision and strength to that pursuit. He said Republicans such as Dole best fit that category.

Addressing a crowd officially estimated at 10,000 that filled a baseball stadium on the western Colorado city of Grand Junction, Ford declared a "cooperative Congress" would be good for the nation.

He also plugged the sagging campaigns of Republican Sen. Peter Dominick and GOP Gov. John Vanderhoof, both of Colorado.

In Salt Lake City, Ford was applauded by a crowd of 10,000 at the University of Utah. He treated an audience filling about two-thirds of the campus basketball arena to a partisan lecture on what he said was an "overgrown, all-powerful bureaucracy," and urged a return of power to the local level.

New Warning Voiced About Another Mideast War

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's efforts to lower the world price of oil won apparent support from the Shah of Iran on Saturday, but new warnings were voiced about another war in the Middle East.

Sen. J.W. Fulbright said there was an acute danger of a nuclear war between the Arabs and Israelis, and the Palestinian guerrillas dismissed Kissinger's blueprint for peace as "sheer nonsense."

Fulbright said in a speech prepared for delivery at Westminster College in Fulton, Mo., that the only alternative to a fifth Mideast war — in which Israel might use nuclear weapons it is "generally assumed" to have — was Israeli withdrawal from Old Jerusalem and the West Bank of the Jordan.

Israel has said it would never leave Jerusalem, which it considers the nation's capital.

In Beirut, the chief spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization said the PLO would escalate its military campaign against Israel, coordinating its strategy with Egypt, Jordan and Syria.

"The Arabs must now prepare for a fifth war," he said, "because we believe it is inevitable."

Kissinger made the apparent breakthrough on oil prices during more than four hours of talks in Tehran with the Shah of Iran. The American secretary has just completed visits to the Soviet Union and South Asia, and Egypt announced he will fly to Cairo on Tuesday.

The Shah said he will propose to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna next month that the posted price of oil go down from its current level of $11.65 a barrel to $10, about 14%. The posted price is set by the producing countries as the base of taxes and royalties from oil companies.

Despite his plan, which the Iranian ruler announced in a news conference, the Shah said the cost to consumers probably will go up. This is because of inflation in the cost of goods the oil states import and because of high profits by the oil companies.

As outlined by the Shah, the proposal would in effect set up the $10 rate to serve as a base price, linked to inflationary costs of a cross-section of consumer goods the producer countries import. He admitted this would result quickly in higher prices for oil.

"If we cannot link the price of oil with the cost of inflation, there won't be any incentive for the industrialized countries to check that inflation," he said.

The Shah said in any case the price for American motorists would keep going up unless the profits of the oil companies are controlled.

"Why should they make $2 on one barrel of oil?" he asked. "Why should some of them make 700% interest in one year? Is that fair?"

By Brian Mottaz
Spokane, Wash. (UPI) — Expo 74, a world exposition touted as the first major event of the nation's bicentennial, closes this day after a six-month run that attracted five million customers and earned (who would believe it?) a small profit.

The fair's ringing theme was the environment. Although the $80 million show failed to discernibly arouse a high fever of ecological concern around the world, its economic benefit to Spokane will likely reach about $700 million.

Arkansas Sen. J. W. Fulbright, at a congressional hearing on U.S. participation, called Expo "urban renewal under the guise of a world's fair." A local businessman said, "Expo brought the people back downtown again." Another said the retailing business in Spokane, which has a population of 170,000, was a sleeping giant that Expo awakened.

Business boomed in Spokane as the rest of the country slumped. Retail sales county-wide jumped 26% and construction surged: two banks buildings, a couple of department stores, a new hotel and a score of new motels in the city's core area.

Expo's founders and developers say the fair's major legacy is a riverfront park to be built on land occupied by the fair — 100 acres along, and two islands in, the Spokane River where it flows through downtown.

The land had served as the city's railroad terminus dating back to the 19th century. Once the center of a busy frontier town, the area deteriorated until, by the mid-1960s, it had become skid row.

Spokane Falls in the heart of the city, a resource of great community pride in the past, was lost in the ugliness of the railroad yard and surrounding commercial buildings.

Expo officials like to think they gave people back the river and falls while returning trees, grass and open spaces to the city's middle.

But Expo's theme — Man and His Environment — took a beating from environmentalists.

Exhibits such as those of two U.S. auto makers, two railroads, airlines and heavy equipment operators caused some critics to regard Expo as little more than a trade fair.

When it opened on May 4, Expo was unable to persuade any environmental group such as the Sierra Club or the Audubon Society to participate even when it offered free space. Later, friends of the Earth put up a modest exhibit.

Expo officials figured they would break even if five million people came to the fair. That many had passed through last Monday, and since then at least 200,000 more visitors clicked past the turnstiles, putting the show in the black.

Which isn't bad for a modest sized city in a relatively obscure corner in the Great Northwest.

After all, the New York World's Fair of 1964-65 lost $21,159,660.30.

Report Hits Lifting Gas Price Lids

American consumers could pay up to $75.6 billion extra for natural gas through 1980 if price controls were removed, a government report estimated Saturday. The report said there is little evidence such rising prices would help increase gas production, as proponents of deregulation contend. The report was done by the Library of Congress at the request of Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who asked for the study after President Ford's recent suggestion that natural gas prices should be deregulated.

Thunderstorms Halt Research Balloon

Threatening weather forced a premature end to the often-delayed flight of a manned research balloon that landed Saturday near Wagon Mound, N.M., Project DaVinci officials said. The helium balloon, with its cargo of instruments and four scientists, was to have followed a single air mass 36 hours before landing in northeastern Kansas.

Army Schedules Mass Blackbird Killing

The Army scheduled a mass blackbird killing program in Kentucky and Tennessee this week despite objections from an environmental group that it won't eliminate the birds and may harm the rest of the environment. In a rerun of Alfred Hitchcock's film, "The Birds," or the real life concentration of two million blackbirds at Graceham, Md., last spring, an estimated 14 million blackbirds have descended on the area around Ft. Campbell, Ky., and Milan Army Ammunition Plant, Tenn.

Rains Again Drench Once Drought-Stricken Southwest

Incessant rains again drenched once drought-stricken areas of the Southwest Saturday, accompanied in some cases by tornadoes and damaging flash floods. Five days of rain in north Texas drove rivers, streams and lakes to their banks or over them. Flood waters lapped at rooftops in parts of Oklahoma City, Okla.

Demand Growing For Air Cushion Machines

Those remarkable air cushion machines that skim so easily over land and sea are headed for big-time use as high-speed freighters and warships, according to a new study. And the hydrofoil, which lifts its hull above the surface on skis and wings, also figures prominently in commercial and military planning. The new edition of Jane's Surface Skimmers, a hefty, $40 encyclopaedia on the subject, suggests demand is threatening to exceed production of these sea, swamp and desert-skimming vessels.

Milliken Backing

Gov. William Milliken said Saturday he is keeping his controversial running mate on the Michigan GOP ticket, but will demand his resignation if conflict of interest charges against him are proven. Nevertheless, the governor said, his own intensive two-day investigation of James Damman's political past turned up nothing that would prove such allegations. The Detroit Free Press said Damman and several other members of the Troy City Council secretly purchased property while helping draw up a master zoning plan for the Detroit suburb.

Lewis Released

Radio station manager Will Lewis walked out of federal prison in Los Angeles Saturday after Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas signed an order staying Lewis' contempt citation. Lewis, 42, an ex-Marine and father of five, has been jailed for contempt twice by the same judge for refusing to surrender material received from radical groups. Douglas signed orders releasing him in both cases.

Breaks Silence

Goaded by the publication of unauthorized editions of his early, previously uncollected works, J.D. Salinger, the reclusive author who is obsessed with maintaining his privacy, broke a silence of more than 20 years to denounce the publication of "Complete Uncollected Short Stories of J.D. Salinger, Vols. 1-2." Salinger, who became the object of cultish devotion following publication of "The Catcher in the Rye" in 1950, said in a telephone interview with the New York Times he is at work on other books that may never be published in his lifetime.

Peking Meeting

George Bush, chief of the U.S. liaison office in Peking, met Saturday with Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping, the New China News Agency reported. The report said Vice Foreign Ministers Chiao Kuan-Hua and Wang Hai-Jung and American diplomats attended the meeting, but gave no other details.

Edwards Shot

Nelson Jack Edwards, who rose through the ranks of the United Auto Workers to become its first black vice president, was fatally shot early Saturday while trying to break up a fight in a Detroit bar. The 57-year-old Edwards, a confidante of the late UAW president Walter Reuther, had been in the bar for less than 10 minutes when the trouble erupted. Police said Edwards tried to cool down an argument that broke out when a patron was informed that it was the last chance to order drinks before the bar closed.

James Damman

Door Opener

A 32-year-old St. Petersburg, Fla., man who earned a chunk of money selling insurance says when it comes to opening doors in his business, he's got the key. His name is Abe Lincoln. "My name has helped me make money selling. It's the greatest entrance there is," he says. Lincoln won't disclose how much he's earned. "Let me just say I've made a lot. I'm above average with a beautiful home and two cars." Ironically, he works for the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. based in Fort Wayne, Ind. He is paid by checks drawn on the Lincoln Liberty Bank in that city. And his boss in St. Petersburg is a man named Booth. But it's Larry Booth.

Tax Judgment

Two days after Muhammad Ali recaptured the world heavyweight boxing crown, California won a $61,878 judgment against him for unpaid state income taxes. Ali failed to pay all of his 1973 state income tax, the state contended, and Superior Court Judge G. Abbot Goldberg, signed a default order against the new champ who failed to respond to the suit.

Ford Portrait

Donald E. Johnson went to Washington recently to visit friends. He arrived back home with a commission to paint President Ford's portrait. Johnson, a 51-year-old artist from the Northumberland County community of Bath, said Saturday he met a representative of the exclusive Capitol Hill club who had seen his work and asked him to paint the President's portrait.

Critical Comments

Black American entertain Josephine Baker says she would be "proud to be thrown out of South Africa" for her critical comments on the nation's racial policies. The 68-year-old singer, now in Cape Town on tour, said she came to South Africa hoping to find change in the country's policies of racial discrimination but found that systematic discrimination was still the rule.

A four-hour pre-dawn fire in Seoul killed at least 72 and injured about 50 others today in a seven-story building housing a small hotel, apartments and shops, police said. Most of the dead were overcome by the smoke while others were killed in jumps or other attempts to escape, police said. The cause of the fire was not immediately known.

Soviets Luna 23 Goes Into Orbit Around Moon

Luna 23, the Soviet automated space vehicle launched Oct. 28, went into orbit around the moon Saturday, the Tass News Agency said. The remote-controlled space machine is circling the moon once every hour and 57 minutes in an orbit of 65 miles from the lunar surface at its highest and 59 miles at its lowest, Tass said.

Greek, Turkey Officials Meet at United Nations

The first face-to-face talks between Greece and Turkey since the Cyprus summer war have been held between the foreign ministers of the two countries, diplomats of both nations reported Saturday. They said Turan Guney of Turkey and Dimitri Bitsios of Greece met twice during the week-long Cyprus debate at the United Nations, which ended Friday. Diplomatic sources said no further talks between the two countries are scheduled.

Bomb Explosion Leading Possibility as Crash Cause

A U.S. air safety spokesman said Saturday a bomb explosion is a leading possibility under investigation as the cause of the crash of a U.S. airliner in Greek waters. A group calling itself Nationalist Youth for Liberation of Palestine had said in Beirut that one of its agents set off a bomb on Trans World Airlines flight No. 841 on Sept. 8. However, the group's claim was dismissed as "Zionist propaganda" by other Palestinian organizations. A team of crash experts from the National Transportation Safety Board recovered 2,500 pounds of debris and 24 bodies from the crash scene. The main wreckage lies in 10,300 feet of water. Eighty-eight persons, including 20 Americans, were killed in the crash near the Greek island of Kefallinia.

British to Scrap African Naval Pact?

Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government, which is publicly opposed to South Africa's racial policies, plans to scrap Britain's naval agreement with Pretoria early next year, well-placed government sources reported Saturday. The sources said the issue of naval cooperation with South Africa has churned up a major storm within Labor ranks and has led Wilson to threaten to fire at least three ministers.

Under the present State administration...

- State spending has increased $91 million, a 48% increase.
- The State has accumulated, through taxes, a cash surplus of as much as $69 million; $54 million more than required by law.
- The Governor has consistently fought all attempts to lower your income taxes.

Here's what Marvel/Batchelder pledge they will do to correct this intolerable situation...

- Stabilize State spending at a level that will reduce the impact that inflation, drought, and other economic conditions have had on the Nebraska taxpayer.
- Give the excessive surplus back to the taxpayers.
- Eliminate the sales tax on food.
- Carefully scrutinize all lease and service contracts the State now has, to end all political payoffs that have been made with your money.

Vote for a team that's pledged to do right by you.

Economy—Famine and Feast

Unemployment reaches the 6% mark. Some national indicators are the worst in a generation. Livestock producers are demanding a shutdown on meat imports to give them less of a competitive headache. After reporting a decline in profits of 94%, General Motors orders further layoffs on its production lines.

Yet look at other figures. The Great Western Sugar profit increase of a colossal 1,200% still has people reeling (and the world sugar future market prices spiral higher yet). Oil companies continue to demonstrate profits of amazing proportions, compared to the same quarter one year ago. Standard Oil of Ohio up 124%, Continental Oil up 121%, Phillips Petroleum up 109%.

What's going on here? Feast-or-famine, it appears.

Even on the Nebraska agricultural sector, to some degree.

There are corn farmers wiped out, or virtually so, by hostile weather conditions of this year. What has happened to cattle feeders is sufficiently bloody as to permit a default on descriptive repetition. But simultaneously, Nebraska has wheat farmers who rarely had it so good. More than a few still are sitting on their harvests, either awaiting higher prices or Jan. 1, the magic tax-year date.

In the Panhandle, sugar beet producers who received an average price of $20.13 per ton in 1972 now are getting $38.29. There was a great crop of dry beans in Western Nebraska this year and a great price for the little bits of toothsome protein, too.

From this brief recitation, even the most casual observer — and who is casual about the subject these days? — must concede America's economy is a crazy-quilt of ups and downs. Inflation cheek by jowl with recession, although the latter may be beginning to demonstrate more squeeze than the former, on a national average.

Only the most foolhardy would seize on a single remedy. The fantastically testing problem for the nation is to attempt to meet both menaces at the same time — cooling the fires while concurrently priming the pump, so to speak.

There is no doubt the Ford administration will seek to do that, programs shaped by its natural economic conditioning and readings of the political tide. Within days after the ballots are counted Tuesday, Americans may expect some fresh and tougher statements coming from the White House, we suspect.

An Issue With Teeth

Smaller Nebraska communities keep worrying about a shortage of doctors. So if somebody offered them an easy way to avoid pneumonia, appendicitis, gout, the common cold or psoriasis, they'd no doubt jump at the chance.

This fantasy is not so removed from what 150 to 200 Nebraska communities will be offered Tuesday.

These are towns which, in many cases, also face a scarcity of dentists. By voting "yes" to the question of adding fluoride to the drinking water, citizens can virtually guarantee a reduction of dental problems. No amount of emotional arguments or scare tactics can change the fact that the vast majority of reputable medical and dental researchers and practitioners are convinced fluoridation doesn't do a bit of harm but does do a lot of good by preventing cavities — not all cavities, but a dramatic percentage of what would otherwise occur.

So far this year Nebraska voters have not looked with much favor on fluoridation. Tuesday is a chance to reverse the pattern in the direction of dental health and common sense.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

In the final week of this campaign, editorial writers found themselves having to make the hard decisions which voters must face Nov. 5. Throughout the state newspapers, which had watched and reported what candidates and partisans said, began to express their own opinions.

Rather than candidates, many newspapers found Referendum No. 300, on state aid to schools, to be the most important idea facing those who cast the ballots. The North Platte Telegraph said: "There is not a candidate on the ballot Nov. 5 who can do as much for you, directly and positively, as you can do for yourself by voting 'yes' on Issue 300." The newspaper said approval would "even the tax load" and "mean better education."

The Sidney Telegraph termed the proposition, also known as LB772, a "watershed issue." We see the LB772 battle as the watershed in a long fight aimed at establishing the twin principles of state responsibility for the education of its young people and of a lightening of the burdensome property tax. It said defeat would "mean a major step backward for the overtaxed property owner."

But the sentiment was not unanimous as the McCook Daily Gazette came out in opposition to the item. It found the bill so complex that "the only feature we are certain of is that it would result in a 40% increase in the state sales tax and nearly that much in the state income tax." The newspaper suggested voters reject No. 300 and demand the Legislature come up with a "less complicated method of financing our schools even if we have to forfeit some equity in education and taxation."

Democratic Third District candidate Wayne Ziebarth finally found some editorial support in his own backyard that he had been looking for in McCook and other areas of the sprawling rural district. The editor of the Holdrege Daily Citizen took off his elephant lapel pin long enough to endorse the Wilcox farmer. Ziebarth's age, conservatism, farming background and being from "our neighborhood" were factors the Citizen found in his favor. It dismissed Republican Mrs. Haven Smith's charges of Ziebarth's ties to unions.

It is unusual for a merit referendum on a judge to become a prominent issue, but in Omaha the "yes" and "no" vote on Douglas County District Court Judge Theodore L. Richling has taken on such proportions. In a lengthy editorial, the Omaha World-Herald urged voters to vote "no" on the judge as "a good man in the wrong job." The newspaper said Richling "failed to shift gears" when he put on the black robe after being a "hard-driving, tough-minded prosecutor."

Meeting Food, Energy Needs By U.S.-China Partnership

By Harned Pettus Hoose

I propose the United States and the People's Republic of China join together and announce to the world they intend to cooperate in launching an eventually multinational worldwide program to provide food and energy materials and facilities, reconstruct depressed or ravaged areas, prime international pumps of foreign trade and invite all major economic powers to participate.

At first glance, the United States and China might seem strange partners to launch such a program. The two nations are ideological adversaries... Americans and Chinese are different ethnologically, politically, economically and linguistically.

But China and the United States have a symbiotic potential which can make the plan work.

The symbiosis extends also into other aspects, some economic, some strategic. China wants our equipment, machinery, technology and know-how in its ongoing industrial development. We are eager to sell such things to China, and also welcome the warming relationship between our Asian friends and allies and China. Relative peace has settled throughout most of Asia, and its impact is felt worldwide.

Moreover, we need oil and China now claims with considerable justification it has perhaps the third largest oil reserves in the world. Our status as the leading oil drilling and processing technologists in the world provides yet another potentially symbiotic relationship between the Americans and the Chinese.

China will never consent to exploitation of its petroleum, mineral and other resources by a foreign power, and the United States understands that view. "Joint ventures" are impossible, the Chinese tell us. But "cooperative efforts" are a possibility, with the Chinese to own and operate all facilities and control all output, with some equitable provision to enable American, other Western or Japanese participants to recover expenses and acquire some of the oil itself.

The United States and China... have capacities for the kind of joint effort the world so badly needs, today, to begin to solve food, energy and other economic problems.

What should the plan be?

That the two nations simply and clearly announce they intend to cooperate in providing emergency food, financing, medical supplies and other help to the Asian and other peoples who need them; that the two nations intend to cooperate in reconstructing ravaged portions of Asia; and that they expect to do so partly through joint aid and partly through trade. I suggest the United States and China join in forming a bilateral commission to plan the details, make the first deliveries of foodstuffs, clothing, construction materials, labor brigades, and the like, and then invite Japan, West Germany, Australia, New Zealand and other European and Asian countries to participate. China and the United States should jointly approach Arab and other OPEC (oil producing) nations and solicit financial assistance and donations of oil in kind, for use in connection with assistance to most needy nations.

The United States and China should suggest Brazil and other food and materials - rich nations join in, perhaps through their respective bilateral trade relationships with various cooperating countries such as Japan.

For our part, American involvement should include government and private industry, with our great international corporations providing machinery, equipment, technology and expertise, all for fair prices in international trade.

An example of an advanced stage transaction under the plan might involve something like:

• A consulting committee, jointly headed by representatives of the U.S. and China governments and composed also of governmental representatives of each nation participating in the particular transaction, would "broker" or match together the various interests.

• Private enterprise entities from the U.S., Canada and Australia would sell to nominees of the consulting committee (limited to nations participating in the particular transaction) the required amounts of grain and foodstuffs, at world market rates.

• Simultaneously, private enterprise entities from Japan, West Germany and the United States would sell to nominees of the consulting committee the required amounts and types of machinery, equipment and technology.

• At the same time, one or more of the OPEC nations and China through their normal state trading companies, would sell to nominees of the consulting committee the required amounts and types of crude oil or petroleum products.

• The dollar values at world market rates of each category (grain and foodstuffs; machinery, equipment and technology; and crude oil or petroleum products) would be approximately equal.

• As might be necessary in a particular transaction, or within such a transaction as to any participant, funding of the purchase prices would be provided in various combinations by hard dollars; private sector financing; existing or specially created international or regional government-

Harned Pettus Hoose

Harned Pettus Hoose, international trade consultant, was born in China, son of a missionary. He is consulting professor of international business at the University of California Graduate School of Business Administration. He helped prepare President Nixon's trip to China and since 1972 has made more than half a dozen trips to China. This article is excerpted from an address he made at United Press International's annual editors conference in San Francisco.

supported financing bodies; or by government loans, including those available from one or more OPEC nations.

• The consulting committee would assist in "brokering" or matching interests in the transaction. For example, the following illustration might apply in a particular transaction:

— The grain and foodstuffs could be allocated, say, 90% to be divided among Japan, China and participating OPEC nation or nations, in a ratio relating to the contribution of each in the particular transaction. The remaining 10% could be allocated to less developed or food-short nations participating in the transaction.

— The machinery, equipment and technology could be allocated, say, among China, participating OPEC nations and less developed or food-short nations participating in the transaction, in the same or some other relevant ratio.

— The crude oil and petroleum products could be allocated, say, among the U.S., West Germany and Japan, in this particular example, with again perhaps 10% being allocated to less developed nations participating in the transaction.

Although some portions of the transaction might be in semibarter form, most of the transaction would involve simultaneous, reciprocal or multinational sales.

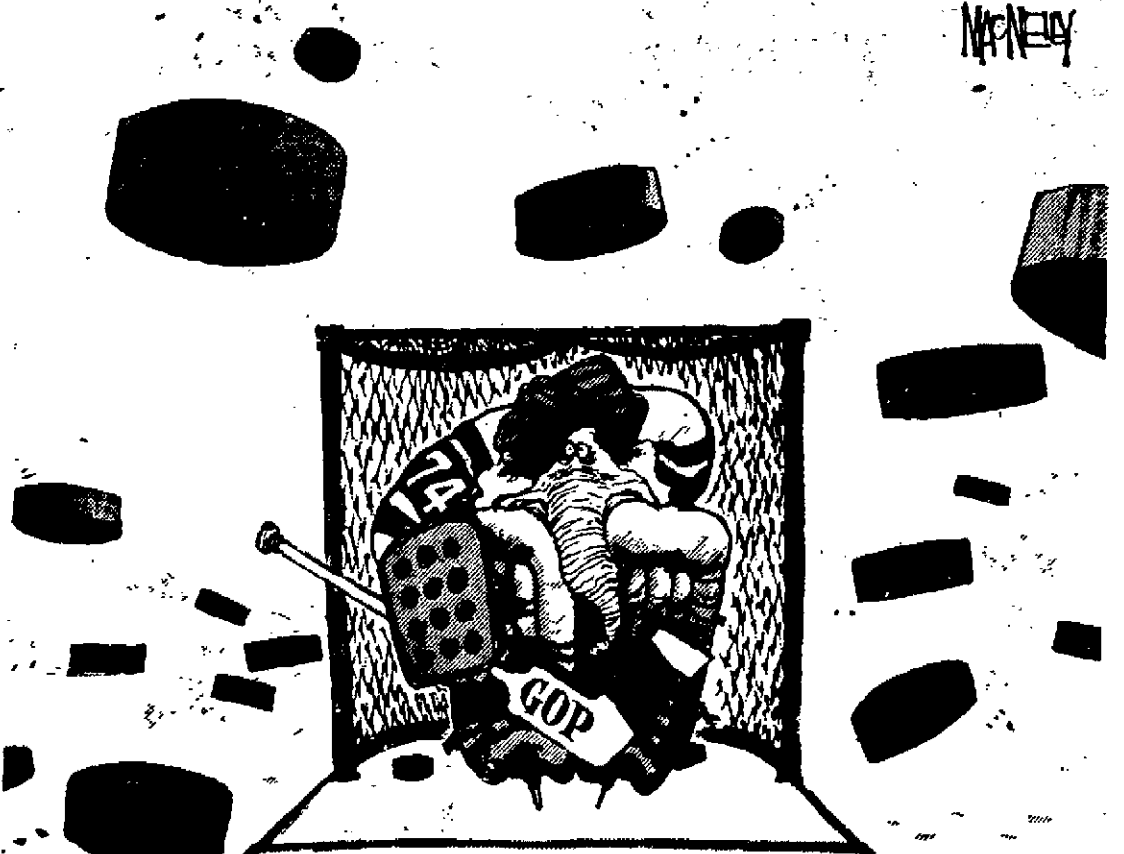

In effect, stronger and more developed nations would pay a premium in the form of the 10% "tithe" or accommodation to a less developed or food-short nation, which would be permitted to pay for its purchases with extended terms or soft dollars, or even to receive aid.

The key here is to have China and the U.S. start the comeback by getting together and mapping out their humanitarian objectives, without regard for national boundaries or allies. The initial target should be to meet immediate food and medical needs. Then, the reconstruction of Southeast Asia and assistance in Africa could be targets.

Supposin' . . . A Scenario of What Nebraska Voters Could Produce

By Dick Herman
Editorial Page Editor

All right, wars ARE too important to be left to generals. And politics are not the exclusive province of professional politicians. But much of the fascination of playing the game with pots comes in the art of supposin' . . . Supposin' this happens. Then what? Supposin' just the opposite and the voters blunder into making a right decision. What then?

With another biennial Grim Tuesday just a near-distance dawn away, let's go supposin' in Nebraska politics and speculate.

Supposin' that both Rep. Charles Thorne of Lincoln and John Y. McCollister of Omaha take it in the electoral shorts. It could happen.

The startling consequence of a twin loss of incumbents is that the "natural" heir apparents to aging and not excessively popular Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl T. Curtis are amputated. Suddenly there is reason to believe the hidden yeasts and suppressed ambitions within the Nebraska Republican Party — relatively new faces and alternative thought patterns — will stir and bubble and surface.

Lacking a candidate as well-known as either Thorne or McCollister for replacement purposes, Republicans might likely be forced to the well again in 1976 with Hruska. Given the senior senator's disrepair in the popularity derby, that might presage yet another GOP electoral disaster — unless Hruska recoups.

But supposin' only one of the two Republican incumbent congressmen is given his severance notice by voters. The one who remains automatically becomes a stronger figure in the Hruska-Curtis successor byplay, gathering unto his folds the loyal but exhausted elephants, nurturing them for a future trek into the electoral wilderness.

If that one is McCollister, he could be the 1976

GOP senatorial nominee. He comes from the same Omaha base as does Hruska. If that survivor is Thorne, the nuances are fluted a bit differently.

Look to the other party in this flight of political imagination.

Election of any one of the three Democrats bidding for Congress Tuesday installs that one as a party force; maybe not a direct rival to the head of the Democratic hierarchy, Gov. J. J. Exon. But at least an office holder with his own power base and having a finger on the national patronage flow greater than that Exon can exercise.

Not altogether forgotten are some strains within the party the last time Nebraska had a Democratic governor and a single Democratic congressman, to wit Frank Morrison and Clair Callan. Patronage authority was a matter of periodic tension, insiders subsequently related.

If only Dan Lynch of Omaha is elected of the trio of Democratic congressional bidders, the locus of the Nebraska Democratic Party may move even more openly to Douglas County.

Solitary election of Hess Dyas would give Democrats not altogether satisfied with the Exon brand of signal calling a new champion. Dyas as Rep. Dyas would provide the same function for many Democrats as would the defeat of Thorne or McCollister for Republicans — unlocking of now-restrictive, restrained party forces.

Some Republican topiders believe the GOP mix is apt to have a new flavor with just the single addition of Paul Douglas, as attorney general, to the party's council. The question is whether Douglas can surmount the lingering appeal to voters of the name Morrison and Exon costlessly extended from Rulo to Harrison.

Enough supposin'. Facts, instead of fairy tales, start becoming available shortly after 8 p.m. Tuesday.

RUSSELL BAKER

Elections Are a Dangerous Institution

Elections are probably the most dangerous part of democracy. I say "probably" because a very strong case can also be made for the jury system, which puts a person's fate in the hands of 12 people anxious to be shed of a nuisance in time to get home before dinner. However, I suspect elections are even worse because the fates of whole cities, states and countries are apt to be settled even more cavalierly than a defendant's hash.

Before I understood politics and government, I used to vote regularly. Never missed an election. We were taught in school that every citizen has a duty to vote whether he knows what he's voting for or not, and I believed it.

So I would go to the polls regularly and vote against Blodgett, a congressman of many years service whom I disliked because he looked so harrowingly like a congressman of many years service. I also believed in throwing the rascals out, on Will Roger's theory that an experienced politician will know how to steal more than a novice. What's more, I didn't like Blodgett's name.

In successive elections I pulled the lever for Hodges, Erdelatz, Pringle and Sharp. Blodgett invariably won. This may or may not have been a blessing, for when I acquired a professional interest in politics I discovered Hodges was a cretin, Erdelatz a jury subverter, Pringle a Mafia lawyer and Sharp an illiterate.

Blodgett, I discovered, was a decent but dull political hack without dangerous ambition, content to get the gravy for his home district to the enrichment of several not entirely unworthy contractors.

I am no longer prepared to say any of his opponents would have been a better choice than Blodgett, although it would certainly be painful to have to come down on Blodgett's side.

For the well-informed, elections invariably present this dilemma, and for this reason to be well informed is to be tempted not to vote at all. Most elections are decided by the massively uninformed. So that, when there are genuine alternatives, the outcome is a whimsical as in a Russian roulette.

It is entirely likely, for example, that Richard Nixon would have been elected president in 1960 if he had been five pounds heavier, had had a decent makeup job and had not sweated during his first TV performance opposite Kennedy.

The quixotic nature of the whole business is compounded when you go in to vote against Blodgett and find dozens of other names listed against dozens of other offices. Two people named Sizemore and Whipple are running for councilman; Gaines and Pepper are up for sheriff; McIntyre and Sakuma, for judge; Dill and Berger for state senator; and six people named Edgeware, Moses, Brand, Carter, Pock and Simsbury, for the legislature.

Who has had time to inform himself about the relative merits of Dill and Berger, Gaines and Pepper, Sizemore and Whipple? You can either keep up with football or spend your life studying voting records in the legislature. Not both.

So you stand in the booth pulling levers like a blind man firing shotguns in a crowded street. It is a miracle democracy works at all, considering how often elections are held.

In the old days, when parties meant something, the danger was reduced by voter willingness to vote the party line. For its own survival, the party had an interest in keeping at least the worst of the dregs off the ballot.

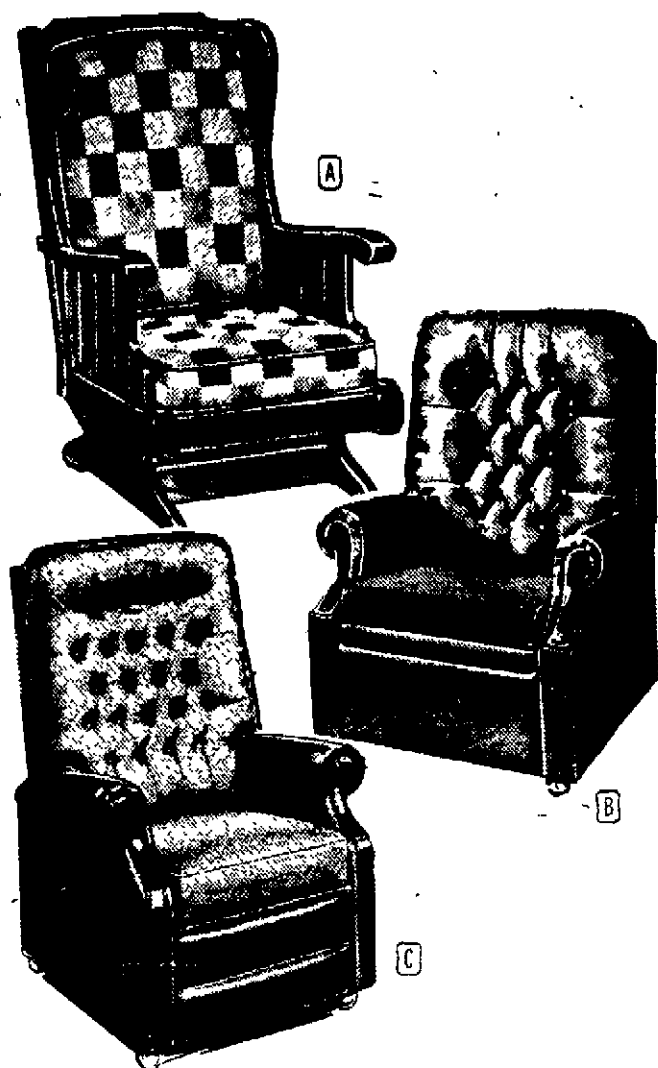

Nowadays when everyone prides himself on independence of party, this control is weakening. The parties, as a result, look for people who might have some quixotic appeal to the massively uninformed, such as a name easy to remember, a cool look on television or good dental caps, and count themselves lucky if one or two turn out to be competent, honest and bright enough to tell the courthouse from the state capital.

Elections are a dangerous institution, and we ought to quit deceiving ourselves with myths about their beneficence. If there is a small turnout this Tuesday, as forecast, it may reflect a healthy new humility among voters. If that is one of the consequences of Watergate, Watergate will not have been all disaster.

The lesson of the Nixon landslide of 1972 — to wit, that a vote can be a dangerous weapon — ought to persuade everybody to think twice before using it. After the inevitable carnage, those who have treated the election with the awe it deserves can crow on their bumper stickers, "Don't blame me — I didn't vote."

Trick, Treat. Poison Candy Source Sought

PASADENA, Tex. (AP) — Police questioned residents of a middle-class suburban neighborhood Saturday trying to find the source of five poisonous candies that turned up in Halloween treats, killing one 8-year-old boy.

"We've still got to pinpoint the exact location where the children were trick-or-treating," said Capt. R.E. Rhodes of the police department of this Houston suburb.

Police said cyanide crystals in a plastic tube of powdered candy killed Timothy O'Bryan of nearby Deer Park, Tex.

Pasadena detective David Mulligan said the other poisoned candy was given to children who were not in a group of five children trick-or-treating with O'Bryan.

Rhodes said the dead boy's father, Ronald O'Bryan, was helping officers trying to pinpoint the exact houses visited in the Bowling Green subdivision here.

"He's still in a state of shock," Rhodes said. "We hope that today or tomorrow, things will start coming back to him."

The father, fighting tears, told reporters how his son began vomiting immediately after eating the candy, then became limp in his arms.

"I never even really thought it might have been poisoned candy until the police told me about the cyanide..." O'Bryan, an optician, said.

O'Bryan said he accompanied five children on their Halloween night rounds of what a Pasadena police officer termed "a real nice neighborhood with a lot of new homes."

Police said there are 48 homes in the subdivision and they were questioning homeowners in each one. "There are still a couple of people we haven't talked with yet," Rhodes said.

Harris County Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk said the cyanide in the candy "will kill you within an hour. It's a very deadly drug. That's why they used it in the gas chamber."

Jachimczyk said the poison may have been sodium cyanide.

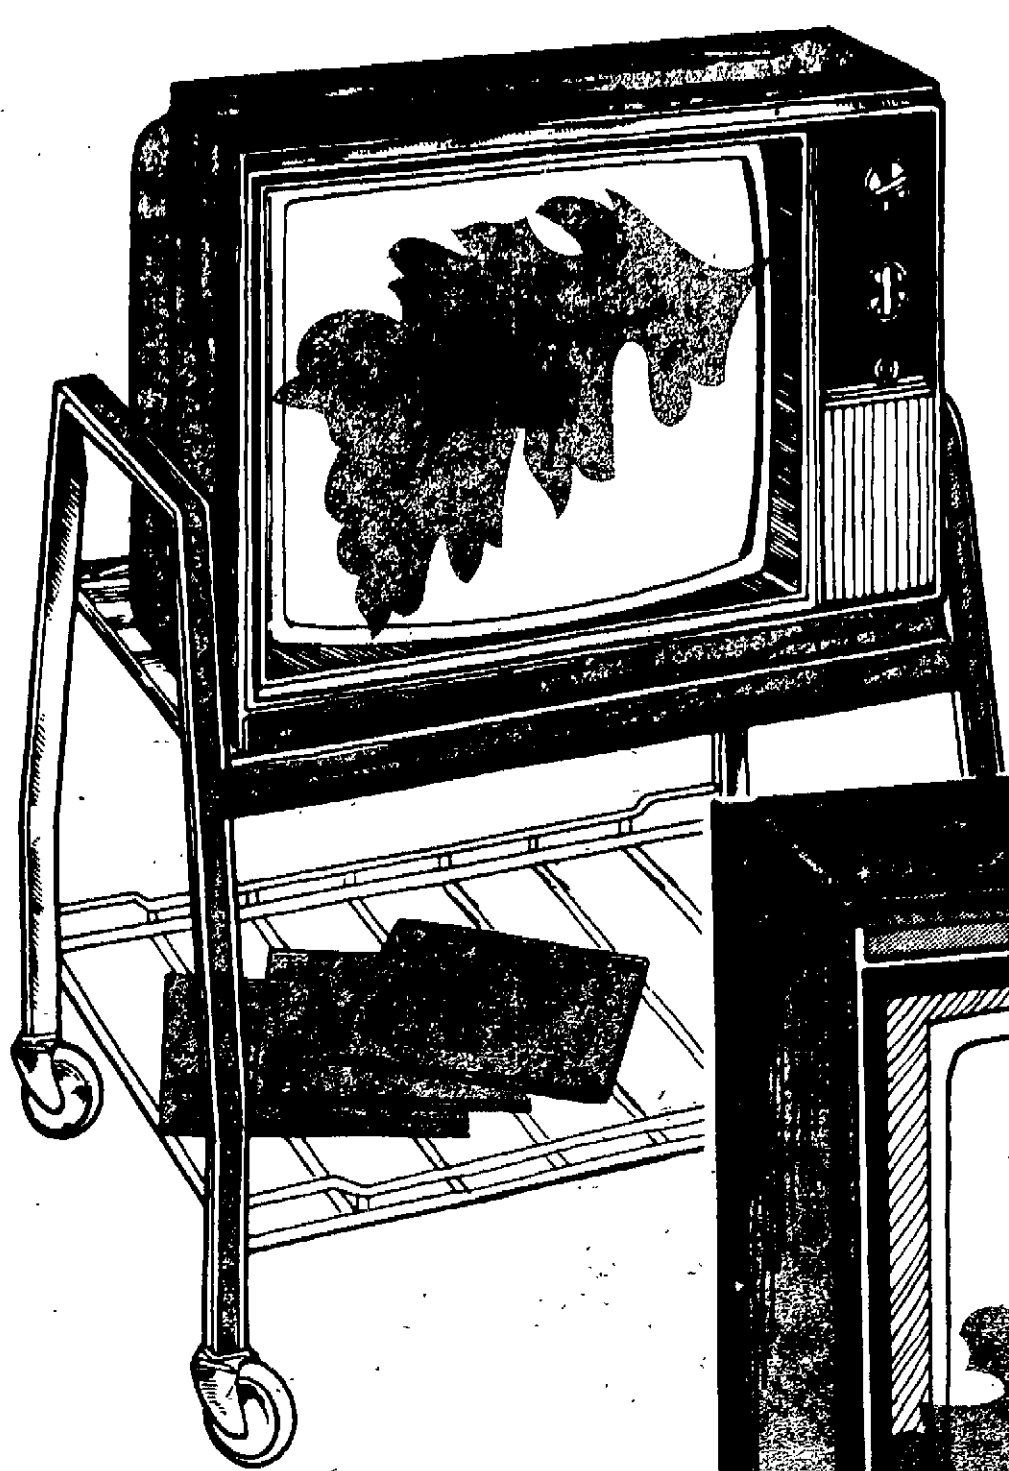

Peter Christian, a Houston police chemist, said sodium cyanide is a common chemical used in many processes and can be found in most university chemical laboratories and in most chemical plants.

He said it is not a controlled substance and is not illegal for a person to possess.

Most of the residents of the area were incredulous about the event.

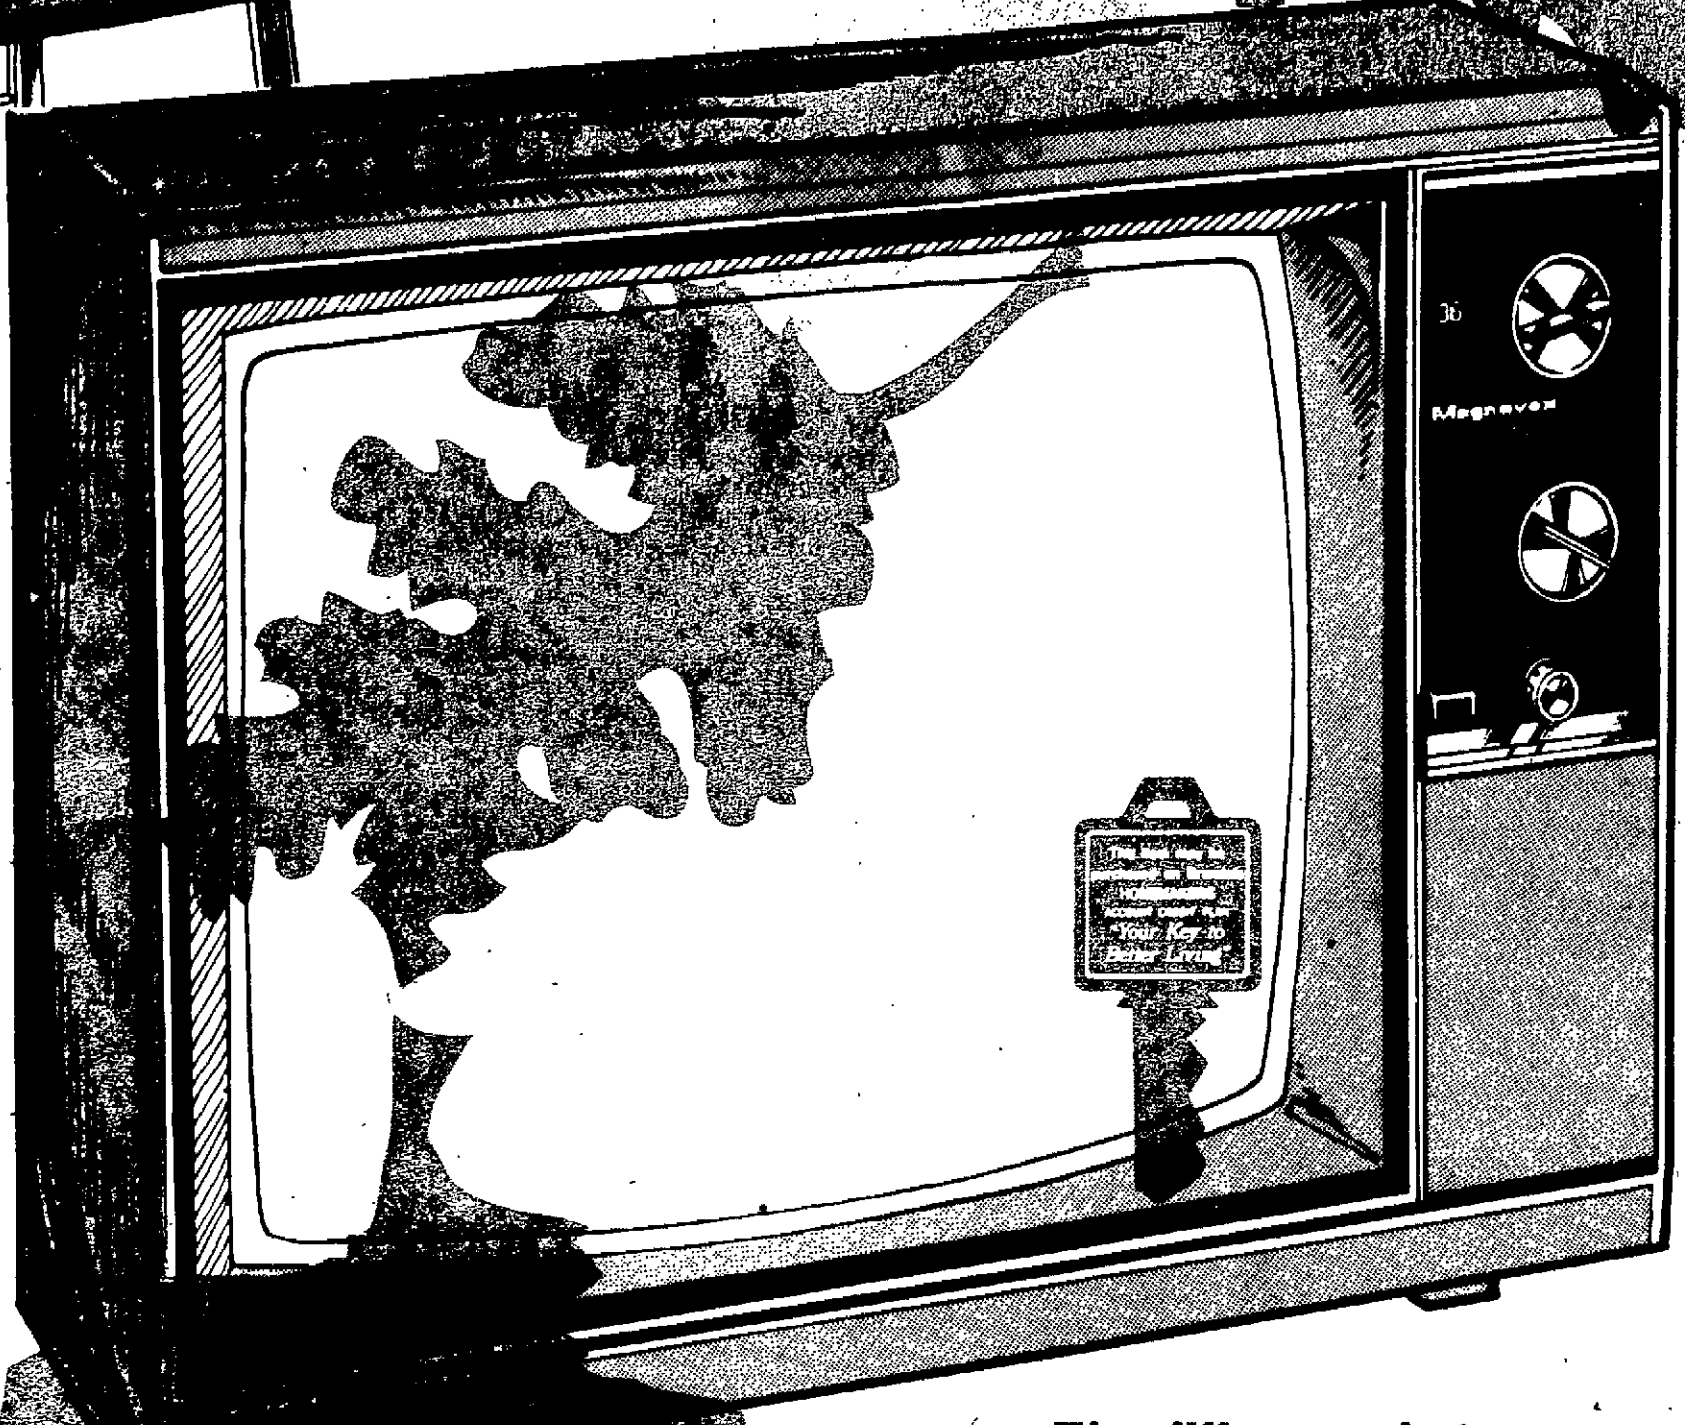

Mrs. Linda Smedley, 23, said the dead child called at her house for treats.

"My kids will never go trick-or-treating again," she said. "I can't believe it would happen in a nice neighborhood like this one."

Juan Guzman

3 Chickens Mother Wants Bartered Happy

Newark, N.J. (UPI) — The mother of Juan Guzman, 14, who was bartered to a Delaware family for three chickens, says she wants her son to stay where he's happy.

Mrs. Maria Guzman said last week she "would rather have him happy with the people on the farm than be unhappy with us in Newark."

"I can't handle my son," she said. "He's too tough for me and he doesn't respect me."

State police in Delaware say the boy was bartered by an unidentified woman to the David Wilkinson family of Felton, Del., who gave the woman three chickens in return.

Disposition of the boy, who was taken into custody last week by Delaware police as a runaway from a Belleville Children's Home, will be determined Monday at a hearing in Delaware.

Fail to Seal Lid Issue Angers Canners

Washington (UPI) — The home canning season has almost ended, but complaints about food lost or spoiled because jar lids failed to seal properly are still pouring in.

Presidential consumer adviser Virginia Knauer's office has gotten more mail on the lid issue than on the shortage of canning equipment itself, another major home canning problem this fall.

Most of the complaints are about Kerr lids, although some letter writers named lids made by Ball. Most of the writers describe themselves as veteran canners and say they have never had such trouble before.

The Kerr Co. contends the problem is isolated to a few regions of the country — particularly the Pacific Northwest — and is caused by failure to tighten the screw ring atop the jar.

Kerr issued a press release advising canners to "immediately after hot jars are removed from canner, use a cloth or rubber gloves and tighten screwbands again as much as possible manually." The company also used radio commercials in the Northwest to spread the same word.

Mrs. Knauer's office is not convinced the problem is solely a matter of poor canning technique. Some of her staff members suspect a bad batch of lids got out somewhere, as evidenced by the fact that the problem was particularly severe in one part of the country.

Both Mrs. Knauer's staff and the Consumer Product Safety Commission are investigating the complaints.

The safety commission, however, does not believe it will take any action since the problem is not a dangerous one — the food will spoil or fail to can, but it is not going to result in the type of deadly food poisoning that develops in air-tight containers.

Marsupial Headed for Nebraska?

Kangaroo Seen 40 Miles From Chicago

Plano, Ill. (UPI) — It was one of those routine nights for patrolman John Orr, except that he almost ran over a kangaroo.

The kangaroo bounded from a cornfield as Orr, who happened to be off duty Friday night, was driving down Riverview Road.

"I'm positive I saw him," Orr said Saturday. "People don't believe you when you see things like that. I definitely know it was a kangaroo."

Newspaper readers and television viewers, aware of the kangaroo's normal down-under habitat, would have to assume that this cornfield-haunting marsupial is none other than the one which has eluded Chicago police and other "bring 'em back alive" kangaroo stalkers for more than two weeks.

"If I hadn't slowed down, I would have hit him. My cousin was in the car behind me and when she saw him, she just plain ran off the road," Orr said.

The kangaroo paused in the middle of the road momentarily, then hopped into some woods and leap-by-leap gradually moved out of sight, heading in the direction of a Boy Scout camp, Orr said.

He said the kangaroo was at least five feet tall and had a tail about two or three feet long.

"I was in a small car, so he looked pretty big from my angle," Orr said.

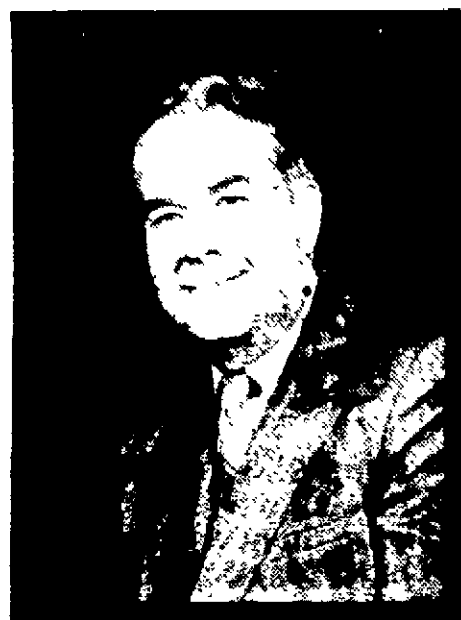

He filed a report on the sighting with Kendall County officials, who dispatched kangaroo searchers throughout this farm area.

Plano is 40 miles southwest of Chicago where a kangaroo was last seen in a northwest side neighborhood on Oct. 16. A day earlier, two policemen tried and failed to handcuff the animal, but the kangaroo punched one of them and got away.

The big questions about the cagey kangaroo are:

Who does he belong to? Where does it come from?

No zoos in the area claim him and no one has reported a missing marsupial report.

Spirit of '74: Negative, Contentious

Los Angeles — The spirit of the times finds perfect expression in the elections this year. It is a negative spirit, marked by captious contentiousness.

It favors purification of the political system without address to the hard questions of how to make the system deal effectively with economic and social troubles. The '74 elections, as a result, have much more to do with holding office than with governing the country.

The best evidence of what's afoot comes from the political stars of 1974 — Jerry Brown, 36-year-old Democrat who looks like the next governor of California; Hugh Carey, Democratic congressman from Brooklyn who seems on the way to the statehouse in New York; and John Glenn, former astronaut who seems sure to win election as Democratic senator from Ohio. In different ways all of them come on as anti-party independents visibly cut off from regular party institutions.

Brown, son of former Gov. Pat Brown, hails from the heart of the liberal Democratic establishment in California. But he has broken with the labor unions, treated minorities coolly, and taken right-wing positions on crime and public spending. He frequently echoes George Wallace in talking about "sending a message to Washington." In a highly revealing comment to Dan Blackburn of CBS News here, Brown once likened his own campaign against Houston Flournoy to the campaign of the citizen politician who beat his father back in 1966. "Hugh Flournoy is the Pat Brown of this election," Jerry Brown said. "I'm the Ronald Reagan."

The hot issues dovetail perfectly with the symbolic candidates. Campaign spending, thanks to Watergate and the largesse of Nelson Rockefeller, is probably the topic with the sharpest cutting edge.

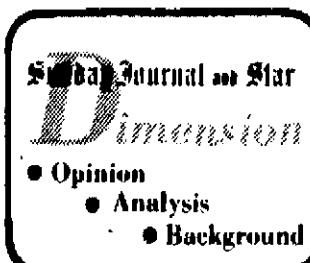

The color of their money has meant trouble for Jacob Javits, veteran Republican senator from New York who otherwise would have won easy reelection over Ramsey Clark: Peter Dominick, Republican senator from Colorado who may lose his seat to Gary Hart; and many others.

Inflation — probably the matter most on people's minds — seems to cut only as it tends to reinforce judgment about personality. The issue is so large that it becomes manageable chiefly as an index of personal integrity. Thus Sen. Birch Bayh, Indiana Democrat, is likely to hold his seat largely because he was able to show the "bit spender" charges leveled against him by Mayor Richard Lugar of Indianapolis come from a candidate who is himself no small spender.

Perhaps this is all very meaningful. If the country's troubles are mainly due to amoral political hacks who have been too long in office thanks to unfair campaign financing arrangements, then some big improvements are in the works.

But I doubt it. The true difficulty, I suspect, is that the problems confronting the country are intrinsically hard to happen in 1976. My sense, on the contrary, is that 1974 is mainly a year of motion without progress. Perhaps the best we can hope for is that the critical, captious spirit of '74 will play itself out a little.

1974 Races for Senate, House, Governor

Gubernatorial Races Democrats Eye Control in Biggest States

Washington (UPI) — Democrats stand a good chance to defeat Republicans in gubernatorial races in California, New York, Michigan and Massachusetts — which would give them control in the country's 10 biggest states.

Republicans hope to pick up new seats in Maine, Alaska and South Carolina.

The Democrats now hold 32 governorships, including 6 of the 10 most populous states.

In Pennsylvania, Texas, Ohio, and Florida, Democratic incumbents are expected to win reelection. The Democrats in Illinois and New Jersey are not up for reelection this year.

If Democrats can control the top 10 state houses, the state parties would have enormous patronage and political clout, and the national party would be stronger in the 1976 presidential sweepstakes.

There are 35 gubernatorial seats at stake in Tuesday's elections — 23 Democrats and 12 Republicans. The "Big Four" got heavy attention:

—California: Edmund (Jerry) Brown is favored to win back the state house for the Democrats after eight years of Gov. Ronald Reagan. Brown, the secretary of state, is considered to be leading Republican Houston Flournoy, 44, state controller.

—New York: Seven-term Rep. Hugh Carey, is favored to return Democratic control to Albany after 15 years of GOP rule under Nelson Rockefeller. Gov. Malcolm Wilson, who served in Rockefeller's shadow as lieutenant governor, is the acknowledged underdog.

—Michigan: GOP Gov. William Milliken is in a close race for a second four-year term in a heavily Democratic state against Sander Levin, who lost to Milliken in 1970 by 44,000 votes. The race is complicated by the candidacy of Zoltan Ferency of the Human Rights party.

—Massachusetts: Gov. Francis Sargent, a liberal Republican in a heavily Democratic state — the only one that supported Sen. George McGovern in 1972 — faces a strong bid by former State Rep. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat who is leading in the polls.

Ford Has Most at Stake?

Washington (UPI) — President Ford has more at stake in Tuesday's elections than any candidate running for office.

His prestige, career, and administration are involved, even though his job is not. That may explain his campaign barnstorming.

Day by day, for the next two years, Ford will have to deal with the Congress elected Tuesday. It is not a pleasant prospect for a president who has no mandate from the people on his own.

The outlook is for Democrats to increase majorities in both Senate and House. The size of those majorities may determine the shape and fate of anti-inflation, anti-recession, anti tax loophole and other major legislation before the 94th Congress.

The behind-the-scenes story on health care reform indicates the stakes involved.

Health care legislation was caught in a three-way battle this term. The Nixon administration favored health care insurance which was administered by private companies and paid for by employers and workers.

Organized labor supported comprehensive national health insurance through the Social Security system.

The American Medical Assn. backed tax breaks for those who could pay for health insurance and government subsidies for those who couldn't.

In his first message to Congress, Ford asked for a health care bill before final adjournment. The sides could not agree and the last Congress had only a stalemate.

If the makeup of the next Congress is pretty much the same, the stalemate could continue. Supporters of national health insurance are counting on an influx of Democrats to put their proposal over in the next Congress.

The veto is another example of what is at stake. In three weeks of campaigning which will include 19 states, Ford appealed to the voters not to send a "veto-proof Congress" to Washington and upset the checks and balance system.

Vetoes are not decided in Congress by party votes. More often than not, there is a substantial crossover. There has to be for a veto to be overridden. Most vetoes are decided on liberals versus conservatives.

To the extent that more Democrats vote liberal, Tuesday's election could affect the veto confrontations sure to come in the next Congress.

If Ford runs for president in 1976, as he expects, he will need Republican governors to provide the political base for a successful bid.

Republicans are currently expected to lose their hold on powerhouse states such as California and New York and possibly Massachusetts and Michigan as well.

If that happens, the Democrats would control the nation's 10 most populous states.

Ford's prestige is involved because of his campaigning. Some argue the best politics for a President in a mid-term election is to do his best and stay out of the campaigns.

But Ford decided to intervene directly because Republican apathy was threatening many GOP candidates with defeat. He put his prestige and ability as a campaigner on the line in the hope of cutting Republican losses.

Strauss Doubts Ford Campaigning Helped

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Despite the stridency of his pre-election rhetoric as he roars across the nation to stem the expected Democratic tide, President Ford has preserved his own bright image, according to Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss.

"There is only a question of his judgment, as personified in the timing of the Nixon pardon and the language of his campaign speeches," Strauss told a meeting of reporters.

"Otherwise, Gerald Ford has done nothing to take away from his image as a nice guy."

But Strauss added that he doubts the presidential campaigning, which will have covered 20 states by election time, has helped Ford or Republicans in the eyes of the American public.

"If there was a threat at a Republican National Convention, he would have done himself some good, speaking to Republicans exclusively," Strauss said.

"I suppose that if we get a great big majority in both houses of Congress and President Ford starts right away on January 1 to blame us Democrats for all his own mistakes, and tells the Republicans he told them so, he will benefit himself somewhat."

"That's why I say we

More Women Running

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Women candidates for Congress must pull off a chain of upsets if they are going to increase their numbers on Capitol Hill — even though more women are running than ever before.

With four women retiring from the House of Representatives, most predictions point to a break-even year for female candidates, leaving the total number of congresswomen at 16. If every race falls into the women's column, they could have a net gain of six seats in the House.

Demo Gains Seen in House

Washington (UPI) — Speaker Carl Albert expressed genuine concern when polls indicated in the darkest days of Watergate that his Democratic party might pick up 50 or more U.S. House of Representative seats in November.

"It could be the end of a strong two-party system in this country and I don't want that," said the titular head of congressional Democrats.

"Besides," he smiled, "what would I do about committee assignments for 300 or more Democrats?"

It would appear, as the Nov. 5 vote casting draws near, Albert will not have that problem. Democratic observers now guess that after they've won a lot and lost a few the net party gain in House seats will settle at about 20.

One ostute Republican official, declining to be quoted, said: "At best our loss will be in the teens. At the worst, about 35."

Even a 35-seat turnover in favor of Democrats, who now hold a 248-187 majority in the 435-member House, would not be a landslide victory and would fall short of the 291 votes needed for the statistically "veto-proof" Congress against which President Ford and other Republicans have warned.

It takes two-thirds of those voting in each house to override a veto, which has happened once to Ford out of the eight vetoes he has cast in his less than three months in office.

"Off-year" elections for Congress — between those in which presidents are picked — traditionally work against the party controlling the White House. In the last six mid-term elections since 1950, the average such turnover in House seats has been 25. In the last three it has averaged 21. In 1966, during Lyndon Johnson's last term, Democrats lost 47 House seats.

GOP and Democratic strategists agreed in separate off the record briefings that Republican losses, ranging from one to three seats each, will come in California, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois.

Democrats added Oregon,

Nevada and Nebraska as potential seat gaining states, while the Republicans said they have a good chance of picking up one Democratic seat each in Kansas, Michigan, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, Utah and Washington.

This year a record number of incumbent House members — 28 Democrats and 24 Republicans, a total of 52 — are either retiring, have been defeated in primary elections or are running for other office.

That means newcomers in both parties will be vying in races that for the most part must be rated a tossup.

On the other hand, 61 Democrats and one Republican, Rep. Charles Whalen Jr. of Ohio, have no major party opposition and are certain of reelection.

As to the issues, unlike the five special elections earlier this year, when Democrats won longtime Republican seats and Richard Nixon and Watergate were the main targets, Democrats and Republicans now are hammering on inflation and the energy crisis.

Demo Senate Edge Foreseen

Washington (UPI) — After the 1936 elections, there were so many Democrats in the Senate that some of them had to sit in a row of seats called the "Cherokee Strip" on the Republican side of the chamber.

No one expects a repeat of 1936 this year. The Democrats are not going to have 75 senators after the Nov. 5 election.

But everyone, Republicans included, anticipate the Democrats will tighten their control over the Senate — an unbroken dominance that now spans 20 years.

Going into the elections, the Democrats hold a 58-42 edge.

New York's James Buckley, a conservative party member, lines up with the GOP and Virginia's Harry Byrd, an independent, with the Democrats.

While everyone expects the Democrats to add to their margin, the speculation runs anywhere from two to eight, with the common denominator four or five.

Six GOP incumbents are in deep danger of defeat. They are Sens. Peter Dominick of Kansas, Marlow Cook of Kentucky, Jacob Javits of New York, Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma and Milton Young of North Dakota.

In addition, the retirements of Sens. George Aiken of Vermont, Norris Cotton of New Hampshire, and Wallace Bennett of Utah cost the GOP three premier vote getters.

Of the 34 Senate seats at stake, 20 are held by Democrats and 14 by Republicans, which on the surface would give the GOP more targets.

But included in the 20 are Democratic seats in Southern states such as Alabama, North Carolina, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Georgia, where the Republicans have no chance.

And outside the South, the Democrats are fielding such entrenched and seemingly unbeatable veterans as Sens. Warren Magnuson of Washington, Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, and Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin.

That leaves the Republicans with slim pickings.

Their best bets to pick up Democratic seats are probably in Alaska, where the GOP's C. R. Lewis is challenging Sen. Mike Gravel; Nevada, where Sen. Alan Bible is retiring and the Republicans are going with former Gov. Paul Laxalt against Lt. Gov. Harry Reid, and Iowa, where Republican David Stanley is going against Rep. John Culver for the seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Harold Hughes.

We Support MARGE SCHLITT for 28th DISTRICT LEGISLATURE

MARGE SCHLITT is "a candidate of competence with well considered opinions on issues which often cause politicians to straddle fences".

Editorial, Lincoln Journal Oct. 29, 1974

MARGE SCHLITT "would provide a voice and a vote for comprehensive land use legislation, tax law changes, stricter regulation of lobbyists and broadened open meeting requirements."

Editorial, Lincoln Journal Oct. 29, 1974

As the Journal suggests, if Marge is elected, she'll take the lead on some matters of great importance. We believe Marge should be elected by the voters of the 28th District.

Democrats have a job to do, and we have been making preparations for doing it."

Ford has been criticized by many Democrats — Strauss included — for his statements equating a Republican victory at the polls Tuesday with the preservation of peace. But at the breakfast last week with newsmen, Strauss dismissed it lightly.

"It was an error in judgment on the part of the President," Strauss said. "I don't think that crack in itself did him any good with the American people as a whole — the Republicans maybe, but not the entire population."

Strauss disclosed the Democratic hierarchy — including the leadership of Congress — has met with representatives, of, business, labor, industry and farmers to formulate a program for 1975, and hopefully for the next presidential election in 1976

Strauss said Tuesday's election should produce healthy dition of at least three new faces: Democrat Gladys Spellman in Maryland and Republican Millicent Fenwick and Democrat Helen Meyner in New Jersey.

Congressional Quarterly rates four other races involving women as toss-ups, and other seasoned observers see three more female candidates with a chance for victory for an outside total of 10, a net gain of six.

There are 44 women running for the House and three for the Senate this year. They include "Quaker grandmother" Helen Bliss in New Hampshire; a Black Muslim Republican, Mildred Morris, running against Rep. Henry Reuss in Wisconsin; lawyer Nina Mighonico, rated as a strong possibility to oust conservative Republican John Buchanan in Birmingham, Ala.; and Arline Mathews, who lead meat boycotters in California and now wants voters to turn away from Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr.

Thirty of the women candidates — including most of the incumbents — are Democrats, 14 are Republicans. Only two of the GOP women, Reps. Marjorie Holt of Maryland and Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts, are expected to win. Fenwick, a state consumer official and former Vogue editor despite being a high school dropout, is given a strong nod in Rep. Peter Frelinghuysen's old district.

Two other Republican women are given outside chances. Virginia Smith, who is a former director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, in Nebraska, and Judy Petty, a former Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller aide, who is up against well-entrenched Wilbur Mills in Arkansas.

That race largely depends on whether voters have been offended by illegal contributions to Mills's campaign by milk producers or by his recent escapades with an Argentine go-go dancer.

On the Democratic side, all the incumbents seeking reelection are expected to return, including Patricia Schroeder of Colorado, who earlier was viewed as in some trouble against an anti-busing candidate in Denver.

Democratic gains in Congress and gubernatorial mansions across the nation, and blamed "alienation" for the anticipated light vote.

Regardless of the number who go to the polls, he said, 90% of the American people will be under Democratic leadership Wednesday morning, Strauss said.

"The problem of the Republicans goes back to Watergate and Nixon, and the Republicans had serious recruiting problems," he said. "The average person has no idea how many good Republicans did not run for office this year because of Nixon and Watergate. Man, they had problems getting people to fill spots on their slates."

"We have everything from Eskimos to Irishmen, and it is going to show up in gains of 27-31 in the House, 7-9 governors' mansions and 4-6 in the Senate."

By United Press International
From casino gambling on the Jersey shore to porno shops in Oregon, a broad range of ballot questions and constitutional amendments will be decided by voters across the country Tuesday.

Some of the referenda are provoking major political battles. One such is the New Jersey proposition that would legalize casino gambling in the state.

If the referendum succeeds, New Jersey would join Nevada in competition for the money of high rollers. Opponents claim legal gambling would bring organized crime flocking to skim the profits.

Backers of the proposition say it is the sure way to revitalize the sagging Jersey shore resort industry, of which Atlantic City is the prime example.

Gambling questions also are on several other state ballots.

In Washington, the voters will act on a proposed law setting up the first state lottery west of the Mississippi. They repealed a constitutional ban on lotteries two years ago; this vote deals with the details of a lottery. The matter went to referendum when the governor vetoed a lottery bill passed by the legislature.

Legal bingo is the question in Kansas and South Carolina.

In Oregon, the trend is counter-permissive. Voters there will decide whether to outlaw stores selling pornographic materials and massage parlors offering sexual stimulation. At present, the porno shops are legal for adult trade.

Colorado has a hot contest over requiring a vote of the people before anyone could set off underground nuclear devices to release natural gas. The state already has had two such tests, but opponents say it will take half a million to get all the gas beneath Colorado. Supporters argue that the experiments are made necessary by the energy shortage.

Arizona and Michigan have questions on removing sales taxes on food and medicine; Michigan voters will decide whether to pay a $450-$600 bonus to Vietnam-era vets.

Connecticut and New Hampshire voters will decide on state constitutional changes outlawing discrimination based on sex; California will decide whether to revise its constitution to eliminate masculine references in favor of words of neutral gender.

Californians will vote on a proposition seeking to block construction of a huge dam on the Stanislaus River which would wipe out a famous white-water stretch used by raft enthusiasts.

Virginia and Georgia have Sunday "blue law" questions on their ballots, either statewide or in certain localities. Approval would permit retail stores to operate on Sundays.

Maryland voters will decide whether to raise their governor's salary from the present $25,000 to $45,000.

Massachusetts will decide whether to establish a state corrupt practices commission to police campaign finance laws and Missouri will vote on a campaign finance reform measure.

In Oregon, voters will decide whether to require the legislature to hold open meetings

And finally, Georgians will decide whether to offer a $250-

000 bounty to the first company to establish a plant in the state to process aluminum from kaolin mined in Georgia. Kaolin, also called China clay, is a fine-textured clay that has an aluminum silicate component.

THONE WORKS!

Charley Thone has a proven record of accomplishments in many areas. He has been Deputy Nebraska Secretary of State, Assistant State Attorney General, Assistant U.S. District Attorney, and as a very successful attorney in private practice was elected by fellow lawyers to a six-year term on the Nebraska Supreme Court Judicial Nominating Commission. Since 1971, he has compiled an even more successful record as your Representative in Washington. Last year he took part in 99.4 percent of the recorded action on the floor of the House of Representatives, while still maintaining close contact with the people of his district. His record shows he is not a straight party line voter. On each bill he says he "considers only my conscience and the good of all Nebraskans." He is his own man! In less than four years in Congress, Charley Thone has taken positions on all kinds of issues—some 1,736 votes. And he communicates with you about his views and votes. You know where Thone stands! On this page are capsules of some of his positions and accomplishments. Charley Thone deserves your support—because you can trust Thone!

AGRICULTURE. Agriculture so dominates the economy of Nebraska's First Congressional District that every citizen in it benefits when farmers do well. In his second term, Charley Thone became the first Nebraskan in six years to serve on the House Agriculture Committee. His effectiveness there was shown by his being picked as one of five members from the 37-member committee to write new legislation to control trading in agriculture commodities. He had less seniority than any other member picked. The trading in commodity futures exceeds the dollar volume of shares traded in all American corporations, and Charley Thone helped draft legislation to prevent speculators from having an adverse effect on prices farmers receive for their crops.

Charley Thone has been cited by a national conservation organization for his "leading role" in legislation to restore and amply fund America's program to protect and preserve our precious land and water resources. There are 435 Congressional districts. Thirty percent of the watershed projects in the nation funded last year in Congress were in Nebraska's First Congressional District!

Charley's position on the House Agriculture Committee not only makes possible Nebraska input into farm legislation but also gives him clout in seeing to it that U.S. Department of Agriculture officials don't give Nebraskans any bureaucratic shuffles.

Charley Thone's voice has been a strong one in consistently and persistently reminding the President and the Congress that improved farm prices are needed to insure abundant food for America and for sale overseas to aid the U.S. balance of payments.

You can trust Thone to continue to work hard and effectively to bring stability to Nebraska agriculture.

EDUCATION. As a Life Member of the Nebraska Parent-Teacher Association and past president of the Holmes School (Lincoln) PTA, Charley Thone believes that America can make no better investment than in education at all levels. Congressman Thone worked and voted for the Elementary and Secondary Education Act amendments of 1974 which not only provides more money nationally than ever before for education but also gives Nebraska school districts a larger share of funding.

Charley Thone voted for the $21.3 billion Higher Education Act which provides direct aid to colleges and universities and grants to needy students.

He is the sponsor of a bill to call a White House Conference on Education to focus attention on America's educational needs. He has introduced two bills that would provide tax relief for parents' costs in educating their children. He voted for the GI bill, giving improved benefits for the cost of veterans' education and their living costs while in school.

To counsel him on legislation and projects, Charley Thone has a 23-member educational advisory board, composed of interested lay people, administrators, specialists in particular fields of education and instructors at the elementary, secondary and post-secondary levels. Thone cares about education!

ELECTION REFORM. Charley Thone was a co-sponsor of a much tougher election reform bill than the one that passed Congress in 1974. He fought to put more teeth into this bill. He is setting a personal example on campaign financing. He is refusing funds from any political action or special interest groups. He is accepting contributions only from his party and from individuals—and then limiting it to $100 from any person in 1974.

ELDERLY. The 11 percent increase in all Social Security benefits in 1974 was supported by Congressman Thone. He also worked and voted for the new provision that will provide Social Security benefits increases equal to cost-of-living increases in 1975 and succeeding years. Charley introduced legislation to raise the ceiling on the amount of money retired persons can earn without jeopardizing their Social Security benefits. Congressman Thone in 1974 announced plans for new housing for the elderly in many communities in the district. He supports programs that will keep senior citizens independent and out of nursing homes.

WELFARE REFORM. Since coming to Congress, Congressman Thone has been pushing for a crackdown on welfare cheaters. At last, the federal government has adopted such a program. Charley also voted for a welfare program which would have placed emphasis on work by the able bodied and would have ended the present situation where some welfare recipients can't afford to take a job.

CONGRESSIONAL REFORM. Congressman Thone was one of the introducers of the bill that passed giving Congress a budget-making procedure for the first time. Up until now, Congress incredibly has acted on each spending and revenue-producing bill separately, with no regard as to these measures effect on the overall budget balance.

He has worked to try to get the House of Representatives to reform its archaic committee system. He opposes having seniority as the only criterion for choosing Congressional committee chairmen. Charley has never voted for a closed session of any House committee or subcommittee on which he serves.

Congressman Thone has worked and voted for measures to recapture Congressional powers lost to the Executive branch. Examples are his votes for the War Powers bill which restricts Presidential commitment of military forces, for restrictions of the use of executive privilege and for Senate confirmation of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

SECURITY IN GOVERNMENT. Thone amendments to the Freedom of Information Act have required federal advisory commissions and committees to hold public meetings and keep public records. He has authorized legislation to make it easier for the public to obtain federal records. Charley persuaded the Justice Department to require states and local governments receiving grants to hold public meetings and keep public records about decisions to disperse those funds. He states that there is no more efficient ally of corruption than secrecy. Our public affairs must be open to full public scrutiny on every level of government, Thone firmly believes.

RIGHT TO PRIVACY. Congressman Thone helped write a bill which has passed the House and would protect the privacy of government records. It would forbid federal agencies from unauthorized distribution of information and would allow a citizen to inspect and correct records kept on him.

HELPING INDIANS. All three Indian reservations located in Nebraska are in the First Congressional District. Congressman Thone was instrumental in creating satellite community colleges on each of the reservations so that vocational and post secondary programs could be brought to the people. New modern schools now serve children on two of the three reservations and the third school is under construction. Congressman Thone is working with the two Thurston County reservations for a new medical facility. Charley Thone has aided tribes in their fight to protect their land and water rights from proposed condemnation by the Corps of Engineers.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION. Representative Thone voted for a strong bill to control strip mining operations and require full restoration of land. He voted for strengthening the Alaskan pipeline bill to give more consideration to environmental protection.

HELPING SMALL TOWNS. Charley Thone was one of the first sponsors and has fought for adequate funding of the Rural Development Act. This law can be of major help in giving smaller communities facilities to make them attractive to new industries and to residents. He supported the new housing law which will make funds available to municipalities for community development. He supports revenue sharing which allows federal funds with fewer strings attached in improving local government facilities.

INFLATION. Congressman Thone believes inflation is a complex ill with many causes. He believes, however, that wasteful deficit spending by the federal government is the major cause of inflation. During his nearly four years in Congress, he has voted for cutting the federal budget by many billions of dollars. Now that inflation has become so grim, Charley Thone hopes a majority in Congress will join him in voting for such cuts. He is advocating a $10 billion cut in the federal budget, through selective reductions, re-examination of priorities and more careful scrutiny of proposed new programs.

Charley Thone also advocates an overhaul of federal regulatory agencies. Some agencies originally founded to obtain better prices for consumers seem to be in business now to protect those they were supposed to regulate. For example, after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that shipment of fresh dressed chicken was not subject to Interstate Commerce Commission the average price of shipping it dropped by a third!

PRICE GOUGING. A year ago, Congressman Thone began urging the Federal Trade Commission to investigate price spreads between what the farmer gets for his produce and what is charged at the supermarkets. The FTC began just such an investigation in January. It will soon be completed, and Charley Thone predicts that major indictments will be made for illegal acts in restraint of trade and free competition.

Charley has also urged that the federal government "throw the book" at those oil companies who illegally profited from the oil crisis. After much prodding by Congressman Thone, the Federal Energy Administration has levied fines against some violators, required customer refunds in many cases and is readying many other cases for court action.

FOREIGN AID GIVEAWAYS. Congressman Thone has voted against military and economic foreign aid since first being elected to the Congress. He believes much of the money is wasted and much of it never reaches those for whom it is intended. He has supported, however, special appropriations for the humanitarian relief of suffering people overseas. Most recently, he voted for such appropriations for the people of Nicaragua, Pakistan and the Sahel region of Africa. In September of this year he twice voted to cut off aid to Turkey. When President Ford personally talked with Thone and told him a 60-day extension could be helpful in obtaining a Greek-Turkish settlement of the Cyprus crisis, Charley voted for it. Thone believes foreign aid should be replaced with a series of trade agreements in which the United States would exchange with other nations what they most need in return for goods or services of equal value. Charley has supported the Food for Peace program that transfers U.S. commodities to those suffering famine and he endorses the Agriculture Extension Program which teaches people in other lands better methods of food production.

PENSION REFORM. Congressman Thone was a sponsor of the landmark Employee Retirement Income Security Act, signed into law September 2, 1974. The law insures that those who work for firms with private pension systems will get those pensions even if their employers should go out of business. The act provides that a long-time employee of a company has rights to the money contributed to his pension fund, even if he leaves the firm before retirement. Finally, the law will regulate pension fund investments to protect workers.

TAX REFORM. The last major tax reform bill reported from the Democrat-dominated House Ways and Means Committee was in 1968. Charley Thone has introduced or co-sponsored a score of tax reform measures ranging from extending to unmarried individuals the tax benefits enjoyed by married couples to providing for deductions for day care expenses. Thone believes tax reform legislation must be based on fairness to all. He believes that the present tax shelters and loopholes should be closely reviewed so that the very wealthy cannot avoid paying any tax at all. He believes tax reporting should be simplified and that there should be relief for the middle income group which currently bears the heaviest tax burden.

Man Uses 'Cane With Eyes'

CHICAGO (AP) — A laser cane developed by the Veterans Administration has helped a Vietnam veteran lead such a normal life that his blindness has become almost incidental.

For two years John Williams, 24, has been using a "cane with eyes" — one that sends out low-power, pencil-thin laser beams of infrared light to warn of dropoffs, overhangs and approaching obstacles. The warnings are variously pitched tones and vibrations.

"I took a five-week training course and got the hang of it in about two weeks," said Williams. "It has changed my life, given me more confidence. I can walk faster, even trot across a wide street."

"People take me by the arm when I'm near the edge of an El platform, but I know I'm there. In a way, I find myself now resenting people who want to help me, but I'm always polite and say 'no thanks, I can manage fine.'"

Williams' blindness dates to an April day in 1970 in Vietnam when he was hit while standing in the turret of his tank by the blast of a tree-rigged booby trap.

"When I found out I was blind, my first thought was 'My God, what am I going to do,'" said Williams, formerly of Greenville, Ala. "I was sent to the VA hospital in Washington for five months and gradually started getting over my state of depression."

Hanes, who got acquainted with the laser cane at Hines Veterans Administration Hospital near Chicago, is married, the father of a daughter and a son, and has a family routine much like the neighbors around his South Side home.

Weekdays, he takes a bus, an elevated train and then another bus to a VA research hospital where he is an X-ray darkroom technician. The round-trip is 26 miles.

At home, said Williams, "I mow our lawn — doing it barefooted so I can feel where I've been. I change the oil and sparkplugs of our car. I can do about everything."

Honduran Victims Getting Relief

By Marvin Howe
(c) New York Times

San Pedro, Honduras — Five weeks after a hurricane devastated large areas of this country, the rivers along the northern coast are still swollen, the land is saturated and 30,000 people are reported to be isolated by floodwaters and mud.

But food, medicine and clothing donated by the United States and other countries appears to be reaching the victims with a minimum of loss.

"Relief supplies are going to the people who need them with maybe a 10% shrinkage, which is a good record," says Arthur Flynn, a representative of the League of Red Cross Societies. Flynn recently investigated reports supplies were being hoarded, stolen or sold, and found them false.

The Honduran authorities appealed to the U.S. and other countries recently for helicopters to fly relief supplies to inaccessible areas. The U.S. sent four helicopters after the hurricane struck but pulled them out two weeks ago. Meanwhile, the supplies are getting through to most of the victims by truck and tractor, horse and mule, and canoe.

In the midst of the emergency, there were strong rumors of a government crisis. Foreign Minister Cesar Batres resigned "for personal reasons."

Press accounts linked the political turmoil to the reported mishandling of the relief effort, but informed sources said that the root of the problem was strong opposition from the private sector to the government's plans for economic and social reforms.

Even before the hurricane, Honduras was poorer than every other country in Latin America except Haiti. The chief of state, Gen. Oswaldo Lopez Arellano, heads a mild military regime that rules without a constitution or a congress but permits a relatively free press, political parties and other basic civil rights. He has brought a team of liberal civilian technocrats into the cabinet to draft a national development plan and agrarian reform.

Assessments of the country's losses in the hurricane are staggering. Lt. Col. Eduardo Andino Lopez, coordinator for the permanent council for national emergency, said 8,000 to 10,000 had been killed.

"The devastation is much worse than the Managua earthquake of Christmas 1972 because, in addition to human losses, the country's economy has been crippled," said Fernando Hernandez de Aguiar, a Peruvian economist who is representing the Organization of American States (OAS) here.

A mission sent by the U.S. Agency for International Development visited Honduras from Sept. 29 to Oct. 2 and drafted a grim report on the damages. About 600,000 people, or 20% of the population, had been directly affected by the storm, it said.

Material losses were estimated at $500,000,000, or nearly one-half the gross national product. The destruction included 77% of the banana production, the country's main export, as well as livestock, much of the corn, rice and citrus crops, and roads, bridges, railroad lines and housing.

Stocks Register Solid Gain

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market generally discounted news last week that business conditions were deteriorating amid unchecked inflationary trends to register a solid gain in fairly active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Investors, who had been bombarded with negative news for weeks, found encouragement in reports a crippling nationwide coal strike may be averted, speculation that oil-producing nations may make a small reduction in the prices they have sent rocketing this year, and in declining interest rates.

That news sparked a midweek rally that propelled the Dow Jones industrial average to a gain of 29.09 to 665.28 for the week. Other averages also gained. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 3.76 to 73.88. The NYSE common stock index gained 1.87 to 38.94.

The week's gain was broad, with 1,131 issues advancing and 591 declining, among the 1,987 crossing the tape. The number of stocks reaching new highs for the year totaled 24, up from 20 last week, and 108 reached new lows.

Turnover totaled 78,617,485 shares, compared with 75,178,480 traded last week and 66,714,278 traded during the same week a year ago.

Reports Saudi Arabia may cut oil prices—oil producing nations raised their fourfold this year—ignited a rally Tuesday that pushed the Dow average to a gain of more than 30 points in two days. Although a high Saudi official denied the reports, observers such as analyst Larry Wachtel of Bache & Co., said they thought there was something valid in them. Also, investors took heart from reports the United Mine Workers union and coal producers had made progress toward a new contract that would avert a crippling nationwide strike threatened for Nov. 12.

Banks continued to lower interest rates, which investors found encouraging.

1975 Cars 'Dynamite'

By Dan Miller
(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Detroit's auto makers took their lumps in the marketplace this year, but that hasn't stopped the Motown moguls from trotting out the most exciting stable of new cars in more than a decade.

The energy-crazed atmosphere that settled over the land last winter may have triggered the whole thing, transforming Detroit from a purveyor of chrome-plated land leviathans into a manufacturer of five dynamite cars for 1975.

These five innovative machines come in various shapes and price tags, some sporty, others luxurious. But they share one astounding attribute: They're all small.

For the first time since the early 1960s, Detroit has lavished its innovations and creativity on small cars, not some mammoth sedan destined for a double garage in suburban Gurgling Brook Estates.

Make no mistake: Some of these cars will indeed replace the family land boat docked in the garage. But the captains will find the new small crafts unworthy compared with the liners of old. The full-sized family sedan is still the only auto that can transport the wife and kids, and an aunt or two and a week's supply of luggage along the interstate.

The new cars are urban vehicles, designed to move a handful of people from place to place with a minimum of worry and a maximum of comfort, enjoyment and, above all, style.

In one year, 1975, Detroit has reminded the auto barons of Germany, the country sires of England and the artists of Italy just who invented this business of selling automobiles.

If there were only one car to carry Detroit's banner into battle, it would have to be the Chevrolet Monza 2-plus-2.

The Monza is a work of art, a finely wrought piece of sculpture that gives the impression of motion even when standing still.

Look at the bumpers, narrow swaths of protection that fit as functionally into the front and rear as a plug into an electrical outlet. One clear line of design swoops up from the understated grille past the dual square headlights and wraps around the rear in a tight little package.

Wheat futures were under selling pressure due to near ideal weather for progress in the winter crop and some disappointing export news, primarily in the size of the commitment to India, which fell far short of what many observers were expecting.

Wheat Prices Lower

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat was substantially lower and corn, oats and soybeans were substantially higher last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 5 1/2 to 12c; corn up 1 1/2 to 1 3/4; oats up 4 to 6; and soybeans up 17 to 30 1/2.

Wheat futures were under selling pressure due to near ideal weather for progress in the winter crop and some disappointing export news, primarily in the size of the commitment to India, which fell far short of what many observers were expecting.

Corn and soybeans advanced sharply after Tuesday's rains which interfered with harvesting in both crops. Country selling then slowed up, forcing exporters into the futures market to fulfill earlier commitments.

Exporters were firm enough to their demands to offset effects of ideal harvesting conditions which prevailed from midweek on.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton discusses some of his views on energy.

New Energy Czar on Fuel Saving

Morton Gives Americans Choice: Voluntary or Tough

By Stan Benjamin

Washington (AP) — The President's new energy czar is giving Americans a choice: save gasoline their own voluntary way or save gasoline the government's way by rationing and taxation.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton says the administration will chalk off "benchmarks" for voluntary fuel-saving — and if they are not met, "we'll have to come up with some tougher turkey."

It's tough talk, but Morton says the nation's standard of living and economic health depend on reducing oil imports, and energy saving is the only short-term way to do that.

In an exclusive interview, his first since President Ford gave him the chief role in energy policy, Morton said the removal last Tuesday of Federal Energy Administrator John Sawhill was not because of Sawhill's advocacy of energy conservation, as Sawhill himself seemed to think.

Instead, Morton said, it was because Sawhill was "going it alone," expressing energy policies on his own when Morton and the President wanted unity among all federal agencies on energy issues.

But Sawhill was pressing for immediate mandatory conservation measures, while Morton and Ford want to give voluntary cooperation a chance to work.

If rationing and fuel taxes become necessary, Morton warned, the nation will be stuck with them a long time because it will take years before new U.S. energy supplies can be developed.

Morton was obviously concerned over the criticism that greeted the decision to remove Sawhill, and Morton himself opened the subject at the outset of the interview.

Here are excerpts from the interview, which took place Friday in Morton's office here:

Morton: There seems to be an interpretation of the Sawhill event that leads to a false conclusion that we're really not interested in conservation and are only interested in the supply side. This is not true.

We are very, very much interested in conservation and we see energy saving as, really, the only short-term tool we have to meet this dependency on politically overcharged foreign oil.

The main thrust of what we're trying to do is to bring the entire federal government to bear on this problem, and this is the primary difference in philosophy that we had with the Federal Energy Administration under John (Sawhill).

Q. How did Sawhill differ with you?

A. Well, specifically, I think he was enunciating the policy of the government without clearing it with the administration or the President. It was a sort of portrayal of going it alone, as opposed to trying to unify a total government impact on this problem.

... And this is another thing: We had a running battle going between EPA and FEA and there were these turf battles, and we've got to overcome them and get together.

Q. Then the issue is not whether you have energy conservation, but whether you have voluntary or mandatory conservation?

A. That's right. I don't think the American people understand the problem. We have to get the people to understand that the standard of living and the general well-being of this country and our friends throughout the world who also are consumers depends on reducing our dependence on these very high-priced fuels, which are causing us to transfer wealth out of this country at a rate of $23 billion a year.

And the only short-term way we can do this is through the conservation of fuel. The question is, do we do this by controlling and rationing — either by coupon or by inconvenience such as the Arab embargo produced — or do we do this by self-imposed discipline?

And do we have to nudge that self-discipline by arbitrarily raising the price through taxes?

If the American people will do this, we'll have the least damaging effect on the economy.

If the American people decide they don't want to do this, we'll have to come up with some tougher turkey.

Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar's working with the states on enforcement of the 55-m.p.h. speed limit. If we can get another 4 or 5% out of that, there's 300,000 barrels a day; there's a third of our one million barrels just in gasoline alone.

Q. Will you establish, as Sawhill intended, benchmarks to measure progress in voluntary energy conservation?

A. Oh yes... And not only do I want benchmarks for how the public is doing, I want benchmarks — and Commerce Secretary Frederick Dent is working on this — for segments of industry: the steel industry, aluminum, the chain store industry, so a manager can compare himself with what his industry has been doing, and see whether he's at the forefront or at the tail end.

Q. What happens if the public and industry don't meet those benchmarks?

A. Well, then I think we've got to sit down with the Congress and see what the alternatives are.

The alternatives are some legislatively imposed disciplines.

You can name what they are — they're rationing, they're quotas, they're confiscatory taxes, other kinds of taxes. There are all kinds of ways you can do this.

The trouble is, you get a situation that takes away the choice of how a person spends his time, how he fulfills his role in society, and I don't see any of those things taking place on a very short-term basis.

In other words, if you've got to go to some kind of rationing system because of this business, you just better think you're going to live with it.

Q. In what areas will the Energy Resources Council make recommendations to the President before his next State of the Union address?

A. Obviously in the conservation area, dealing with gasoline, with space heating and cooling, and with energy efficiency in industry. Very shortly, we will come up with a well-delineated package for conservation in gasoline that won't be just simple jawboning. They will also be in the area of a national coal policy, and a honed-down offshore oil leasing policy.

They will certainly be in the area, I hope, of deciding what should be the destiny, and how we should handle the exploration, of our so-called military petroleum reserves.

Also, we are going to push hard for a windfall-profits tax on the oil industry, so it is clear that the public is not carrying all of the burden while the companies make exorbitant profits. The oil companies have to understand they've got to do their share.

Ford Talks to Cattlemen

Beef Import Limit Promised

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — President Ford promised Colorado cattlemen Saturday that he will limit beef imports next year, a spokesman for the ranchers said.

The cattlemen met with Ford after a political rally here and later told reporters the President assured them an effort also would be made to buy more surplus beef for the federal school lunch program.

As Ford spoke, livestock farmers in northern Minnesota planned to slaughter hogs and calves Monday in an attempt to dramatize low cattle prices.

Farmers have complained recently the prices they get for their livestock don't pay the cost of raising the animals. Part of the problem, they contend, is oversupply.

Earlier in the week, Ford said he would impose meat import quotas or negotiate voluntary export agreements with foreign suppliers if meat imports threaten to exceed a certain level.

He said at the same time he would not change the present system of dairy import quotas without a thorough review of market conditions and a test of sentiment among dairymen.

Those proposals fell short of what farmers had sought from the President in a two-hour meeting Wednesday.

Virgil Barg, one of the organizers of the planned Minnesota slaughter, acknowledged livestock producers want to "get the attention of the White House."

Organizers met Friday night at Long Prairie and later estimated 150 to 200 farmers would bring 500 animals to slaughter.

At the rally in Colorado, Ford drew cheers when he said, "I intend to carry out the meat import law, which means there will be no violations of that law, no exceptions and no waivers."

Ford did not specify at the rally how he intends carry out the 1964 act limiting foreign beef imports. But Lee Spann, president of the Colorado Cattlemen's Association, said the President assured his delegation that beef imports would be limited in 1975.

Kent Shooting Situation Reviewed

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The trial of eight former Ohio National Guardsmen charged in the 1970 Kent State University shootings resumes Tuesday, with the government expected to try to bolster its contention the guardsmen were not surrounded or threatened when the firing began.

Three of the nine students wounded by the 13-second burst of gunfire, which also left four dead, took the stand last week in the first week of the trial. They testified they were 310 to 445 feet away from the guardsmen when the shooting commenced.

Three photographers who were on campus that day told the U.S. District Court jury they saw no surge of students toward the troops just before the shooting.

On trial are James E. Pierce, 30, of Amelia Island, Fla., and seven Ohio residents — James D. McGee, 28, and Lawrence A. Shafer, 28, Ravenna; Ralph W. Zoller, 27, Mantua; Barry W. Morris, 30, Kent; Leon H. Smith, 27, Beach City; Mathew J. McManus, 28, West Salem; and William E. Perkins, 28, Canton.

They are accused of violating the civil rights of those killed and wounded in the confrontation which grew out of antiwar demonstrations.

The former students and photographers said protesters were throwing rocks and jeering at the guardsmen and that the troops fired tear gas into the crowd. Students were protesting U.S. military involvement in Cambodia and presence of the guard on the campus.

Donald S. MacKenzie, one of the wounded students who took the stand, said guardsmen were retreating from a football field near the parking lot when one of them turned and fired. Then the rest turned and fired, he said.

He testified he was running away from the shooting and was about 445 feet from the troops when he was struck in the neck by a bullet.

During cross-examination of one of the wounded students, a defense attorney asked the witness if he knew he had been hit by a nonmilitary bullet. The witness replied he knew the bullet had been examined but had not learned of the results.

The defense indicated it would pursue the issue of the non-military bullet when it presents its case.

Earlier in the week, the jury and seven of eight defendants toured the campus for one hour.

Only Chewing Allowed in NY

New York (UPI) — Lighted cigarettes, pipes, cigarillos and cigars were banned in all New York City supermarkets and elevators, most college classrooms, and some recreational facilities.

Under the new Health Department code, not only will smoking be prohibited in certain areas, but in any classroom or lecture hall where smoking is permitted, at least 80% of the seats must be reserved for non-smokers.

Right to Buy Insurance Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal study has found that millions of people apparently are excluded for no sound reason from obtaining the insurance they need to drive a car, buy a house or protect themselves from catastrophic losses.

The study said millions of other so-called high-risk individuals can get insurance only by paying inflated premiums, even though they are "clean" risks by industry standards.

For "clean" drivers the surcharge amounts to a national average of 86 per cent a year on insurance premiums, the study estimated.

The report by the Federal Insurance Administration, an arm of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, recommended that people be guaranteed the right by law to buy insurance, with rates based on government-regulated classifications.

But the study avoided suggesting any federal role in the process, leaving regulation to the state agencies which have traditionally watched over the industry.

"We're trying to avoid it because of our faith in the private insurance system, in the tradition of state regulation," said George K. Bernstein, federal insurance administrator.

The report said that the latest count, in 1967, showed 20 per cent of the nation's drivers were not covered by insurance and a total of 4 million drivers are in various state assigned-risk plans. The assigned risk plans are supposedly reserved for those drivers who don't qualify as acceptable risks for conventional commercial insurance. Such drivers pay $68 more than the national average of $79 a year for the basic auto insurance which the conventionally insured drivers buy.

Yet 3.3 million of the assigned risk drivers haven't had an accident within three years and are thus "clean" within the definition applied by commercial insurers, the report said. And 2.7 million neither had been involved in an accident nor committed any chargeable driving violation within three years.

The report said a similar situation exists for homeowner and property insurance. Twenty-seven states maintain FAIR plans which provide access to federally supported riot insurance programs. FAIR stands for Fair Access to Insurance Requirements and is supposedly reserved for otherwise uninsurable property owners.

Yet the federal study found that of the 3 million policies written under FAIR plans since their creation under the House Act of 1968, 95 per cent of the policies are loss-free.

The OAS, as things stand now, is burdened with a mandatory embargo against Cuba that it cannot enforce. Five of the 21 nations voting at Quito have relations with Cuba and several more are expected to establish ties soon regardless of the vote.

Support for the embargo would put the United States on record against the majority of Cuba, meanwhile, with the hemisphere. On the other hand, an antiembargo vote might be interpreted as an endorsement of Cuban policies.

The embargo, which ostensibly bans hemispheric trade and diplomatic relations with Cuba, was designed as a retaliatory measure against Cuban efforts to export revolution in the hemisphere. But the embargo appears to have weakened the inter-American system more than it has hurt Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

The OAS, as things stand now, is burdened with a mandatory embargo against Cuba that it cannot enforce. Five of the 21 nations voting at Quito have relations with Cuba and several more are expected to establish ties soon regardless of the vote.

Cuba, meanwhile, with generous assistance from the Soviet Union and with many alternative markets for its sugar and tobacco, is more economically secure than many other hemispheric nations despite the embargo. One sign of the ineffective sanctions are the new Argentine-manufactured U.S. cars and trucks on Havana's streets.

The report offered no specific reasons why apparently low-risk individuals had been refused conventional insurance, but Bernstein offered a few possible reasons.

Applicants might be refused because a company doesn't want to write any more insurance in a certain area. Perhaps the company doesn't want to give an agency any more business. Maybe the applicant has been reported to keep a messy house. Or perhaps an individual lives in the wrong neighborhood, Bernstein said.

Ironically, many diplomats get the impression that Castro himself would be content if the embargo continued. Castro has hoped that a hopelessly divided OAS will be replaced by an organization of Latin American states independent of U.S. influence. Many experts say the longer the embargo is retained, the more splintered the OAS will become.

By Virgil Parker
Boulder, Colo. — Nebraska's 31-15 football victory over Colorado here Saturday may look like an easy win in the record books five years from now. But don't you believe it!

Cornhusker fans who turned off their TV set or left the stadium after three quarters to escape a cold drizzle, saved themselves a lot of nervous moments.

The Buffaloes stormed back in the final frame to tally twice and then gained the Nebraska seven-yard line before Colorado native John Starkebaum had a saving interception in the end zone with 55 seconds to settle the issue.

The aerial was aimed by CU quarterback David Williams to David Logan, the Buffs top receiver. He was surrounded.

But undetected in the corner of the end zone, with no Husker defender nearby, was CU split end Rick Ellwood waving his arms frantically.

It may sound like a lot of 'ifs', but a pass to Ellwood, a two-point conversion followed by an inside kick, the 'long bomb' and another two-pointer and it would have been 31-31.

The sudden turn of events in the fourth quarter didn't leave Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne very happy.

"I was really disappointed. That was a sorry finish, although naturally I'm pleased with the win. We relaxed a little, but you've got to give Colorado credit. They came fighting back. I'm just sorry we didn't put it away when we had them 31-0."

Though the defense seemingly collapsed under Colorado's last-quarter pressure, it was the 'Black Shirt' troops who must be credited with a big share of the victory for stopping Colorado just short of paydirt twice in the third quarter with the score standing just 17-0.

Then the offense earned its share of the glory with a sustained 96-yard march to make it 24-0. Though it didn't, that should have settled the issue. But that series of events was certainly the key to the final outcome.

The Buffaloes came out ready to stampee at the start of the second half.

Nov. 3, 1974 Lincoln, Neb. 1D

CU's Mike McCoy returned the kickoff following intermission 53 yards. Only a diving tackle by Ardell Johnson, who was the defensive hero against Oklahoma State a week ago, saved a touchdown.

The Buffs banged away down to the Nebraska nine, but a slippery turf and a tightening defense halted Colorado. Two plays later, however, Husker fullback Tony Davis fumbled and Colorado started again at the Nebraska 16.

The Buffs gained first and goal at the five, but two plays later linebacker Bob Nelson stuck CU tailback Doug Brace with a driving tackle the ball popped loose and Mike Fultz fell on the ball. Whew!

Then came the key. Behind the block-busting running of freshman I-back Monte Anthony, the Huskers stormed 98 yards in seven plays to score.

It was the longest sustained drive of the season (there could only be one of another yard in history), and it included the longest single ground gainer of the year — a 56-yard burst by Anthony to move the ball out of danger.

It topped his 48-yard dash against Minnesota.

Anthony wound up with 157 yards on 23 carries. That's the best individual performance since Davis gained 147 yards in his debut in the opening game against UCLA to start the 1973 campaign.

That touchdown drive, capped by a 16-yard pass from Dave Humm to Don Westbrook, pushed the count to 24-0.

If that didn't take the wind out of Colorado's sails, the next series should have. On the very first play after the ensuing kickoff, Johnson made another sparkling defensive play by intercepting a Buff pass.

He returned it 20 yards to the Colorado 28 and eight plays later John O'Leary banged in from three yards out to push the total to 31-zip.

That's when the Husker fans among the 52,049 in Folsom Field sat back and relaxed. The only trouble was, so did the Cornhusker team.

Colorado, despite having lost the ball at the Nebraska two and allowing the 98-yard march and then having a pass intercepted and giving up a cheap score, refused to wilt.

At that stage, before the Buffs bulled their way back, the Nebraska 'Black Shirt' defense had shut out the foe for the sixth straight game through three quarters of play.

But when Colorado opened the final frame with a 62-yard march to score — after tailback Billy Waddy, last year's freshman player of the year in the Big Eight entered the game for the first time — the Buffs halted an 11-quarter streak in Lawrence, Kan. — Iowa State withstood a strong Nebraska challenge to successfully defend its title in the Big Eight Conference Invitational Gymnastics meet Saturday.

The Huskers, who had pulled within .35 of the Cyclones after the first round of compulsory routines completed Friday, saw their challenge fade during the first two events of Saturday's optional routines, as they trailed ISU in the final tally, 408.85-402.40.

In the floor exercise, the Huskers dropped an additional three points behind ISU, and then in the pommel horse, expected to be NU's strongest event, the Huskers top four totaled but 31.40, less than 8.0 per man, dropping them out of contention.

Nebraska had challenged the defending NCAA champion Cyclone squad the week before, dropping a 214.15-212.15 dual decision, but saw their team optional score drop to 208.10, while the Cyclones matched their earlier performance with a 214.20 Saturday score.

Gene Mackie shared the spotlight with the ISU squad as the Husker junior maintained his first day lead to win the Olympic all-around competition with a 101.50 score.

Mackie had to withstand a strong second day challenge from defending Big Eight all-around champion Mark Graham to win his title. Graham, who had been fourth after the initial compulsory routines, vaulted past two others to come within half a point of Mackie. Husker freshman, Larry Gerard, finished third.

All-around: 1. Gene Mackie, Nebraska, 101.50; 2. Mark Graham, ISU, 101.00; 3. Larry Gerard, Nebraska, 95.30; 4. Scott Evans, ISU, 94.10; 5. Greg Buwick, Oklahoma, 92.50; 6. John Arends, ISU, 90.10 only 7-0 early in the third quarter, but turned two Iowa State fumbles into quick touchdowns.

"We thought we had a good shot at them after halftime," said Iowa State Coach Earle Bruce. "Maybe we came out just a little too enthused."

"Those two mistakes gave them 14 points and you can't do that against a team of their caliber and expect to win."

Switzer paid tribute to Iowa State, which held a 335-329 yardage advantage and kept the Sooners wishbone to its lowest rushing production of the season—198 yards on the ground.

"They played a fine game, both offensively and defensively," Switzer added. "But we aren't quite the same type of team on this kind of field (natural grass) as on our field back home."

The field was slippery in spots, but didn't appear to hamper the offenses of either team.

Iowa State, which had used veer and power-I offensive formations in prior games, opened in a wishbone setup.

"What really surprised us was their wishbone," Switzer said. "They ran it better than we did at times."

Bruce said his club used the different formation to run right at Oklahoma's strength—the middle of the line.

"We did some things that most teams haven't done against Oklahoma, and they had to play their first units the whole game for the first time in a long time," Bruce said.

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—It stopped raining at Lewis Stadium here Saturday afternoon, but not before the end of an error-plagued game in which Oklahoma State and Kansas combined for 23 fumbles. The Cowboys won the Big Eight game.

24-13, and also won the fumbling contest, losing the ball a school record 15 times. In addition to eight fumbles, the Jayhawks lost the ball three times by interceptions. "It wasn't a place for the faint-hearted, was it?" asked Cowboy coach Jim Stanley.

He lauded the Pokes "for showing a lot of character. We had a lot of bad things happen, but we overcame them."

"I was proud of the way our offense moved the ball when it had to. Yes, we fumbled a lot, but most of it was because of a wet ball."

"I don't care if it's a wet or dry day, you shouldn't fumble that much. Of course, the only record that counts is the final score."

Stanley also praised freshman Terry Miller, who played his first game ever at fullback. He was forced into fullback duties because of injuries to George Palmer and Robert Turner.

"He learned the fullback position in a week," Stanley said. "People don't realize how difficult that is because the fullback mesh makes the wishbone effective."

Many of the Cowboy fumbles were off the hands of sophomore quarterback Charley Weatherbie, but Stanley said he felt that, over-all, Weatherbie "ran the ball well and threw much better than he has."

"He wrapped the ball up well at the ends of his runs."

Kansas coach Don Fambrough said he had never coached in a game under such miserable conditions. At one point a mid-field puddle on the artificial turf stretched for 65 yards. There were 47,000 tickets sold for the game, but only 27,500 persons sat through the steady downpour.

"We had an opportunity to win and didn't," Fambrough said. "We made mistakes at crucial times, but both teams did."

"Our kids played hard, but things didn't happen for us. On a day like today, you can't make any plans because we didn't work on them during the week."

Saturday marked the opening of Nebraska's 1974 pheasant season, the most popular of the state's hunting seasons. Thousands of Nebraskans went to the fields after the most popular upland game bird in the American Midwest. (See statewide opening day success survey, Page D9)

New '74 Datsuns at '74 prices!

Datsun brings back deflation.

610 2-Door Hardtop

Save on the 610. '75 prices are shockingly high industry-wide. Labor and materials cost more. Expensive smog-reduction and safety features are mandatory. But since we won't be introducing our '75 Datsuns for a while, we're still selling brand new 1974 Datsuns at low '74 prices.

Our 2-Door Hardtops, 4-Door Sedans and 5-Door Wagons all come with many standard features others charge extra for. You also save on gasoline, repairs, upkeep and resale value. Come see us soon!

Omaha — An Omaha Cathedral assistant coach paid a visit to Lincoln Pius X's locker room here Saturday night after the Thunderbolts posted a convincing 40-0 non-conference football win at Benson Field.

"You guys are No. 1. You certainly deserve it," the Cathedral assistant told Pius X head coach Vince Aldrich, whose team recorded its eighth straight win since a 7-0 season-opening loss to Class A Lincoln High.

The Thunderbolts' power display indeed was impressive. Pius X accumulated 19 first downs and 350 yards total offense while checking Cathedral to five first downs and a meager 7 yards total offense.

Senior quarterback Mitch Ohnoutka passed to split end Kent Krause for a pair of touchdown passes and scored once himself to stake Pius X to a 19-0 halftime lead and the rout was on.

The score seemingly could have been even more lopsided as the 'Bolts passed almost at will. "Cathedral was practically bringing nine men up," Aldrich noted. "They were shutting our inside stuff off pretty well, but that left the outside and the passing pretty much open."

It didn't take long for Pius X to discover the Cathedral weakness. The 'Bolts drove 88 yards on their first offensive possession to score with 7:59 remaining in the opening quarter on a 13 yard Ohnoutka to Krause hookup.

A 22 yard Krause reception set up the Thunderbolts second touchdown with Ohnoutka scoring on an 11 yard keeper around left end with 9:26 remaining in the second quarter.

A 30 yard Ohnoutka to fullback Jerry Kobza pass carried to the Cathedral 4 yard line to set up Pius X's third touchdown before intermission. It finally came with 3:26 remaining on a 1 yard Ohnoutka to Krause pass on a fourth down situation.

The Thunderbolts added a pair of third quarter touchdowns less than four minutes apart to put the game out of reach. Senior fullback Bill Franklin busted 7 yards for one of the touchdowns, which had been set up on the previous play as second team quarterback Pat Fuller connected with Kobza for a 30 yard pass play.

Second team split end Jim Smiley scored the other third quarter touchdown, hauling in a perfect 49 yard scoring pass from second team I-back Rick Sullivan, who had taken a pitchout from Fuller and swept to his right before unwinding.

The scoring derby ended with 7:46 remaining in the final quarter as starting I-back Tom Doggett returned to the lineup for a 14 yard off-tackle touchdown. Doggett had rushed for 95 yards on 15 carries in the first half, but saw very limited duty in the second half.

"It just scares the living daylights out of me to come up to Omaha and play on a Saturday night," Aldrich admitted after the decisive win. "I've brought some pretty good teams up here and got them knocked off because they hadn't been mentally prepared. But I think we were tonight."

Aldrich is hoping that the Thunderbolts mental frame of mind is equally high Friday night when they close the season with a home game against rated David City Aquinas.

"I expect Aquinas will be higher than a kite coming into Lincoln, like they always are for us," acknowledged Aldrich, who has scouted Aquinas three times this season and labeled the Monarchs "a very dangerous team. We'll have to be at our best to win."

Pius X, Class B's second rated team last week, enhanced its bid for No. 1 with the decisive win over Cathedral coupled with Lexington's 30-8 victory over top ranked Ord Friday night at Lexington.

McKay says he's tired of people talking about the top coaches around the country and saying, 'Heck, if I had his players, I could do what he does, too.' McKay observes, "The coach with the best players does not always win. He has a better chance of winning. But I know coaches who can lose with good players

I've heard people say it's easy to win at Nebraska." McKay says in his book. "Well, from 1956 to 1961, Nebraska never had a winning season. They won only 19 of 60 games. In 1962, Devaney's very first year, they were miraculously 9-2."

After McKay's son Johnny (a record-setting high school pass receiver) and his quarterback-teammate Pat Haden were named co-Southern California Prep Players of the Year, McKay said in his book. "Trying to be impartial — which was difficult — I told myself I would have been happy to see Johnny play for Bob Devaney at Nebraska ...

To Sign Together

McKay's son and Haden had pledged to go to the same school. It's no secret that on the west coast, the school McKay likes the least is Stanford. In the book, he reveals that his son claimed one night that he was thinking of going to the Palo Alto sch. .

"If it was between Stanford and Red China," I told him, "I would tell you. 'Good luck in Peking.'"

"On another night the boys really shook me up," McKay continues. "They signed a Big Eight letter of intent to go to Nebraska. Since Nebraska isn't in our league, they could still have come to USC, but they admitted they liked Nebraska.

"That night I was alone with Johnny and I said, 'Son, you can't be doing this to me. I need that quarterback.'"

McKay, who was never a head coach anywhere — high school, junior college or small school before becoming the grid boss at USC — says he's often asked what it takes to become a successful major college coach. "It's simple," he says in the book. "Get an O.J. Simpson and order him to run fast, catch the ball, and head for the goal line."

Space doesn't permit passing along more, but the chapters on recruiting and 'What Coaching Demands' by themselves make the book a 'must' for any football fan.

Lincoln Southeast broke a two-game losing streak Saturday night at Seacrest Field by blanking Papillion, 39-0, in an Eastern 1-80 Conference game.

The No. 8 rated Knights dominated every phase of the game in hiking their record to 7-2, while the Monarchs fell to 1-8.

"We executed much better on offense and cut down our errors," LSE coach Frank Solich said. "We had a great attitude during the week in practice."

"It has been a long two weeks and the players did a good job of bouncing back after losing two games."

The Knights wasted little time in asserting their dominance as standout middle guard Kelvin Roehrs recovered a Papillion fumble on the Monarchs' 13-yard line on the third play of the game.

On the very next play fullback Jon Large slanted into the end zone off his left tackle for Southeast's first touchdown with 10:22 left in the first quarter.

Two series later Large added a second touchdown on a run of two yards with 4:08 remaining in the first quarter.

Another Roehrs' fumble recovery led to the Knights' third touchdown, which came from a 20-yard pass from Tim Hager to Dave Hassebrook with 2:27 to go in the initial period.

Larry Gilliland scampered 56 yards with 9:20 left in the second quarter for LSE's next touchdown, which was set up by Doug Roehrs' blocking a Monarch punt.

Gilliland added another touchdown on a one-yard plunge with 5:47 to go in the third quarter after Hassebrook intercepted a Papillion pass to set up that score.

The Knights' last touchdown came on a yard sneak by sophomore reserve quarterback Gary Hager with 8:59 remaining in the game.

Hassebrook added a second pass interception late in the game with teammates Randy Foster and Ed Davis also picking off Papillion passes during the game.

Wayne (AP) — Wayne's defense smothered Iowa Wesleyan Saturday while Dean Ott with two touchdowns led the Wildcats to a 43-0 football victory.

Wesleyan had a 48 yard net loss on the ground while Wayne ran for 229 yards.

coming a tough Nebraska Wesleyan first-half defense and dousing the Plainsmen, 38-0.

The game was no easy task for coach Don Watchorn's Warriors as the always-tough NWU defense held Midland to only 35 first-quarter yards and a scoreless tie.

And not until the hosts could get on the receiving end of numerous NWU miscues could they get on the scoreboard.

With 13:51 remaining in the second quarter, Wesleyan's punter Dan Hitz, who had been getting all the time he needed previously, was put under heavy rush resulting in a 14-yard punt to the NWU 36-yard line.

Following carries by halfbacks Spencer Gilbert and Rick Klug and a facemask penalty the ball was moved to the four.

With 11:19 left in the half, freshman Dexter Brown bolted in for the first of his two Midland touchdowns. Tom Hale added the point after for the 7-0 lead.

A series later, Wesleyan got the ball back on an interception by Chuck Biggs of a halfback pass by Brown. But NWU reciprocated on a Gene Lessman fumble after catching one of quarterback Andy Federle's two completions.

Federle was two for 10 with two interceptions.

After Midland's Bob Hemje fell on the ball, the Warriors marched 57 yards on eight plays with Brown again doing the honors, this time from the three. The score came with 1:28 remaining in the first half.

Midland came out in the second half with a few errors of its own but the Plainsmen were unable to capitalize.

On the first play, Midland quarterback Mike Pirtle was intercepted by linebacker Randy Schmaizl. The Wesleyan ace returned the ball five yards to the 20 and coughed it up into the waiting hands of intended receiver Jon Smith at the original line of scrimmage.

Two plays later, Pirtle tossed another interception, this one to defensive end-Doug Hahn, at the Warrior 27. Hahn returned the ball to the 18.

Collecting only two yards in three plays, Wesleyan was forced into a field goal attempt. The 24 yard try by Sam Martin was wide right and Midland regained possession under a new quarterback, Walt Olsen.

It took Olsen a series to warm up before he guided the Warriors to two straight touchdowns. Fullback Smith scored the first from one yard out and Klug added the second from 11 yards.

Reserves accounted for the final two Midland tallies in the fourth period.

Wesleyan was held scoreless until late in the game when reserve quarterback Dan Klaus tossed a perfect bomb to freshman Doug Charko covering 51 yards. Martin's PAT attempt hit the crossbar and bounded back.

"We're real happy to get this one under our belts," Watchorn said. "Wesleyan has a good defensive ball club."

Watchorn, who has turned Midland's football fortunes around since taking over four years ago credited his overall depth and senior leadership for the success against the visiting Plainsmen.

"We have real good depth," he noted. "When we get key kids hurt, we have other kids who can move in and do a fine job for us."

Watchorn has eight seniors who have been starters since they were freshman.

Midland, now at 9-0 will end its regular season next Saturday at Westmar College in Lemars, Ia.

Wesleyan, 2-6, will finish out at home against Benedictine Kan.

Bulldog ten and Al Broussard scored to put the Tigers ahead, 13-7.

Brad Batt then added the extra point.

Concordia, stymied on its next possession, was forced to punt but a fumble on the snap gave Doane the ball on the Bulldog 24.

Two plays later, Knapp hit end Ralph Kath on a 27-yard aerial to give the Tigers their final points.

Knapp was four of ten in the passing department for 122 yards while Al Broussard led the Tigers with 106 on 14 carries.

Neither team scored in the third quarter due to numerous miscues and damaging penalties.

But the rally fell short as the Doane defense, behind the efforts of Donny Broussard and George Ruffin who consistently held Bulldog runners late in the final quarter.

The Doane offense exploded early in the second quarter, scoring three touchdowns.

Steve Schultz put the Tigers ahead on a seven-yard run to cap a drive highlighted by runs of 32 and 17 yards by Alvin Broussard.

The Bulldogs retaliated quickly following a Doane fumble of a punt on the Tiger-six, when Baker scored on a five-yard run to tie the score.

But Doane quarterback Gary Knapp drove the Tigers to the St. Joseph, Mo. (AP) — Hastings College rolled up a 28 point lead in the first half and went on to blast Dana College 48-7 Saturday.

Dana's only score of the day came on a 10-yard second quarter run by Mike Urdahl.

Bob Squires grabbed two touchdown passes from quarterback Rod Schultz, one for 25 yards, the other for 18.

Jim Doty scored twice, once on a 21-yard pass from Schultz and again on a one-yard run.

Other Hastings scoring came on a 22-yard run by Sam Rennie, a 15 yard Schultz to Dave Dirrum pass and a one-yard run by Harold Wegner.

Bufs' Coach Proud of Team Humm's Big Plays Cited by Mallory

By Virgil Parker
Boulder, Colo. — "We reached a point out there today when we could have given up and been run out of the stadium," Colorado football coach Bill Mallory said Saturday after his team suffered a 31-15 setback at the hands of Nebraska.
Nebraska led, 31-0, with just a quarter of play remaining.

"Though we're disappointed to lose," Mallory continued, "it was important to me that our kids stood up and fought. They hung in there. That's the most I can ask of a young man. Our kids fought to the very end and I'm very proud of that."
It was the failure of his Buffaloes to score at the outset of the second half, when they trailed just 17-0, that had Mallory upset.
"It really ticked me off when we got the ball down to the two yard line and couldn't get it in," the first-year CU coach admitted.
"Third and goal at the two! That's when you've got to do it. On that play the Nebraska end just flew out of there. I could have driven my car through the hole."

"Instead, Nebraska linebacker Bob Nelson came up to knock the ball loose and tackle Mike Fultz recovered for the Huskers, who proceeded to march 98 yards to increase their lead to 24-0.

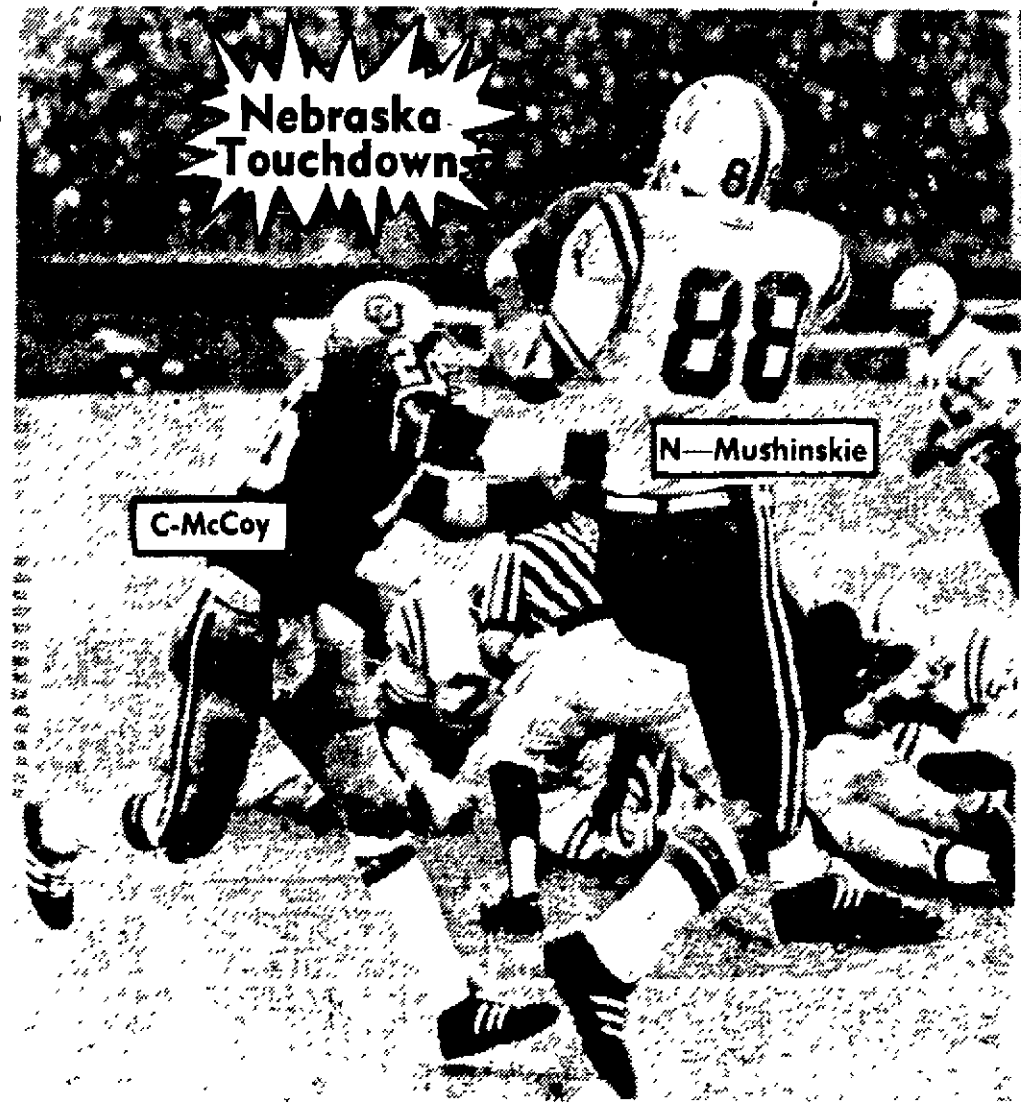

Mallory feels Nebraska quarterback Dave Humm deserves the lion's share of the credit for the Cornhuskers success this fall.
"He comes up with the big plays to keep their drives going. He certainly did it in the early going against us today. He finds the receivers, gets into the seams and delivers the ball."
Mallory also had praise for Nebraska freshman I-back Monte Anthony, the game's leading round gainer.

"That big kid really runs well. But, he's made more effective by the threat of Humm's passing. It's Humm who opens everything up to make the other things go."

Mallory made some comparisons between Nebraska and Oklahoma, a club which dumped his Buffs, 49-14.

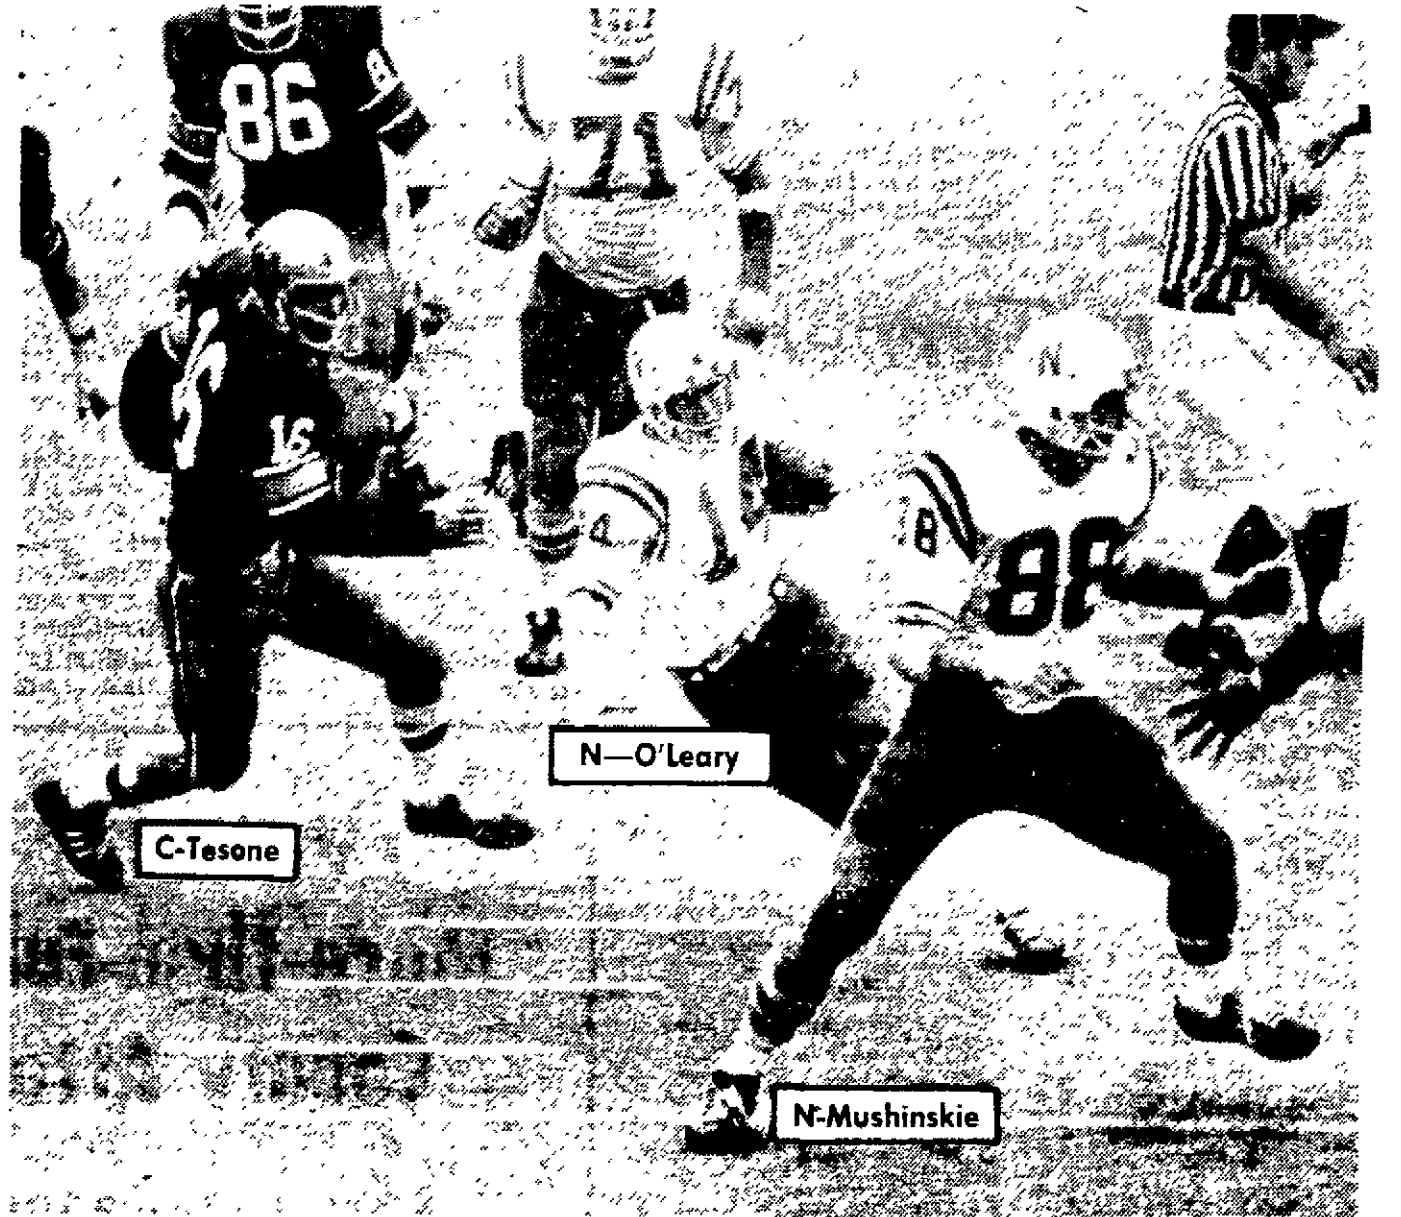

"The two defenses are very much alike," Mallory notes. "I don't see much difference. But offensively, they're two completely different teams. Oklahoma was awesome with the run. I wish it had been wet the day they were here — like it was today. Maybe they wouldn't have been so awesome."

"Nebraska has a good running game, too," Mallory continued, "but to beat Oklahoma you have to have the pass. And Nebraska certainly has that weapon with Humm. Nebraska will have a chance when the two of them meet. I'll boil down to the two defenses — which one can control the other."

Larry Mushinskie (88) makes a shoulder-high grab of a Dave Humm pass in the end zone. Colorado's Mike McCoy (26) is too late to defend against the first Nebraska touchdown.

N

The shifty feet of John O'Leary (14) carry him to a quick cut past Colorado's Tom Tesone (16) and behind the interference of teammate Larry Mushinskie (88).

The Colorado defense must have thought it was getting one thing but ended up being stung by something entirely different when the Cornhuskers pulled this play from their bag of offensive tricks. Dave Humm (12) whirls (1) to make a quick pitch to Tony Davis (25) on what appears to be a Nebraska power sweep (2). But what's this, a pass? Yessir, fullback Davis stops and cocks the ball behind his ear (3) just like any good quarterback. The pass is almost right on the money and John O'Leary (14) does his part by picking the ball out of the air (4) for a 29-yard gain. The razzle-dazzle set the Huskers up at the Colorado 18-yard line and five plays later O'Leary scored NU's second touchdown.

The Longest Run

Nebraska's longest run from scrimmage this season came in the third quarter when Monte Anthony (49) broke free with some good blocking and scampered 55 yards. Anthony takes a pitchout (1) from quarterback Dave Humm (12) as Stan Hegener (64) and Tony Davis (25) lead the charge. The freshman dazzler begins a power drive (2) past fallen

Bob Simpson (57). As Larry Mushinskie (88) crashes two Buffaloes to the outside, Anthony begins to pick up speed (3), striding out (4) until Don Westbrook (21) arrives to bother another CU defender. Anthony cuts behind Westbrook (5) and picks up even more yardage before finally being collared from behind (6) by Jeff Geiser (82).

Plenty of defense — from high, low and in the middle . . . John Lee (69) hits Colorado runner Melvin Johnson (23) down low while linebacker Tom Ruud (45) comes in from a loftier position. The good smack though is made in the middle by an unidentified Black Shirt defender.

Huskers Stop Colorado, 31-15

which Nebraska had refused to yield a touchdown.

Waddy and fullback Gary Campbell alternated on 10 straight carries before Waddy went the final eight yards on a pitchout around right end.

No sweat. Nothing to worry about. Nebraska still led, 31-7. But the Huskers took the kickoff and it was three plays and a punt and here came the Buffaloes again.

After three CU first downs, Williams aimed a fly pattern pass at Ellwood. Nebraska defender Dave Butterfield, a Colorado native, nearly thrilled his family and friends with an interception, but instead he got burned. The timing was barely off and Ellwood scampered the final 35 yards for the TD. After a two-point conversion run, it was suddenly 31-15.

After the next kickoff — an on-side attempt that backfired — Nebraska had the ball on the CU 45. But Humm bobbled the snap from center, O'Leary made a few yards and then Humm and Davis ran into each other. It was punt time again.

Then on Williams pass completions of 15, 28, 12, 8 and 10, Colorado was down to the Nebraska seven. That's when Starkebaum made his interception and allowed the hearts of Nebraska fans to beat normally again.

Nebraska looked like it was going to make easy work of the task at hand at the outset. The Huskers won the toss, elected to receive, and proceeded to march 80 yards in 13 plays — with the aid of a couple of penalties against Colorado — to take a 6-0 lead. A Humm to Larry Mushinskie pass ate up the final five yards.

Because of the wet turf, Al Eveland tried the extra point kick, since soccer-styled kicker Mike Coyle often slips with his sidwinding style. But a bad center snap foiled Eveland's try.

Nebraska's second possession looked like another TD drive. Humm threw a 28-yarder to Westbrook and Ritch Bahe ramblled 24 more — although he pulled a hamstring on the run and may be lost for awhile.

But after gaining the CU 10, the drive stalled. No need to worry. The next time Nebraska had the ball Humm directed another 80 march, this time in 10 plays. O'Leary dived the final yard.

Davis, with a two-point conversion run, made it 14-0.

Another drive stalled when the Husker had their next possession, this time at the CU 16, when Nebraska failed on fourth and one.

And the next chance, after split end Bobby Thomas dropped a Humm 'on target' strike at the three, the Huskers had to settle for a Coyle field goal.

It was 17-0 at half. It could have easily been 28-0. That would have saved all that strain at the end.

A vociferous Cornhusker rooter urges her favorite team to put a strong hold on the dangerous Buffaloes.

Bahe Hurt

Something that started out perfect for Ritch Bahe (24) and the Cornhusker offense ended in pain and disappointment early in the Colorado conquest. Bahe grimaces in pain and grips his left leg after suffering a pulled hamstring muscle at the conclusion of a 24-yard sprint. As a result of the injury, the reliable senior from Fremont will likely miss the final three regular season games.

So. Cal Tied By California

Staying exclusively on the ground, the heavily-favored Trojans moved 56 yards on 11 plays, the longest a 17-yard romp by Allen Carter.

On a third-and-one situation from the one-yard-line, Haden, who completed only four passes, slipped into the end zone to bring USC to within two at 15-13 with 2:53 left in the third period.

Haden then found Obradovich all alone in the end zone for the two point conversion that proved to be the final scoring of the hard-fought game.

Despite being intercepted three times, Bears' quarterback Steve Bartkowski was voted the offensive player of the game. He completed 14 of 29 passes for 174 yards, compared to Haden's 4-for-11 for 90 yards.

USC defensive back Marvin Cobb, who had two of the interceptions, was chosen the top defensive player in the contest.

Rice Shocks Texas Tech

intercepted a Tech pass and ran to the Raider 18. Two plays later sophomore Kramer flipped a screen pass to Loftin, and a clearing block by Danny Johnson sprung Loftin into the end zone.

On Tech's next offensive series third string Red Raider quarterback Rodney Allison fumbled a handoff and defensive end Brent Barnes recovered at the TEch 25.

From there it took Rice four plays to score. Kramer pitched to Gary Ferguson, and the senior tailback scooted 14 yards around right end for a touchdown less than three minutes after the first score.

Placekicker Alan Pringle booted his second of three extra points.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Northwestern's Jim Trimble and Jimmy Pooler combined for 257 yards rushing and Pooler scored two touchdowns Saturday in a 21-13 victory over Minnesota. The Wildcats' first in five Big Ten games.

Trimble, 214-pound fullback, gained 159 yards in 29 carries and Pooler, a 195-pounder, added 106 yards in 26 rushes. The Northwestern defense held Gopher tailback Rick Upchurch to 86 yards.

Mitch Anderson, a passing whiz who threw sparingly, scored the Wildcats' third touchdown in the third quarter on a five-yard keeper.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Reserve fullback Jerry Honore wrestled off a tackler and broke for a 60-yard touchdown Saturday, propelling seventh-ranked Texas A&M to a 20-10 victory over Arkansas and keeping the Aggies undefeated atop the Southwest Conference.

Honore, a senior from Lake Charles, La., scored both Aggie touchdowns and picked up 128 yards on 18 carries.

A&M kicker Randy Haddock booted a 57-yard field goal in the second quarter to set a school distance record and added a 40-yarder in the final minutes. The Razorbacks, shutting down the A&M offense until the final quarter, had tied the contest with a 32-yard field goal only seconds before Honore's decisive touchdown run.

David Humm's pinpoint passing accounted for two touchdowns and freshman Monte Anthony ripped through the Colorado defense for 157 yards as Nebraska roared to a 31-15 victory Saturday in a regionally televised Big Eight football game at Boulder.

The ninth-ranked Cornhuskers mixed the pass and run effectively, and also capitalized on five Colorado turnovers to boost their season record to 6-2 and conference mark to 3-1. The out-manned Buffaloes slipped to 3-5 and 1-3.

Both of Colorado's touchdowns came in the final quarter after the contest was already out of reach.

Hard-running by second-string fullback Gary Campbell set up Billy Waddy's eight-yard scoring run. About six minutes later, split end Rick Ellwood caught a 35-yard scoring pass from David Williams.

Humm completed his first seven passes as the Cornhuskers moved to a 14-0 lead early in the second quarter.

Midway through the third period, Anthony ran four straight times for 78 yards, and Humm hit wingback Don Westbrook on a 16-yard TD pass.

An interception two plays later put the Cornhuskers in possession for another score. I-back John O'Leary ran three yards for the score — his second of the game — putting Nebraska on top 31-0.

COLUMBUS (UPI) — It was a typical reply by Ohio State's all-American tailback Archie Griffin following his record-setting performance Saturday against Illinois when he said "I couldn't have done it without my line."

Griffin, the Buckeyes' sensational 5-8, 180-pound junior, had just rushed for 144 yards in 20 carries against the Illini, the 18th straight regular season game, and 19th in a row including the Rose Bowl, in which he had gained 100 yards or more.

It broke the record of 17 in a row (18 including bowl games) Griffin had shared going into the Illini contest with former Oklahoma all-American Steve Owens.

When a writer commented to Griffin he was being too modest by giving credit to his line, he quickly but politely shot back, "No, I'm not."

Coach Woody Hayes, who also got his 20th career coaching victory in the 49-7 win by the top-ranked Buckeyes, chimed in.

"He's the most popular athlete we've ever had," Hayes said, "and I can say that without him getting fat-headed."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Tailback Gordon Bell crashed for two second quarter touchdowns and second ranked Michigan then held off aroused Indiana for a 21-7 Big Ten victory Saturday.

Bell, a slender 175 pounder from Troy, Ohio, gained 149 yards in 23 attempts and was sent across the goal line twice when veteran quarterback Dennis Franklin took over from Mark Elzinga to open the second period.

But Indiana, which has won only from Minnesota in eight games, refused to be blown off its field.

Waverly Spikers Adjusting To Increasing Pressure

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Waverly — Pressure has never bothered Class B Waverly High School Volleyball coach Karen Stoner in the past.

But the first-year coach and her highly successful team are being subjected to enormous pressure trying to maintain a dynasty.

The dynasty is in the form of the state's longest volleyball winning streak and Stoner along with the team are trying to extend two strings. One, a record 62 straight victories and the other, a third straight state championship, one for each year the meet has existed.

Oddly enough, the streak has extended back to 1971 and the Vikings have been guided by a different coach each of the four years.

Stoner is not new with the Waverly volleyball program by any means. She served as an assistant coach under Kris Rotter last season when the winning streak was extended to 51 games and a second state title.

And the year before that, Stoner also served under Pam Miller. The only part of the chain she hasn't been associated with is the beginning when Eileen Oates started the dynasty in 1971. Karen was student teaching for degree requirements at Waverly.

"I never thought there was any pressure before," Stoner said. "But now I'm beginning to feel it."

"There's really nothing wrong with losing, if you lose to a better team," she added. "But when you've won so many like they have here, it can get to you a little bit."

Tuesday night Waverly completed its unbeaten regular season with a 15-7, 15-4 win over Elkhorn, one of the teams in the Vikings' district but Stoner wasn't totally satisfied with the play of her team. "We haven't played real well lately and I yelled at the girls more than I should have after Tuesday's game," she said. "It's probably just the pressure getting to me a little bit."

If coping with pressure runs in any families in that area, Stoner should have no worries about the upcoming tournament. Three of her starters had sisters who played on championship Waverly teams.

Junior Luann Hesterman had her all-state sister Deb on last year's team along with Lucy Axberg's sister Wanda. Two years ago, senior Diane Oehlerking's sister Pam was a member of the state champions.

Only two members of last year's varsity returned for Stoner. Oehlerking and Karen Mortensen. However, Stoner credits a strong reserve program for a good portion of the Waverly success story.

"When the varsity is as good as it's been here," Stoner said, "the reserves have to be of good caliber to practice with them. They have a lot of pride in their game and they work at it awfully hard."

Cindy Wulf and Erin Dodge are the other two from last year's reserve team that help continue the dynasty.

The family situation, although a plus in the case of Waverly, is not always that way according to Stoner.

"Sometimes it helps if a family is sports-oriented," Stoner said, "because the kids want to continue a tradition. But other times it can work against you because if someone is exceptionally good, it may turn others in the family off because of the competition in the family."

But this hasn't been the case concerning this year's team. "It's just a great bunch of girls," Stoner said. "They're real competitors."

East, Turner I-80 Champs

Lincoln East, led by Tracy Turner, claimed the top spot in the Eastern I-80 Conference Gymnastics Championship held at Millard Saturday.

In addition to being the all-events winner, Turner won the floor exercise and the parallel bars events.

Lincoln Southeast took runner-up honors, paced by Kirk Fridrich, who placed second in the all-events and won the horizontal bar and rings events.

Dave Weakland aided the East cause with a win in the pommel horse event.

AMES, Iowa (AP)—Dark horse Iowa State and Missouri shared the Big Eight Conference cross country championship Saturday by tying with 49 points.

Pre-season favorite Kansas State finished third in the eight-team field with 83 points, and defending two-time champion Oklahoma State was fourth with 88.

Oklahoma (126), Colorado (133), Kansas (147) and Nebraska (234) followed.

Missouri's Tim McMullen edged Iowa State senior Tom Schoberg for the individual crown over the five-mile Venker Memorial Golf Course with a winning time of 24 minutes, 45.2 seconds.

Schoberg was 2 behind. Iowa State, which had lost only one dual meet but was considered an outsider coming into the meet, won a second, fourth, sixth, 16th and 21st for its team total.

Besides McMullen's first, balanced Missouri had a 9th, 11th, 13th and 15th

Husker Polo Squad Splits

The University of Nebraska water polo team split a pair of contests Saturday afternoon at the NU Coliseum pool.

In the opening match, the University of Northern Colorado dunked the Huskers 11-6, while the Huskers came back in the second contest to edge Central Missouri State, 11-8.

JFK Scores Soccer Shutout

Wahoo — John F. Kennedy College scored a 10-0 shutout over York in soccer here Saturday. The homecoming victory raised JFK's record to 6-1-1.

The scoring was led by Charles Peters, who had 3 goals, Dan McDonnell with 1 goal and 3 assists, and Wilson Pickett, who added 2 goals and 3 assists.

East Girls Sweep I-80 Titles

Two East High coaches, Dennis Vokolek and Myron Oehlerking can claim firsts as a result of their teams efforts Saturday afternoon.

The girls' swim team under Vokolek and volleyball team under Oehlerking laid claim to championships in the Eastern I-80 Conference at the East High pool and the Southeast gym.

In the first year of conference competition, Oehlerking's volleyball team upset top-seeded Lincoln High in the finals, 15-12, 6-15, 15-12. And likewise, Vokolek's squad, led once again by the diving team outdistanced second place Southeast 100-80.

The volleyball title added to the frustration of the Lincoln High team coached by Nadine Sass. East has held a definite edge over the Links this season even though the Spartans failed to draw top-seed.

Entering the tournament, Lincoln High had an 11-3 record, best of any entries. But two of the losses had been inflicted by the cross-town rival Spartans.

Saturday afternoon's win made it three in a row for the East girls.

"They are a real tough team," Oehlerking said of the Links after the final game. "Beating a team like that three times in a row is a real credit to the girls."

East rallied from a six point deficit in the first set for a 15-12 win and then dropped the second, 6-15. The outcome of the match was in doubt until the finish when the Spartans Nancy Grant spiked the final point out of reach of the Link defenders.

Evident throughout the contest was the freewheeling substitution of Sass, getting her tallest girls on the front line while Oehlerking used the same girls the entire game.

"Substitution depends a lot on the personnel you have," Oehlerking said. "The girls I have are capable of playing everywhere effectively, but I have people on the bench who can play just as well if needed."

Oehlerking said he didn't like to substitute if the girls are playing well because they work together so well, but noted that Lincoln High is equally effective using substitutes.

"They played this way all year long," he said. "Their girls know exactly where and when to go in. It just seems to work better for them that way."

Since Oehlerking's girls are used to playing all over the court, he says they have no real standouts. All are equal in ability. "This is probably one of the secrets to our team," he said.

"We have no certain person that stands out. No matter who is at the net, we know we've got four spikers who can get the job done."

The personable Spartan coach was extremely happy with the victory. "There will be other winners," he said. "But no one will ever be the first except us."

In swimming, divers Kristi Wells, Lois Hayan, Karin Olson and Debbie Bale accounted for a 1-2-4-6 finish and 16 points to give them the needed spread to win the swimming title.

Runner-up Southeast was tied with the Spartans until the 16-0 differential in diving and were able to hold that margin until the meet's final event, the 400 yard freestyle won by East.

East had only one other individual winner besides Wells with Sue Griffin winning the 100 yard backstroke. But the strength of six second place finishers and a host of thirds, fourths, fifths and sixths gave the Spartans the needed points.

The meet produced three double winners, Annette Wayne, Lincoln High, (200, 500-freestyle), Anne Rinne, Southeast, (200 IM and 100 fly) and Millard's Cory Schna, (50, 100-freestyle).

The next competition will be the girls' state meet next weekend, also at the East High pool.

Aaron Traded To Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Henry Aaron opted for nostalgia instead of retirement, so the Milwaukee Brewers have the greatest home-run hitter in major league baseball history as their designated hitter.

Aaron, who began his pursuit of Babe Ruth's all-time home run record in Milwaukee 21 years ago and shattered it last April 8, was traded to the Brewers by the Atlanta Braves, the two clubs announced Saturday.

Just last April, shortly after his historic 715th homer, Aaron said he was through chasing records. "I don't want to start on records again," he said. "Nobody's going to talk me into coming back for another year."

Every pheasant hunting opener finds hundreds of "harvested" birds winding up in the trash barrels. It's a shameful waste but it's true.

The reasons are hunters too lazy to clean the game or families unwilling to eat it. Joan Cone, West Virginian author of "Easy Game Cooking" has a few ideas for the wives who shutter at the thought of "game taste."

"First, I'd like to say I have never in my life found game with the real gamey taste," Mrs. Cone said while attending the Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt in Silver Creek this week.

"If there is this taste, it all goes back to the field. People don't know what to do with the game in the field. You've got to take care of that animal immediately. The sooner you gut the animal, cool it and get it into the freezer the better it will taste."

Mrs. Cone is only echoing the thoughts the knowledgeable hunters and writers have been talking about for years. But she is a cook book author the wives can associate with, so tack another direction of attack, game eaters.

Special Needs for Taste

She takes an extra moment or two while talking of game cooking and care to point out it is especially important to immediately clean a gut-shot animal since the internal rupture will rapidly spoil meat or give it what some consider the strong game taste.

"The second most important thing in game care is wrapping properly for the freezer," Mrs. Cone continued. "Cut out or clean out the blood clots, wash thoroughly and you're ready for the freezer."

"Here's where most people make their mistake. Like quail. I wrap quail individually in the small baggies, then put them into a large freezer bag. I don't put six or eight in together so when I go to get out four quail I can get four and don't have to thaw six frozen together."

"Always use double protection to guard against puncture and freezer burn. If you are using a foil, use a heavy foil and wrap twice or use the best quality freezer bags. And a number of people don't know enough to properly date their game so they'll be using the freshest game first."

Game Budgeting Supplement

With the rising cost of meats, Mrs. Cone expressed surprise anyone would throw away or give away game or fish they had harvested. What better hobby could give the budget a break.

Another clue to taming the gamey taste is parboiling such game as rabbit, coon, squirrel, and throw the water off and start again with fresh water, according to Mrs. Cone. This helps to tenderize as well as tame the taste of the little critters.

"I don't really want to get rid of all the game taste," she said, explaining. "The beauty of game is that it tastes different. There is no real reason to shoot the game if you're going to make it taste like beef or chicken."

And disguising the taste with sauces or dressings is a no, no, according to the cooking expert. "Why hide the taste of something that tastes that good?"

So you hunters whose families aren't game eaters, maybe it's your own fault. Take care of the game in the field and it'll take care of the family on the table.

Pheasant Report

Pheasant and quail season opened in Nebraska on a rather low key Saturday with fewer hunters than usual and a low number of birds bagged.

Game and Parks Commission conservation officers and check station personnel generally reported declines in both hunting pressure and success on pheasants with the exception of a few localities in the southwest part of the state.

Only appreciable success on quail was reported in the prime bobwhite country of extreme southeast Nebraska and success there was below last year's level.

The drop in hunting success was predictable since game population was lower this year due to poor hatches and a decline in habitat.

Weather and field conditions were ideal for the opener in the eastern two-thirds of the state where skies were clear and temperatures were moderate.

In the west, however, hunters were hampered by fog, mist and rain.

In general, hunters were on their good behavior with conservation officers reporting few game law violations.

In the Panhandle, fog, mist and rain made for a bleak opener for most hunters, but one party in central Box Butte County got some unexpected excitement when he spotted a huge animal in the field.

In some localities, as few as one in five managed to bag a ringneck while other localities produced about a bird per man.

Hunters in northeast Nebraska had perfect conditions with from 50 to 85 per cent of the crops harvested. Hunters averaged about a bird apiece in the better areas but put in more than two hours for each ringneck.

A few quail, some cottontails and squirrels were also bagged with an occasional duck.

Best success seemed to be in the Greeley, Wheeler and Platte County areas.

In much of southeast Nebraska, quail hunting was the big thing. In the best quail areas, gunners reported taking two or three birds apiece. Pheasant hunting in most of the southeast was slow, although the harvest is well under way and field conditions were good.

In some localities as few as one hunter in four bagged a ringneck while areas produced about a bird per man.

Tschupp Takes Proper Steps, Gets 300

By Bob Moyer

Greg Tschupp felt his bowling had not been consistent this year. So he took steps to change that.

That is, he took one more step. But the outcome was right and Wednesday night at Hollywood Bowl the result was the fourth 300 game bowled in Lincoln this fall.

"Two days before I decided I hadn't been consistent enough," said Tschupp, a senior at Nebraska, whose parents live in Bellevue. "I had so many things to think about when I was bowling, I decided it just shouldn't be so hard."

So Tschupp went from a four-step to a five-step approach and two days later — bingo! A 300.

"The five-step approach felt so easy, I was hoping I'd bowl well," said Tschupp. "Everything was so smooth. It was hard to see how it could quit after I got a few strikes."

"But I don't know how I ever threw that last ball," laughed Tschupp. "It really felt good when it was a strike."

The first week of fall leagues this year, Tschupp came close to a 300, recording a 288.

"I got the first ten strikes but I got nervous and pulled the ball and left a single pin on the next shot," said Tschupp, adding that coming close to a 300 before was no real aid in getting a 300.

Greg Tschupp

"After you get the first seven or eight in a row, the pressure is still there no matter how many times you do it," said Tschupp. "Those last three balls are the toughest you'll ever throw."

Tschupp's experimentation goes further than altering his approach.

"I bought a new ball four weeks ago," Tschupp noted. "I got a Manhattan rubber ball. I know a lot of the guys are saying that you should be using a plastic ball, but I thought I'd try something different."

Tschupp says he first started bowling because his family bowled. "My father is in the Air Force and I started bowling in Japan about nine years ago. Then when we moved to Bellevue I bowled in junior leagues."

Tschupp says he can't credit any one person for his bowling success, but noted that "junior leagues really helped a lot because you pick up the basics there. The rest is just practicing and watching other people bowl and learning what you can from them."

The 21-year-old senior is one of Lincoln's busiest bowlers. Tschupp bowls in three city leagues, two at Hollywood and one at Plaza, a fourth at the Union lanes. He's a member of the university bowling team. Tschupp's highest average is in the Hollywood Classic League (193), where he rolled the perfect game.

As a member of the NU kegler squad, he competes in a traveling league that includes teams from Kansas, Kansas State and Wichita State. He also competes in a postal league against teams from the Midwest, including Iowa State, UNO, Oklahoma State and the three teams in the traveling league.

In other action, Mike Evans recorded the week's top series with a 730 at Plaza. Evans also had a 677 series at Hollywood.

Mike Harre picked the wrong week to bowl a high game as his 290 was overshadowed by Tschupp's 300, but was still good enough to earn $100 from Plaza Bowl.

Top women's game of the week was a 238 by Bonnie Kohlhof at Plaza. Laura Taylor had a 233 at Hollywood. Top women's series was a 589 by Diane Gross at Plaza Bowl.

Carolyn Foss achieved distinction by rolling a 185 all-spare game at Parkway Lanes.

Grand National Hits Pleasing Note

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Writer

Silver Creek — For three days every year Silver Creek undergoes a massive change. From a quiet, peaceful farming community of 490 people, the tiny dot on the Nebraska map becomes a nationally prominent star as Conservation City, U.S.A.

With few exceptions, all the townsfolk of Silver Creek pull out the stops in hosting national celebrities, state sportsmen and area folks for three of the most gratifying days of the year with the Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt.

The Grand National is more than a hunt. As founder Dr. Bruce Cowgill puts it, "Conservation is the key."

Dr. Cowgill, former Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Conservationist of the Year Award winner, initiated a conservation of habitat program (Acres for Wildlife) several years back. From that program, encouraging farmers and other landowners to keep wildlife cover lands out of crop production, Dr. Cowgill and the townsfolk of Silver Creek created the Grand National to promote the idea of hunting going hand-in-hand with conservation.

From its first year in 1972, the Grand National has grown. This year's celebrity list included three-time repeater Roger Nelson of the Cincinnati Reds baseball team and two-time repeater astronaut Commander Paul Weitz. Neither could miss the Grand National, they said.

Leader of the "Over the Hill Gang" of past professional baseball greats, Hank Bauer, said, "This is great. I'm lovin' it. You can definitely write we all had the best 'coon hunt we've ever been on. Of course, it was also our first but it was one helluva lot of fun."

Bauer headed a team of former stars Whitey Herzog (now Chicago White Sox coach), Norm Siebern (now an insurance salesman in Kansas City), and Jay Hankins (currently a professional baseball talent scout) on the festivities which began with Thursday night's racoon hunt along the Platte and Loup River systems near here.

All the celebrity groups bagged a racoon, including astronauts Weitz and Ron Evans with their sons Matt and John, respectively. The National Rifle Association sponsored a women's team which included author Joan Cone, Outdoor Writers Association of America board member Sheila Link, Denver policewomen and world champion caliber handgun shooter Ida Younger McKinney, big game hunter Pat Auld of Texas, and NRA executive secretary Martell Lovelace.

Cincinnati Reds Clay Kirby, Tommy Hall and Gary Waits joined Nelson, along with Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher Jim Rooker. The Grand Old Guys team of stars included Gen. Jimmy Doolittle, Jim Olt of Olt Game Calls, NRA and retired Mexican border patrol officer Bill Jordan, Winchester/Western representative Jerry Lambert and local sportsmen added to the list of happy hunters.

Following the Thursday night 'coon hunt, Friday morning brought the celebrities a taste of what Nebraska's duck hunters have been experiencing — no luck. Few ducks or geese in the area provided sparse shooting for the hunters during a morning-long ground fog covered hunt.

Friday afternoon proved more eventful as the fog lifted and so did the stars — building brush piles for wildlife on farms surrounding Silver Creek.

Then it was more eventful squirrel/rabbit hunting and Saturday's main event, the pheasant and quail season opener on the Grand National's Conservation Day.

Grand National and Silver Creek Civic Club president Evelyn Robak had predicted the 1974 event to be the best of all. Dr. Cowgill agreed she had accurate forethought.

"This whole thing is really tremendous," astronaut Evans chimed. "I'd definitely like to come back to something like this again."

Bauer and his "Over the Hill Gang" agreed, as did the Reds, the NRA's Grand Gals and all comers.

The friendly competition of the participating teams saw the Grand Old Guys and the Cincinnati Reds declared co-champs, outpointing the rest of the field during the combination hunt.

World famous game, call maker Jim Olt (right) gives duck calling lessons to Winchester/Western's Jerry Lambert during Grand National Mixed Bag Hunt duck hunt Friday at Silver Creek. Olt managed to pull two teal into gun range but duck numbers didn't lend themselves toward a buddy hunt.

The ski season is upon us, as instructor and class slither down the slopes of Colorado's Steamboat Springs' "champagne powder" ski run. This year will mark a substantial growth in the outdoor sport's participation level.

National Ski Interest Increases

By Harvey Duck

(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Where have all the skiers come from?

A recent survey indicates that almost 550,000 Americans will take to the slopes this winter — most of them spending a minimum of 10 days on skis.

They will spend, according to the National Sporting Goods Assn., approximately $184 million on equipment and clothing. The figure does not include money spent for transportation to ski areas, lodging or food.

The $184 million represents an increase over the $88.4 million spent in 1970 and the $9.9 million of 1951.

Ski industry representatives expect the recent annual 15 per cent skier increase to continue through the next decade and anticipate that 10 million Americans will be participating in the sport in 1979 and 20 million in 1984.

The growing popularity of skiing has bolstered state tourism programs and private industry. For example, last year skiers contributed $83 million to Colorado's economy. Of that, $50 million came from out-of-state skiers.

In addition to the development of major ski resort areas, other factors have contributed to the growth of the sport. Sking has benefited by the marketing and scheduling efforts of the transportation industry, the development of safer equipment, and the ease of learning to ski through new methods of professional instruction and the mechanization of lift systems for transporting skiers up the mountain.

Air transportation, in particular, has had a positive effect with its commitment to promotional marketing and increased scheduling to winter vacation gateway cities. United Air Lines, for example, has budgeted $500,000 to promote skiing in the Western United States. United also pioneered snowbird flights from major East, West and Midwest cities to such ski gateways as Denver, Grand Junction, Salt Lake City and Reno. Other airlines including Continental and American also have developed a wide array of package plans, which make skiing in the U.S. competitive price-wise with European skiing.

Skiing was first introduced in the U.S. by Scandinavian miners who came to California's Sierra Mountains in search of gold during the middle of the 19th century. By the turn of the century ski clubs were forming all over the country. Skiing in the form of leisure activity caught fire with the opening of a ski school at Franconia, New Hampshire, in 1929.

The mechanization came about in the 1930s, a decade that saw the U.S. host the 3D Winter Olympic Games and, in sequence, gain its first ski tow, ski resort and chairlift. Rope-tows today are not considered the most glamorous way to get up a mountain, but the first one at Woodstock, Vt., in 1934 enabled people to get in nearly 10 times as much skiing as they had previously.

Sun Valley, Idaho, built by the Union Pacific Railroad and Averell Harriman, opened in 1936 and was the first real breakthrough in ski marketing. In addition to putting Sun Valley on the map, the investors installed the world's first chair lift.

The next major advancement followed World War II, when members of the famed 10th Mountain Division returned from the war to become the driving force in the renewed growth of the leisure sport. By the 1950s, skiing had become a profitable business. Ski areas increased from 40 to 200 during that decade.

The next 10 years ushered in more leisure time, income, population, improved ski areas and convenient transportation. Ski marketing accelerated with the 1960 Olympic Games at Squaw Valley.

Until then, ski resorts might see 50,000 skier days annually (400 skiers a day in a 125-day season). At $5 a lift ticket, the industry realized about $250,000 annually. Today, a major ski resort may have 500,000 skier days (at $9 a lift ticket) or 4,000 skiers a day for a $4.5 million lift ticket income.

A 70-page complaint has been filed with the federal Health, Education and Welfare Dept. charging the University of Nebraska with sex discrimination. The Federal Power Commission has ordered the Nebraska Public Power District to halt certain construction at the Gerald G. Thompson Station power plant near Sutherland. Nebraska government's general fund cash balance dropped more than $20 million to $46,952,964 in October. Kurt D. Rasmussen of Omaha, Democratic candidate for state treasurer, has filed suit against Westroads Shopping Center following his arrest there Oct. 19 for what police said was his failure to obey requests by Westroads officials to close handing out campaign literature and a later request to leave.

A civil rights suit has been filed in U.S. District Court charging Lincoln Police Chief Joe Carroll and Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas with ignoring certain gambling activities in Lincoln while harassing others. A Lincoln WIN committee formed out of dissatisfaction with President Ford's economic policies says increased unemployment, extra taxes on the middle-income citizen and high interest rates will do little to stop inflation. A local community health care association has been notified it will receive a $50,000 federal grant to study the feasibility of establishing a health maintenance organization (HMO) in Lincoln. Capital City residents are paying less for gasoline than outstate Nebraskans.

Prep Panorama

By Randy York

Stuckey's off the Seward exit on Interstate-80 isn't exactly your most likely spot for a dramatic sports event. But Saturday morning, it hosted one... if you can call a coin flip dramatic.

"I thought we might create more interest if we conducted it on the 50-yard line at Memorial Stadium or in the rotunda of the State Capitol. But we decided to settle on Stuckey's," Crete football coach Larry Frost acknowledges.

Crete and York tying for the Eastern Division championship in the Central 10 Conference with 3-0-1 records precipitated the coin flip to determine the representative in the league playoff game.

And guess what? When the coin turned up heads, Crete broke a season-long losing streak despite an unbeaten season. The Cardinals won the toss and will host Ord in the playoff Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m.

"Believe it or not we went 0-for-8 on coin flips before games this season," notes Frost. "It's been that kind of a year (Crete has three ties in eight games)."

Actually, Crete's losing streak on coin flips extended to nine at one point Saturday in the get-together with York coach Tom McClelland.

After 0-For-9, No Way

The first flip came up heads, which means that he (McClelland) got to call the big one," relates Frost. "He called tails and it came up heads. I knew our odds were 50-50 going into this thing. But after going 0-for-9, I thought to myself 'no way.'"

If Frost thought no way, backtrack your calendars about two months ago. People were saying "no way" about two Class B football teams, too — Lincoln Pius X and Norris.

Now, in light of Lexington's hijacking Ord (30-8) Friday night, Pius X looms the foremost candidate to assume No. 1 when the Class B ratings are announced Monday.

It puts the 'Bolts in solid contention for a repeat state championship. It seems pertinent to refresh memories. Pius X had lost all 22 starters from last year!

Although it would have spelled REBUILD to most people, it didn't necessarily spell that to 1973 Sunday Journal and Star High School Coach of the Year Vince Aldrich.

He maintained in August that he had some first-rate athletes around whom to build. Maturity was the key. Aldrich nurtured that maturity and even though the season's not over by any means, he and chief assistant Don Kelley have produced another superlative coaching effort.

The same can be said for Norris, which not only needed to rebuild its team, but its coaching staff as well. The consolidated school located between Hickman and Firth, 16 miles south of Lincoln, went 9-1 last year.

More Than Just Groundwork

"But we lost almost everyone, including three coaches," relates veteran Norris coach Ken Kasperek. "I was sincere when I told our coaches before the season to take it easy and lay some groundwork for next year."

"The week before our first game, we had an intra-squad scrimmage and our second team beat our first team, 18-0. In 19 years of coaching, I'd never had that happen. I thought the hand-writing was on the wall," offers Kasperek, whose team finished 7-0-2 with Friday's 14-14 tie against Crete.

"When the second team beat our first team, we huddled up and talked it over. Maybe that's when we became a team," theorizes Kasperek.

Our kids this year were young (only four senior offensive starters and five senior defensive regulars). They weren't as physical as last year, but they're fantastic. They go out there and think they're Notre Dame," according to Kasperek.

It's interesting to note that another school's second team defeated its first team in a full game scrimmage the week before the season opened.

Would you believe that it happened on a practice field near 70th and A Sts. in Lincoln? More precisely, at East High, which happens to be 9-0 and under consideration for the No. 1 Class A rating.

Spartan coach Lee Zentic and his staff take a back seat to no one. As the commercial used to go, they've "come a long way" since that loss to the second team.

City Finals LHS Scores Spot Replay Archery Win

The City Recreation Flag Football playoff will feature a rematch of last years finalists Monday evening for the city title.

The Husker Bowl will pit the Misty Lounge, winner of the city's Uni League, against the Salem Oilers, the Elk's League champs at 7 p.m. at Elks Field.

The Oilers won this grudge match last year when a deflected pass was corraled by Guy Ingles for a touchdown and a 19-13 win.

Misty Lounge is coached by Jim Kraus and is comprised mainly of AAA Fastpitch Softball league players, while the Salem Oilers are coached and quarterbacked by Chuck Salem.

Columbus — The Lincoln High School archers won the team championship at the Invitational High School-College Archery Tournament held here Saturday. Lincoln High set a new team scoring mark of 2740, topping the old record of 2594.

Chris Beardslee, Bill Beardslee, John Klien and Art Knox led Lincoln High, with Chris Beardslee winning the individual competition with a score of 792, and John Klien taking third place with a score of 736.

Pam Boges of Lincoln Southeast took third place in the girls division with a score of 560.

Pate Leads World Golf

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic (UPI) — Jerry Pate ended anybody's doubts that his U.S. Amateur Championship was a fluke when he shot a one-under-par 71 Saturday to tie for medal honors and lead the United States to its fourth successive world amateur golf championship.

Pate, a senior at the University of Alabama, produced the round the U.S. needed after its seven-stroke lead over Japan had dwindled to one in the morning half of play.

Yancey-Sneed Leading

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Bert Yancey and Ed Sneed combined their talents for a best-ball 63, nine under par, and moved into a onestroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 National Team Golf Championship.

Sneed, winner of the Milwaukee Open earlier this year and the veteran Yancey had a 54-hole total of 189, an eye-popping 27 strokes under par on the 7,162-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World.

"The psychology of this kind of an event is so much different from the regular tournament," Sneed said. "It can be that 65 is a real good score."

WINTER PASSENGER CAR TIRE GUARANTEE

Montgomery Ward guarantees each of its passenger car winter tires for a specified number of months from the time of purchase, when used on passenger cars or station wagons, except taxis. If your tire becomes unserviceable during this time because of:

- defects in material or workmanship,
- a normal road hazard failure,
- premature tread wearout (2/32 inches or less remaining).

Montgomery Ward will:

1. During the first 10% of the guarantee period, replace the tire free.
2. During the remaining portion of the guarantee period, replace it for a pro-rata charge based on months of ownership.

Nail punctures repaired free during the entire guarantee period. For guarantee service and adjustments, return tire to any Montgomery Ward branch with the Guarantee Booklet issued at the time of sale. Charge after first 10% of guarantee period based on selling price in effect at the time of return at branch to which returned, including federal excise tax.

Winter passenger tires used on taxicabs and motor vehicles other than passenger cars are guaranteed on the same basis against defects in material and workmanship only.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Defensive back Jeff Hite scored on a 79-yard pass interception and a 21-yard steal of a kickoff lateral Saturday and Penn State's ransacking defensive line kept 12th-ranked Maryland off balance long enough for the No. 8 Nittany Lions to pull out a 24-17 victory.

The Lions were back to their own 12-yard line with only 2:29 remaining in the game but held on a third-and-three rush into the line and Terp quarterback Bob Avellini's desperation pass to Walter White fell incomplete at the five.

The regionally televised game, before 60,465 fans at Beaver Stadium and scouts from five major bowls, spoiled the Terps' best chances in 13 seasons to dump the Lions, who hold a 20-1 edge in the series.

Defensive end Greg Murphy sacked Avellini four times and tackle Mike Quinn joined on two sacks to offset a vulnerable defensive secondary which yielded 302 yards through the air. Avellini, who completed 18 passes in 34 attempts, had been sacked only once in seven prior games.

In the first quarter Avellini had backed the Lions to their own 21 on a 42-yard pass to John

Schultz before Hite, who also had 13 tackles, picked off a flat pass and raced alone into the end zone.

Avellini found tight end Walter Light racing through the Penn State middle and hit him with a 34-yard pass early in the second quarter to knot the score at 7-7.

Penn State scored twice and Maryland once in a wild 25-second period with just over four minutes remaining in the half.

It began with Tom Shuman's seven-yard scoring bullet to Chris Barvinchak with 4:33 left. On the ensuing kickoff Hite intercepted a lateral from Rick Jennings to Carter in stride at the 21 and raced into the end zone for his second touchdown. On the next play from scrimmage Avellini evaded the Lion rush to find White again through the middle for a 66-yard touchdown pass.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Longhorns, led by Marty Akin's two touchdowns, drove for scores on four straight possessions with the wind at their backs Saturday to defeat Southern Methodist 35-15 and keep alive their hopes for a seventh straight Southwest Conference title.

Quarterback Akin, running the Longhorns' triple option to perfection, ran eight yards for one touchdown for one touchdown and passed eight yards to wide receiver Pat Padgett for another to lead the Texas offensive effort.

Freshman fullback Earl Campbell bulled three yards for another Texas score, and halfback Raymond Clayborn took a last minute pitch from Akin on the option play and stepped one yard for a touchdown. Halfback Gralyn Wyatt scored from three yards out with 20 seconds left.

SEATTLE (UPI) — Dennis Fitzpatrick scored one touchdown Saturday and passed for another to pace Washington to a 31-9 Pacific Eight Conference football victory over UCLA.

The loss, UCLA's eighth straight in Husky Stadium, dealt a heavy blow to the Bruins' Rose Bowl hopes.

Washington scored the first touchdown of the game on a five-yard pass from Fitzpatrick to tight end Paul Bianchini.

The touchdown was set up when linebacker Dan Lloyd intercepted Bruin quarterback Steve Bukich's pass on the UCLA 32.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Fifth-ranked Notre Dame, out-fought and stunned by underdog Navy for three periods, finally scored twice in the fourth quarter on a pass and an interception to squeeze out a hard-fought 14-6 victory Saturday over the Middies.

Navy, a 32-point underdog, led 6-0 after three quarters on the strength of two field goals by Steve Dykes and the punting of John Stufflebeem, which kept Notre Dame continually bottled up.

But the Irish finally got good field position on the Navy 28 after a 16-yard punt return and five plays later quarterback Tom Clements hit split end Pete Demmerle in the far corner of the end zone at 10:04 of the fourth quarter and Dave Reeve

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Stumpy, steam rolling Steve Baird scored twice and Neil Jeffrey tossed a touchdown pass Saturday to give Baylor an easy 21-7 conquest of Texas Christian and keep the surprising Bears alive in the Southwest Conference race.

Baird, a 5-7, 196-pound senior who came into the game as the ninth leading scorer in the nation, picked up his 10th touchdown of the year on a 12-yard run in the second quarter and then scored his 11th of the season on a three-yard burst in the third quarter.

Jeffrey had given Baylor a first quarter score with a 20-yard touchdown pass to flanker Alcy Jackson and on that drive, Baird picked up 48 yards of the 68-yard drive.

Washington State, outplayed badly in the first half, came back after intermission with a tight defense and smoothworking offense. Bennet passed for one touchdown and plunged one yard for the winning tally early in the final period.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Fullback Mike Pruitt ripped Iowa for two touchdowns, one on a record 94-yard romp, Saturday and Purdue smashed the Hawkeyes in a Big Ten clash, 38-14.

Pruitt rushed for 179 yards in 10 carries and scored Purdue's first two touchdowns in the opening period.

He squirmed off tackle for 15 yards tally with just over five minutes left in the quarter. With 33 seconds left in the period, he moved over guard and burst into the open for the 94 yard dash — the longest run any Boilermaker has ever made from scrimmage.

The upstart Middies increased the margin to 6-0 at 5:43 of the third quarter when Dykes booted a 37-yard field goal.

The field goal was set up when Stufflebeem faked a punt from his own 36-yard line and passed to halfback Cleveland Cooper for a first down on the Notre Dame 19.

Notre Dame, 7-1, was able to mount only one sustained drive in the first half when it went from its own 20 to the Navy 9, but was held and Reeve missed a 27-yard field goal attempt.

Popularity Is Money Dilemma For Museums

Several museums have opened their doors to the public in the last few months, but they may have opened their doors to more than they bargained.

Such museums include the new Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, D.C., the International Center of Photography in New York City, the Museum of Cartoon Art in Greenwich, Conn., and the Wine Museum of San Francisco.

Plans are afoot for a Brooklyn Bridge Museum and for a library-museum in Ashland, Ala., in memory of the late Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

America is experiencing a museum explosion. But it is also a time of crisis for these depositories of memorabilia. They are fast becoming victims not only of financial difficulties common to all cultural institutions but of special problems arising from their own spectacular popularity.

Increased leisure time, higher standards of education among young people and imaginative new exhibition techniques are credited.

Yet in the face of growing demand, more than one-third of existing institutions have been forced to reduce their facilities, services or staff. Even in 1939 a study noted: "Museum income is never adequate." Now, against a background of inflation in the U.S. economy, museums must deal with the additional expenses generated by increased attendance.

The first truly public museum came with the French Revolution, when the republican government transformed the Louvre palace into a national museum. Unlike the aristocrats who provided material for the Louvre and other European museums, rich men in the United States willingly gave lavish support, in the form of both collections and cash, to establish museums.

But the state of the American economy today has hurt the flow of gifts and lowered the value of the museums' own portfolios. These two sources, along with operating revenues such as admission fees and sales from museum shops, make up most of the income of the private, nonprofit museums. These museums amount to about two-thirds of the total number in America.

Federal funds amount to just 2% of the private nonprofit museums' budgets, and many museum professionals feel more government support is crucial if museums are to survive. Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate subcommittee on arts and humanities, said, "All who have studied museums... would agree that our museums need more federal help than they are now receiving."

The works of art, historic objects and scientific collections in America's museums constitute a priceless national resource. The ability of museums to adapt to meet changing demands has helped them to achieve their current success. Yet there are serious problems for them to overcome if they are to be able to continue growing and to keep fulfilling the traditional museum functions: collecting, preserving, studying and exhibiting the objects which man makes and which make up the world around man.

Decade Spurs State Museum Growth

By Bart Becker

When the decision-makers of the School of Natural History at Oxford opted to open the Ashmolean Museum for public perusal in 1683, little did they realize what they had wrought.

Within 150 years some of the most elaborate and valuable private collections of art and artifacts had been opened to the public. The British Museum, 1759; The Louvre in Paris, 1793; and The Prado in Madrid, 1819, put on exhibit treasures the common citizenry had never before had the chance toogle.

The New World joined the flurry of exhibitionism. The first United States museum opened in Charleston, S.C., during the summer of 1773. It still exists but has become lost in the crowd.

The country is experiencing a museum boom. A new repository opens somewhere in the U.S. every day, adding to the existing 5,000. And, according to the American Association of Museums, 700 million people visit them annually.

Memorabilia Myriad

Nebraska has not been tardy in the contemporary rush of museum foundings. The state's centennial celebration in 1967 and a continued sense of history fostered by the upcoming U.S. Bicentennial in 1976 have materialized in a myriad of historical societies and pioneer Nebraska memorabilia.

The past decade has seen the birth of more of these than the previous half-century.

In 1964, the Dixon County Historical Society Museum at Allen and North Platte's Buffalo Bill's State Historical Park, featuring Wild West Show materials, open their doors.

The next year featured a flurry of openings. The Knight Museum at Alliance, Antelope County Historical Collection housed in an old jail at Neligh and the White Horse Ranch Museum of the North Central Nebraska Historical Society at Stuart led the way.

Gearing up for the centennial, a passel of county historical societies opened exhibition halls in 1967. That year also featured the opening of the Stuhr Museum of the Prairie Pioneer at Grand Island.

The major museum entry in 1968 was the John G. Neihardt Foundation museum at Bancroft, featuring pioneer materials and the literary works of the late Nebraska poet laureate.

The decade closed with another group of museums joining the growing list of Nebraska showplaces.

Dues And Donations

Most of the county museums are funded by membership dues and contributions, according to Paul Riley of the State Historical Society. But "an increasing number" are receiving a county mill levy, which must be approved in a county-wide referendum.

The pace of the late Sixties has slackened somewhat, but continued steadily into the Seventies. Neither the State Historical Society nor the State Department of Economic Development has an accurate, up to date accounting of Nebraska's current museums. UNL folklorist Roger Welsh said he wouldn't envy the person with the job of compiling such a roster.

But while the calculation is crude, the implication is clear: Nebraska museums are opening and expanding at a pace paralleling the national rate.

Most privately owned collections feature pioneer memorabilia, or antique farm equipment similar to the exhibits in the municipal or historical society museums. Some, like Jo Gerken's Doll Museum at Palmyra, share life-long hobbies with the public.

Visitor Total

Nebraska State Historical Society director Marvin Kivett reported 145,507 visitors to the various Historical Society branches around the state during the last fiscal year.

While attendance at the main branch in Lincoln dropped 12%, due to scarce parking near the museum, Kivett said, attendance at Ft. Robinson was up 50%. Chimney Rock enjoyed a slight 2% increase in attendance and a Historical Society trailer at the State Fair drew 10,000.

Kivett said the State Historical Society has no "systematic way" to judge the volume of visitors to the county historical museums. But he said, "The general feeling is that attendance is down about 10%. This is probably a barometer of less tourism in general."

Sheldon Art Gallery, on the other hand, is enjoying its best year ever in attendance. Through Oct. 1, 88,092 art-lovers visited Sheldon. That was easily ahead of the record 1973 pace when 79,528 had visited the gallery by the same date. Total attendance in 1973 was 107,000.

Food Stamps: What's Generosity Costing?

Washington — The federal food stamp program, in fattening the poor man's diet, costs the American consumer twice — first in taxes to pay for the program and again in higher food prices brought on by higher demand.

In an inflated, contracting economy, the question is bound to arise: what price generosity? And arise just when more buys less, even for the poor.

The food stamp program is still a baby. But it is growing rapidly. Today it costs the nation $3.9 billion annually, 22 times more than it did in 1967, and it serves 13.5 million people, five times as many as in 1967.

The U.S. Agriculture Dept. is spending $6 billion annually — two-thirds of its budget — on food stamps and other free food programs from school lunches to richer diets for pregnant women of low income.

The food stamps alone account for 2.5% of the $160 billion all Americans spend on food each year — enough to increase the cost of everyone's food because of the higher demand at the market place.

Dr. Alden Manchester, a food consumption analyst in the Agriculture Dept.'s Economic Research Service, says that of a 15% food-price increase expected this year, "maybe one or two percentage points" are due to the extra spending power afforded by food stamps.

That means a family which spent $100 monthly on food last year is spending $115 monthly today. And food stamps are the reason for $1 or $2 of the inflation.

"It's a minor cost," said Manchester. "But nobody's going to argue that food stamps don't have something to do with it."

Nevertheless, without a food stamp program the alternative for many Americans might be hunger and malnutrition.

Food stamps are now so woven into the fabric of American life — like welfare, social security and medicare — that many Americans depend on them.

Oddly enough they even benefit the American farmer — as an indirect and slight subsidy for his products.

Even now there are political pressures building to expand food stamps. Suits are pending against 17 states and the Agriculture Dept., arguing they must obey a Congressional mandate to reach out and enroll more poor people in the program.

One organization pressing the suits estimates there may be up to 50 million people eligible for food stamps — roughly one out of every four Americans.

Many people on food stamps find them inadequate, even with a recent 4% cost-of-living boost. Indeed, the adequacy of the program was a focus of the Symbionese Liberation Army's (SLA) propaganda ransom for Patty Hearst.

The SLA demanded $70 worth of meats, vegetables and dairy products for every poor person in California.

Not surprisingly, thousands of people lined up to collect the bounty.

Today, in San Francisco, some food stamp recipients still criticize the program. Noley Scott, 50, is unemployed, disabled with a broken back, and collects less than $300 a month in disability, welfare and social security payments.

He qualified for $37 in food stamps each month, but says it buys only $22 worth of groceries at today's inflated prices. "I've tried getting more, tried talking to my social worker," he said, "but it's hell."

On the other hand, there's Alice French, 20, an expectant mother, who shops on San Francisco's Market Street. She says her allotment of food stamps — under $100 a month — is more than adequate for herself and her husband.

"We've been doing okay. We don't eat an awful lot, so my husband, and I are kind of oblivious to the whole food price problem. I don't eat meats or fish, so I buy lots of vegetables, whatever happens to be on sale, or in season."

"When the baby's born in December, we'll qualify for an increase in stamps. But I don't know if we'll really need it. We usually have a surplus at the end of every month now."

Any social program centrally based has its inequities. Food stamps are not unique.

Hugo Menendez is an assistant manager of a Safeway supermarket on Market street where shoppers bring their orange, maroon and blue food stamps.

Mostly, says Menendez, the stamps are helpful, "but sometimes the wrong ones get the stamps... Especially the younger people shouldn't get them. They're not sick. They should have jobs."

Menendez also sees other human inequities and bad planning at the personal level. Stamp users often buy high priced foods — steaks and fancy canned goods. "People are eating well on stamps. No doubt about it."

The food stamp program had its origins 35 years ago as only an experiment in Rochester, N.Y. Poor people, the New Deal of Franklin Roosevelt decided, should have the option of getting surplus farm products at grocery stores rather than at welfare offices.

So, on a spring day in 1939, the poor of Rochester began what today is a program that helps feed seven out of every 100 Americans.

True, the modern program began with President Kennedy's first executive order the day after his inauguration in 1961. After three years of pilot experiments, Congress sent the food stamp plan to President Johnson and it became a law of the land on Aug. 31, 1964.

Ten years later, every county in the U.S. has enrolled.

A huge federal bureaucracy works with state and local welfare officials to screen the millions of people seeking food stamp relief. The greatest concentration is in California, where 1.3 million get food stamps. New York and Texas each have 1.1 million people on stamps and Illinois is next with 826,000.

There is a wide range of eligibility. The booklet describing qualifications is 125 pages long.

A single person earning less than $20 monthly net income gets $46 monthly in free food stamps. At the other extreme, the free allotment is $256 for a household of eight with a net monthly income under $30. If there's more than eight in the household and the income is still under $30 monthly, then the Agriculture Dept. adds $22 in food stamps for each person beyond eight.

Welfare payments, Social Security and other benefits count as income. But taxes and certain other expenses can be deducted in determining net income.

The higher the net income, the more a person or a family must pay for a monthly food allotment. Thus, a family of four is eligible for $150 in free food stamps if its net income is less than $30 monthly.

But that household must pay $25 for the same $150 worth of food stamps if its net income is $100 a month, $55 for the $150 in stamps if the income is $200 a month, and so on up to a maximum net income of $510 monthly.

In this case the payment is $126 for $150 worth of stamps. Beyond $510 in net income, food stamp eligibility ends for a family of four.

A family of eight can qualify for food stamps with a maximum net income of $860, in which case the payment is $216 for $256 worth of stamps.

For all the restrictions and limitations, there are trouble spots. Virginia Evans, who is among nearly 11,000 persons in the District of Columbia currently getting food stamps — nearly one in every six of Washington's inhabitants — says poor people should get cash instead of coupons.

"I am a bargain shopper," Mrs. Evans, a widow, said in an interview. "All my food is not purchased at grocery stores. Some drug stores have better bargains and they don't take food stamps."

Her income consists of $137 a month in public assistance and less than $100 in Social Security Benefits. She receives $27 worth of free food stamps for herself and one of her children. But she said this isn't enough to bridge the gap between income and actual food cost of $102 to $112 monthly.

The idea of substituting cash for food stamps comes up periodically.

But the action prevails that some poor people, particularly those on welfare, do not manage finances properly and that food stamps, since they can be spent only for food, are more suitable.

"I see some advantage in cash, but I also see a difficulty in it," says Don Paarlberg, the Agriculture Dept.'s director of economics.

"The difficulty is that some of the people who would be getting this cash would spend it for liquor and cigarettes and a used Cadillac, and the kids in the family would still be without the necessary foods," he said.

Studies by the Agriculture Dept. show when families go into the food stamp program they often do not follow the recommended economy diet of beans, potatoes, peas and grains.

For one thing, says Manchester, food stamp families tend to eat more red meats, dairy products, fruits and vegetables than they did before.

"I don't think it goes anywhere like shifting from hamburger to porterhouse steaks, but it's shifting into beef from poultry and pork and beans — away from the things that you can just get by on."

Nebraska Racing Finishes

South Sioux City — The 177-day Nebraska horse racing season ended Saturday as Atokad Park concluded its 31-day meeting with its best meeting in history.

Atokad set an attendance record of 83,340 breaking last year's best (set during 32 days) of 81,823.

The mutual handle of $5,925,956 bettered last year's former record of $5,292,756. That averaged to $191,159 per day this year—up 11.9 per cent over last year's $170,734 daily average.

The Nebraska State Racing Commission will hold its annual fall meeting Monday and Tuesday in Omaha to determine next year's Nebraska racing schedule.

More Motorcycles On the Road

By Linda Ulrich
Not everyone who rides a motorcycle is a rough, tough creature wearing a black leather jacket and boots.

Not everybody who rides a motorcycle looks like they walked off the movie set of "Easy Rider."

Rapidly increasing motorcycle sales have led some folks to say there is a motorcycle movement in America. And if there is, movement is what it's all about — easy, economical transportation.

Thus, you see motorcycles maneuvered by men in business suits with briefcases strapped on back, teens in jeans, and yes, maybe even some of those legendary little old ladies in tennis shoes.

Some women may be joining the motorcycle movement because the women's movement has convinced them that learning to drive a motorcycle is not necessarily a sex-related skill; that a woman's place on a motorcycle is not necessarily passively clinging to the back of a male driver. But there may be all sorts of other reasons.

Twenty-four-year-old Chris Wollen is one of those women who handles the handlebars herself.

Owner of a Honda 175, she bought her bike in June. And already she is thinking about buying a bigger one. "I've just always liked bikes," she said.

Healthy Respect
She regards motorcycles the same way she regards guns: "I'm not afraid of them but I have a healthy respect for them."

But, she admits, other persons, mostly male, may regard her operating one a little differently.

"Some guys don't know how to handle it," she said. Thus some wisecracks and offers to help her start it come her way. That's probably because, she reasons, "motorcycles have been such a male dominated thing for so long now."

Regardless of the reason, she adds, "A lot of others think it's really great."

She thinks that women, like men, need to use common sense in operating motorcycles and she is safety-conscious, almost always wearing a helmet.

With the help of a friend, Chris has learned to check and change the oil, time her engine and check and replace the spark plugs.

Also capable of doing that sort of maintenance on her car, she thinks everyone is capable of learning those skills.

More Women
Is Chris a rarity? Perhaps, but there are more and more women like her, according to local motorcycle dealers.

Jerome Biskup of Jerryco Motors estimates that the number of women buying motorcycles has been increasing about 10 to 15% annually in the past three or four years.

A spokesperson for Joshua Motor Sports noted "a real big increase in the last year to year and a half" and Tom Dormer of Suzuki Motorcycle Center said the increase in women purchasing motorcycles for themselves is a 50% increase over two years ago.

Dennis Svoboda, salesman for Vespa of Nebraska, said the majority of the sales of his bikes are to women.

Wayne Green, chief examiner for the State Dept. of Motor Vehicles, said that while state statistics do not break down the number of males and females taking motorcycle driver's license examinations, a compilation of the number of motorcycle tests given in the month of June in Lancaster County showed that 230 males and 24 females took the test.

The number of persons taking the test has been increasing "by leaps and bounds," he said, adding that 15,153 motorcycle tests were given across the state from January through September of this year.

Reasons
Why are women buying bikes? Maybe for the same reasons as men. For fun and economy is Svoboda's reply. Basically for transportation, Biskup replied, adding that most of his female customers in their 20s are buying for transportation while women in their 30s and up often buy motorcycles for recreational purposes.

And, he said, a lot of women ride with their husbands for pleasure.

As for differences between male and female customers, all of the dealers interviewed agreed that generally women buy smaller bikes.

Biskup said most women buy a bike with an electric starter while the spokesperson for Joshua didn't feel that was necessarily a factor.

Women come in the shop on their own and they know what they want, the spokesperson added. She feels that women pay more attention to the appearance of the bike while men pay more attention to the engine.

But Dormer said the main difference between male and female customers is that they are less inclined to buy accessories.

Another difference is that women almost always leave servicing of their machines to dealers while more men don't, Biskup said.

Motorcycle fatality statistics make an overwhelming case for driver safety regardless of sex.

And while Dormer said he "honestly didn't know" if there was a difference in driver safety between men and women, the other dealers' consensus is that women are just as safe — if not safer — on the roads as men.

In most cases, the spokesperson for Joshua said, women may actually be better drivers than men because they are usually more cautious.

Chris Wollen . . . seldom seen on her motorcycle without her helmet.

J. Simmons Covets Role

Barbara Varro
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Jean Simmons as a bitch? She'd like to play one in a movie or on stage, but she doesn't know if the public would buy it. They're so used to her as a reserved but warmhearted British lady.

But her moss green eyes gladden and widen at the prospect of sinking her teeth into a meaty role as a real rotter.

"In one of my first films in England, Great Expectations, I played a real rotten kid. Now I'd like to have a go at a mature version of that kind of person."

Miss Simmons feels that role she's playing now in the touring company of A Little Night Music, her first stage musical, is a step in the right direction.

"Desiree is worldly and wise and very liberated lady," she said, referring to the aging actress she plays in the romantic comedy. "She's a free spirit with a sense of humor who gets on with things rather than simply sitting around and suffering. I like to think there's a little of desiree in me."

Though she talks freely about her career, Miss Simmons says she finds it difficult to discuss her private life in interviews. That British reserve surfacing again?

"I guess I'm really a boring person and not the stereotyped movie-star type," she said with a smile. "I knit and crochet at home, and Richard (her husband, director Richard Brooks) and I are not part of the Hollywood social set, though we get out once in a while."

Miss Simmons was enjoying her role as wife and mother to two daughters — Tracy, 18 (from her marriage to actor Stewart Granger), and Kate, 13 — when the part in A Little Night Music, was offered to her. She hadn't done a movie in two years and was taking lessons from voice coach George Griffin to lower her register.

"I just feel after a certain age, a woman shouldn't have a voice that's way up there, and I've always had a tiny voice," she explained.

The rural schoolhouse . . . not just a memory.

Memories of Rural Schools Made of This

By Marjorie Blankenbaker
Special Contributor

Once again school bells are ringing out across our nation, summoning teachers, pupils and school personnel daily to another term of educational learning. This marking my 19th year as a Nebraska elementary instructor my mind travels back in memory to the one room country school in Webster County, where my initial effort in the guidance of young minds took place.

An almost forgotten memo (except to us fortunate to have been a part of them) the rural school offered a unique education to both teacher and pupils.

There was the thrill of early September mornings, when the walk from my boarding house to the school would lead to encounters with a daring pheasant, frisky rabbits or blackbirds that seemed to be celebrating a final picnic before the long trip South. The white frame schoolhouse nestled in a valley of rainbow trees, and fields heavy with their yield of golden harvest.

Filled Lunches

We put our lunches in a little cloakroom adjacent to the main room. Most of the lunch pails were lard or syrup buckets scrubbed clean and packed with red fall apples, homemade bread and cookies; perhaps sandwiches of head cheese, chicken or leftovers of the morning's bacon.

In one corner of the cloakroom stood a large wooden crate; the top covered with oil cloth. This held a white enamel washpan, a towel and bar of soap. Here we washed our hands until freezing weather forced this part of the bathroom facility inside.

Drinking water was pumped from a nearby well. We had a brand new long handled dipper and the first health lesson always included instructing the kindergarten class not to pour their "slobbers" back into the bucket.

Our county superintendent installed room beautification and we soon learned to put up the student's art work to cover worn or cracked places in the wall plastering and grow sweet potato plants to hang in the windows.

We shared togetherness in those little schools and no one suffered from feelings of inadequacy. The long recitation bench was in the front of the room. If the child needed extra help with his lessons the regular teacher turned "Special Ed." Or a seventh or eighth grader might find time to help with the arithmetic combinations or spelling words.

We did our P.E. exercises at recess with baseball games and races.

November Chill
When a sullen November weather settled over the state, I learned to fire up a huge old wood-coal burning stove that stood in the rear of the room. My inadequacy at this art is unbelievable.

I first tried to burn coal, nothing else. Then coal and a newspaper. No results. Next I got the inspiration of adding a few cobs, wondering to myself why they had been put in the coal bin.

When I finally added kerosene to the cobs, results were obtained. I opened the stove door, stood half-way across the room and threw a lighted paper wad inside. Bing! I thought the judgement day had arrived prematurely for me; but the room was toasty warm before the pupils arrived. Each day I progressed in the art of fire building.

In the bitter cold winter morning classes were conducted back around the stove because the heat did not penetrate to the front of the room until about noon.

An important event in the school district was the annual Christmas program and decorating the little pine tree anchored precariously in the sandtable. Lessons were all but forgotten as the stage curtains were hung. With safety pins and paper clips they were snapped into an uncertain wire stretched to either side of the room. Where mice had enjoyed a lunch in the fabric we hung the star of Bethlehem or a smiling Santa.

There was no such thing as being grouped in a chorus. Each pupil was given the opportunity to be important in the eyes of his relatives and his peers. More feelings of worthiness.

In the early spring happy meadow larks returned to sit upon the window sills and sing the promise of summer vacation to us. The sound of tractors in the fields, and farm wagons rattling along with loads of seed bags gave evidence of spring planting time.

Relaxation

It became increasingly difficult to concentrate upon studies. Usually, we ate our lunch out under a shady tree on the north side of the schoolhouse, enjoying a full hour's relaxation from our labors.

Though I have taught several years in a small town school, I sometimes wishfully think how nice it would be to teach rural again. Here, you are able to be "Captain of your soul and master of your own destiny." We were "all things" to all students — a master combination of classroom teacher, friend, guidance counselor, nurse, art and music helper. It is virtually impossible to be all of this in today's school systems.

Because of consolidation of small schools into one large group, specially trained teachers in different areas of instruction are taking much of the classroom teacher's place.

But any type of school, large or small, humble or great presents a challenge to the teacher.

Whenever I feel blue and discouraged, the remembrance of two school incidents always brings back the humorous side of teaching.

The day was cold, the snow deep. A troubled girl came up to me to report on her little brother.

"Teacher, Johnny forgot his overshoes today and can't get out to the toilet. You know that vase out in the hall? — Oh, no, surely none of my second graders would stoop to this level!" — After a lecture on the necessity of keeping school rules and regulations, this question was asked.

"Mrs. Blankenbaker, did you come over with the Puritans?" The girl is fourth grade and it is a sincere question.

It's great to be a teacher.

Peacetime Soldier Fights New Battle

By Betty Stevens

"Any idiot can be a good soldier when the bands are playing, the flags are flying and the folks are cheering. Right now, it isn't easy."

When you talk with Maj. Gen. Francis L. Winner, Adjutant General of the Nebraska National Guard, you come away with two first impressions.

He's a human being, then a military officer and he likes a challenge as well as anything.

A Scottsbluff attorney when he was appointed adjutant two years ago, Winner said of his previous 15-year law career, "I had done all I was going to do. I had more or less arrived. It was getting repetitious."

He can't say the same thing about being Commander of Nebraska's military force. "A lot of variation. Everyday is different."

Molding Farm Boys

He sees his responsibility as turning "5,500 farm boys into soldiers and airmen and getting them all ready to go to a war we hope we never fight, or to handle a local emergency we hope never happens."

While the enemy is different in war and natural disaster, many of the same things are needed in the fight, Winner said. Organization — Transportation — Communication — Leadership — Resources — Moving people around — Same thing, really.

His job, Winner said, is an exercise in problem solving.

With the Guard in Nebraska at nearly 99% of its authorized strength, Winner is hoping to hit the 100% mark by the end of the year. The problem, after a blitz campaign, is not quantity but quality.

Winner estimates that legislation passed last year that pays one-half tuition to all state schools guardsmen has added about 300 enlistments. The bonus which gives a guardsman $100 per year for each year of a six year enlistment "Sweetens it up some. But if you've got a lemon unit with lemon leadership, the bonuses and the benefits just won't work."

One of Winner's immediate goals is the improvement of that leadership. "Only a little problem — not a severe one."

After field-training at Ft. Carson last June when temperatures were extreme and the wind blew at high velocity most of the time, Winner said he decided troops in training need some rudimentary shelter.

"I have insisted Ft. Carson come up with it and they are working on it, but they won't be able to provide for the whole contingent." Some Nebraska Guardsmen will be training at Camp Ripley, Minn. next summer and also Camp Guernsey, Wis., Winner said.

Defense Budget

Winner agreed the national military budget "Probably is too big. It's very complicated. The cost of getting a guy into an all-volunteer army and then training him is just enormous. I'd spend it different than they spend it in Washington, D. C., and that's all I want to say about that. I'm glad I'm here and not in the Pentagon."

Guard and reserve troops currently make up 40% of the U.S. military force and use only 6% of the defense budget, Winner said.

In favor of an all-volunteer army, Winner sees some dangers. "If the men don't come from a cross-section of society it will get out of kilter and just won't work."

Winner entered the Army near the close of WWII as an Army infantryman. He received an appointment to West Point and graduated in 1951. That graduation, he said, was the most exciting thing that's happened to him in the military despite his sister's reminder that it took him four years to learn what "90 Day Wonders" were learning in three months during the "Big War."

Korea to Creighton

After leading tank and cavalry units during the Korean War, Winner entered Creighton University and graduated with a law degree in 1958.

Out of uniform, Winner likes "to horse around with the kids." He and Mrs. Winner have six from three to 17 years old. "And I read a lot." He just finished "Plain Speaking," and "One Bridge Too Far."

He took up golf this summer because his two oldest sons play and he wanted to see if they were as good as they claim to be.

His oldest son, 14, hopes to attend the Air Force Academy. Academy Chief Hoyt Vandenburg Jr., was a West Point classmate of Winner's. "Vandenburg's father was the first Air Force Chief — a very decent guy and the son is just like the old man."

He said his oldest daughter, 17, plans to join the Air National Guard next year. "Her idea, not mine."

You ought to smile more Gen. Winner; you have a nice smile, this reporter said.

"Can't. When I do, someone always expects a promotion."

Maj. Gen. Francis L. Winner spoke in the rotunda of the State Capitol earlier this year when Nebraska military men who hold the Congressional Medal of Honor were cited.

Katherine Graham Labeled Most Powerful Woman

New York (UPI) — Katharine Graham is "the most powerful woman in America," says Ms. magazine in its October issue.

Mrs. Graham cringes at the label, saying "It makes me think of a female weight lifter."

Mrs. Graham, publisher of the Washington Post in the nation's capital, is responsible for a $247 million communications conglomerate, says Jane Howard who wrote the Ms. cover story.

Mrs. Graham is head of the Post company which owns six broadcasting stations, Newsweek, and its several subsidiaries, a news service shared with the Los Angeles Times, part of the International Herald Tribune and the Trenton Times in New Jersey.

What made Ms. feature Mrs. Graham? Among other reasons, Mrs. Graham led her newspaper in breaking the Watergate coverup — an event that led to the downfall of Richard M. Nixon as President of the United States.

In very tiny footnote letters, it is noted in the cover story, that Mrs. Graham put up $20,000 in seed money for the magazine. That means she helped get it off the drawing board when it was in the blueprint stage.

To her Amusement

In keeping with her status as the current Ms. magazine cover subject, Mrs. Graham came to breakfast at Rockefeller Center's Rainbow Room. She had to endure one of those "this is your life" presentations. It turned out to be much to her amusement, including what Gibson McCabe "told on Kay." He is the head of Newsweek.

At a sales meeting once, Mrs. Graham wanted to know why Newsweek didn't have more women in that meeting. She was told by a male executive that there was enough trouble without adding more women.

The only woman there, Mrs. Graham, reached for an ashtray and sailed it across the room. She cried "sexist" and other words as the ashtray crashed.

McCabe said after that incident more women came to the sales meetings.

From the old days as a student at Vassar and the University of Chicago there were classmates to tell some things about Kay — as intimates call her.

Vivian Cadden, a senior editor at McCall's magazine, told about the Vassar days — in the 30s, two years preceding the University of Chicago days.

Passing Time

Mrs. Graham's father, Eugene Meyer, according to recollections at the "this is your life" skit had an idea that his daughter was just passing time at Vassar.

But the Vassar days were full of vital things. Ms. Cadden recalled:

"We put on benefits for loyalist Spain. And we bused to Washington to ask aid for people who were 'out of work in that great depression."

"My most vivid recollection of Kay was associated with her peddling our newspaper. She had large stacks of them in her room."

Laura Bergquist, a writer and once an editor at Look magazine, recalled the days at the University of Chicago.

"We lived at International house and I understand Kay came after two years at Vassar because her father thought she was piddling around at Vassar."

"She joined the American Student Union. We were activists at the University of Chicago in the 30s."

"We burned our silk stockings in protest over Japanese imperialism."

"We had a lot of friends. Some kooky, some brilliant and most of moderate means."

"She was this lady with a funny laugh to a lot of people. When it was over she went to San Francisco to a paper and I went to Newark."

During the telling of some high points of her life, Mrs. Graham gave out with "that funny little laugh."

Ms. magazine describes Mrs. Graham as a multi-faceted woman with many powerful friends (as well as enemies)."

Some enemies don't even know her right name. Mrs. Graham gave a for instance of that fact, recounting what some of her Newsweek colleagues heard in a New York bar the day Richard Nixon announced his decision to resign the presidency.

"That Martha Graham — it's her fault," this man at the bar said.

"And everyone knows she's had an affair with Alger Hiss."

No one laughed harder than Katharine Graham after she told that story.

Supports Feminists

Mrs. Graham supports some feminist causes such as able women advancing through the corporate hierarchy. She demonstrated that by hurling the ashtray at Newsweek. But she does not go for being called or addressed as Ms. Graham.

The article on Mrs. Graham is titled "Katharine Graham: The Power That Didn't Corrupt."

Her decision to publish the Watergate coverup findings of two Post writers resulted in what Ms. magazine calls "the story of the century — the resignation of a president." It also led to a Pulitzer Prize, journalism's most coveted award.

"Our role was important in the beginning... but in the long run, minor," she said.

"Judges, juries, the Congress and irate citizens — including Republicans — who just could not stomach what they saw played subsequent major roles."

Description:

The necklace pictured contains approximately 64.2 oz of pure Sterling silver and 125 carats of carefully matched Kingman Blue turquoise stones. Since each necklace is individually handcrafted by Navajo artisans, some of the workmanship details of your necklace will vary from the picture. The basic design and weight will be the same. It would ordinarily retail for over $400. The necklace is also available in Nevada Green turquoise, Coral, and Mother-of-Pearl. Please indicate your choice in the reply coupon below.

History:

The design of the necklace is a centuries old Indian adaptation of some of the decorative formal wear sported by the Comancheros, from whom the Navajo nation learned silversmithing techniques. The design is thought to be imbued with powers of good fortune and protection from evil forces. It has long been used, and is still often used as a medium of exchange in the Southwest Indian Nations. An Indian status and wealth is often symbolized by the number and quality of Squash Blossoms he owns.

Pioneer Cookbook Cures Corns, Moths in Carpets; Recipes, Too

By Susan Kreifel

To Clean Corsets

"Take out the steels at front and sides, then scrub thoroughly with tepid or cold lather of white Castile soap, using a very small scrubbing brush. Do not lay them in water. When quite clean, let cold water run on them freely from the spigot to rinse out the soap thoroughly. Dry, without ironing, (after pulling lengthwise until they are straight and shapely), in a cool place."

Corsets have gone the way of the covered wagon, but many old home remedies, cure-alls and recipes have been carried through the generations.

Only Granny

Kay Graber has compiled a 164-page book, "Nebraska Pioneer Cookbook" (University of Nebraska Press), which has recipes only granny could completely savor, some you've carried as treasured memories since childhood and some not so treasured.

Be that as it may, she offers such common goodies as Parker House Rolls, rye bread, chocolate icing, lemonade and meatloaf; more unusual entrees as Bohemian Pressed Book illustrations reproduced here are by Peggy W. Link.

Blood Sausage, Swedish Head Cheese and Boston Baked Beans.

And for those with stronger fortitudes, or stronger stomachs, there are such great adventures as Call's Foot Jelly, Pork Fruit Cake and Carrot Coffee.

The "Nebraska Pioneer Cookbook" focuses on just what the title infers, the pioneers. Short on many of today's common necessities, the pioneers were forced to make do.

On coffee: "The adulteration of coffee to make it go further and the use of ersatz preparations were common frontier practices, for coffee was scarce and expensive. In addition to beans, substitutes were made from cornmeal and sorghum, mixed to a gummy dough and baked until brown; dried peas; and parched corn, barley, rye or wheat."

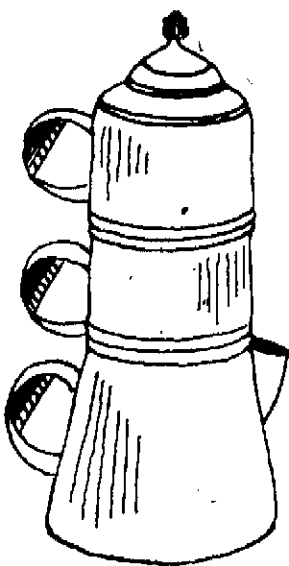

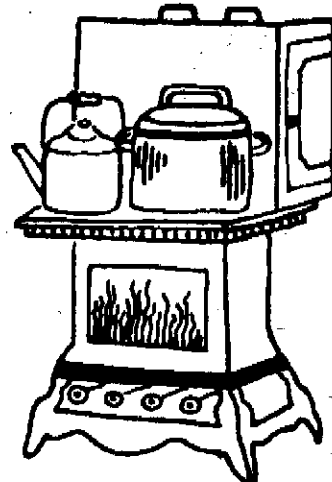

Carrot Coffee

Wash and slice the carrots across in pieces half an inch thick, and dry in the sun or oven so as not to cook them. When dry, brown and use the same as coffee. Prepared in this manner, equal parts of carrots and coffee is an excellent substitute for the genuine Rio.

Most homemakers wouldn't be ecstatic about fixing turkey, if they had to go through the process of preparing the bird as the pioneers did.

Roast Turkey

"Select a young turkey; remove all the feathers carefully; singe it over a burning newspaper on the top of the stove; then draw it nicely, being careful not to break any of the internal organs; remove the crop carefully; cut off the head, and tie the neck close to the body by drawing the skin over it..."

With few country doctors, home remedies were an accepted practice. The "receipt" for curing hoarseness goes: beat well the whites of two eggs, add two tablespoons of white sugar, grate in half a nutmeg, add a pint of lukewarm water, stir well and drink often.

Cures

If you're suffering from diphtheria, rheumatism or corns you'll find a cure ranging from a sulphur gargle to rubbing the area with lemon juice.

For the invalid, there are recipes for cream soup, baked milk, beef tea and panada.

You'll also find concoctions designed to rid the home of bedbugs and moths in carpets.

And if you've really caught the pioneer spirit, you might try your hand at making soap: Five pounds of lard or five and one-half pounds cracklings, one can of lye, one and one-half gallons water. Stir occasionally the first day, then set for three days. Cook until clear. Let set until hard and cut into bars.

Your Horoscope

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4

Your birthday today: Marks a turning point in your cycle of individual development. The coming year is mainly one of refining and tapering off from earlier harshness, perfecting your skills, preparing to move to a higher level next year. Faith should be cultivated wholeheartedly. Today's natives are self-reliant, often gifted in technical fields such as electronics.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Round up those who touch on your home life: reach agreements and set new goals. Seek endorsement where it counts. Evening brings a chance for romance.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Relatives and neighbors are helpful, but be wary of letting their help decide your course of action. Travel accomplishes exactly what you want it to.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Start out early with a business-like approach to your obligations. Organize a bid for personal recognition and higher earnings.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: You are at a peak of personal magnetism, so it is more pertinent than ever to stay busy. Go after your objectives, quickly claim your just rewards.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Get out of the glare of public view as much as you can. You've got some maintenance to do, revisions in your thinking to make. Romantic ventures thrive.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Teamwork is the theme now. You can attract support from the powerful as well as those nearby. Move to bring an abstract ambition into reality.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Where you've done your homework, make your deeds official today, but leave risky or speculative projects for future development.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: You've got practically everything going for you now. Begin early, gather expert advice as you go. Keep moving, there's more on the way.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Confirm distant contacts, long-range projects today, adding nothing new while perfecting the old. Legal matters can be settled quite successfully.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Partnership affairs take much of your attention. Unusual remedies are available for chronic problems. Take the time to say "thank you!"

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Get right into your day of action, pursue broad outlines vigorously, indicating detail areas for later. Opportunity for promotion improves today.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Mend your fences wherever needed. Advice from experts, progress reports on all sides offer encouragement. Add something to your savings.

This Week's School Lunch

Monday: Hamburger and bun, french fried potatoes, lettuce wedge, canned fruit, milk.
Tuesday: Smoked beef casserole, orange juice, buttered green beans, hot rolls, fruit and whipped topping, milk.

Wednesday: Pizza, buttered corn, relishes, fruit cobbler, milk.
Thursday: Creamed turkey, mashed potatoes, glazed carrots, muffin and butter, fresh fruit, milk.
Friday: Parent-Teacher Conference.

Quotable Quotes

St. James deHavilland Trudeau

By The Associated Press

"It's certainly not the glamorous, exciting life that most people think it is. It's a lonely life. It's not a free life—but it's a good life." Margaret Trudeau, wife of Canada's prime minister, discussing the problems that sent her to the hospital last month for psychiatric care.

"First they said they were going to save us from China, and then they were the ones who became completely pro-Chinese." Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in an interview before talks with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, visiting to mend U.S.—India relations.

"I hadn't been on a bicycle in 40 years. People who recognized me couldn't believe it, Olivia deHavilland riding around on a bike in a mink and pearls." Olivia deHavilland, 58, speaking of a bicycle ride her 18-year-old daughter Giselle persuaded her to take in Williamsburg, Va.

"Isn't this marvelous? We just hope this will raise enough money so we can lay down a financial base for the organization and establish a bail bond fund." Margo St. James, leader of Coyote, an organization of prostitutes, speaking at the first annual Hookers Ball in San Francisco.

"You save me six years of my life. I hope for the same solidarity for my husband and my brothers." Sylvia Zalmanson, allowed to emigrate to Israel after serving four years of a 10-year hijacking sentence in a Soviet labor camp, speaking to a crowd at a New York airport.

The William Schneibers

Golden Wedding Congratulations

Celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary with a family dinner today at the Knolls, are Mr. and Mrs. William E. Schneiber (Julia Reed).

Their daughters are Mrs. James (Mary Lou) Daly of Alpha, Ill., Mrs. Don (Maxine) Drebo and Mrs. Clifford (Lois) Cook. Their sons are Richard Schrieber of Manitou Springs, Colo., and Robert Schrieber.

The Schneibers also have 25 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

They were married Nov. 6, 1924, in Marysville, Kan.

The Wilbur Shipp

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur T. Shipp will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary at a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. next Sunday in the Lincoln Room of the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel.

Friends may attend without further invitation.

The event will be hosted by the couple's children and spouses, Mr. and Mrs. Gene E. Shipp of Fairfield, Calif., and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Boots of Anchorage, Alaska.

Married Nov. 12, 1924, in Exeter, Mr. and Mrs. Shipp have lived in Lincoln since 1936. They have 11 grandchildren.

Natural Childbirth Chided As 'Ridiculous, Foolhardy'

By Arthur J. Snider
(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News
Naturally childbirth is great if one is going to have a baby in a rice paddy, contends Dr. Robert H. Barter, Professor of Obstetrics at George Washington University. Otherwise, it is "ridiculous and foolhardy" not to take advantage of the many advances that have occurred in obstetrics.

To believe that "breathing exercises" of any kind can eliminate the pain of childbirth is as absurd, he insists, as believing that chewing gum on the way to the dentist to exercise the jaw muscles would lessen the nerve pain during drilling.

"Unfortunately," he adds, "the cult of so-called 'natural childbirth' has now taken a further step — a new craze for home delivery.

"In some instances, this is taking place without any professional obstetric supervision. Such flaunting of all the safeguards of hospital delivery, such as fetal monitoring, epidural anesthesia and the availability of blood makes one shudder."

Harmful to Brain
Sudden labor, uncontrolled by anesthesia or sedation, can be harmful to the brain of the baby, he maintains. Not to use forceps and episiotomy adds to the trauma and makes the trip through the birth canal more perilous for the infant.

"It's time the obstetricians rid our specialty of these non-medical, non-professional persons who have been allowed to make inroads into the science and art of obstetric care," he urged.

Barter's views, presented in American Medical News, are countered by Dr. John B. Franklin, Professor of Obstetrics at Thomas Jefferson University.

Natural childbirth is a starting point of a healthy family life, he says. It recognizes the unique needs of parents to be close to their child from birth onward.

When a patient goes into labor, the obstetrician is seldom around anyway, Franklin asserts. He is usually in the office, in surgery or engaged in personal affairs. In his absence, the supervision of labor may be left to the nurse or house staff.

Franklin welcomes the request of a wife and husband to take their own responsibility for labor, "a natural event."

He directs a small maternity

An "Anti-Inflation" sectional bridge tournament will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Villager Motel, sponsored by Nebraska Unit 184 of the American Contract Bridge League (ACBL) and Lincoln Duplicate Bridge Club.

On Friday, there will be Master Pairs and Non-Master Pairs at 2 p.m. and Men's Pairs and Women's Pairs at 8 p.m. Saturday the qualifying session for Open Pairs will be 2 p.m., with Final and Consolation sessions at 8 p.m. The tournament ends Sunday with two sessions of Swiss Teams at 11 a.m.

Free entry to a future event or a trophy will be given to first overall in all events.

Tournament chairmen are Dick and Dru Joyce. Conduct and Ethics committee members are J. G. Porter, Esthwe Lieurance, John Euler, Carl Spencer and Sue Norden. Partnerships chairman is Mrs. K. E. Johnson.

Anyone in the state not having a partner and desiring to attend may contact Mrs. Johnson, 1644 Woodview.

Officers of the Lincoln Duplicate Bridge Club are Joe McWilliams, president; Gladys Brown, treasurer, and Mary Jo Lahners, secretary.

"I realize I can't win every time," he has written. "But emotionally, I want to. So when a patient dies, I feel terribly dejected."

Two sociologists working in the field of medicine find many transplant surgeons break down and cry over the death of a patient, particularly a child. Some cancel surgical schedules for the rest of the day, go to their office and lock the door.

In their book, "The Courage to Fail" (University of Chicago, Press), they portray the composite transplant surgeon as having a strong commitment to achievement, able, willing and sometimes driven to pursue the future of transplantation.

While the pace is slower now, none doubts that the transplantation of tissues and organs will be practiced with increased frequency and success.

The authors, Professors Renee C. Fox of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and Judith P. Swazey of Boston University Medical School, find most transplant surgeons regretfully feel that even the joy of being with their families must be subordinated to their professional obligations.

The Forgotten

In the debate over simple or radical mastectomy for breast cancer, Dr. Max Cutler of Beverly Hills, Cal., calls attention to the forgotten women with proven cancer who want no mastectomy.

"All of us who have dealt with the problem know there are some women who emotionally cannot accept mastectomy without risking serious psychology damage or even postoperative depression and attempted suicide," he says. "They settle for only a partial breast removal."

While they are gambling, there are thousands of such women alive and well, he says.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a high school guidance counselor who reads your column every day and appreciates your concern for young people. In recent months you have dealt with several letters from young shoplifters. Since this is a problem I hear a great deal about, I would like to offer a suggestion that might be useful. Frequently when I ask students, "Why do you do it?" they tell me they like the excitement, the challenge of seeing if they can put it over without getting caught. A great many young shoplifters don't need or even want what they steal. Often they have enough money in their pockets to pay for the items.

I suggest to these folks that they try to return the merchandise, just as skillfully as they took it. That can be fun, too. The proprietor of the store will be happy to have it back, and if the person gets caught returning stolen goods, chances are he will not be prosecuted.

What do you think about my idea, Ann?

An Ear That Listens

Dear Ear: I am not saying your idea is a bummer, but I think I have a better one. I would encourage the shoplifter to take the merchandise directly to the store owner or salesperson, admit that he stole it and say he wants to return it because he realizes that what he did was wrong and foolish.

In my opinion, an outright confession would be more honest. Moreover, the chances for being prosecuted would be greatly reduced.

Dear Ann Landers: It's obvious you don't have a son or you could never have printed such a stupid answer to "Daughter-in-Law."

I'd like to respond to that self-righteous little witch, since you didn't do one thing to put her in her place.

Dear Daughter-in-Law: You seem to have a lot to say about what a rotten job I did raising my son. Why didn't you write "Dear Mom AND Dad?" the boy DID have a father, you know. Or do you think the stork brought him?

Girls like you make me sick. You have quite a load of anger for "lousy mothers." Do you honestly believe there are no "lousy children"?

Since you've made it clear that I did such a miserable job on your husband, please don't ask me to babysit with your children anymore. I'd hate to have a hand in ruining them, too.

Plants, Like People, Do Commit Suicide

Detroit (UPI) — Plants, like people, commit suicide.

But before they die, according to a University of Michigan botanist, plants send out a death signal.

That signal has become the focus of Larry D. Nooden's research into what he terms the suicide phenomenon in plant development. The results could mean big increases in crop yields, particularly soybeans.

"Most people think it's the drought or cold nights that are knocking off the plants," Nooden said. "But most plants die long before those conditions set in."

Plants change color, lose their leaves and die, Nooden said, because a warning signal from their seeds tells them to.

Armed with a $90,000 Department of Agriculture grant, a research assistant and a gnawing curiosity, Nooden, 38, set out four months ago at the Ann Arbor, Mich., school to find out why plants "kill themselves."

Death Signal

"We are determining exactly when the death signal comes," Nooden said, "how it is transmitted and what it is."

Finding the point in plant development when the signal is sent was relatively easy, he said, but determining what purpose the death impulse serves in plant growth may take years of research.

The signal is beamed out late in pod development while the seeds are filling the envelope-like bag. If the pod is removed before the seeds start growing, he said, death is delayed for a long period.

Nooden first became curious about the signal effect three years ago while studying the century plant, a striking desert growth that lives up to 100 years.

"This plant just grows along, happily vegetating, until one fine day it sends up a huge stalk of flowers 25 feet high," Nooden said. "The seeds mature, and then the death process begins. The leaves flop and the whole thing dries up."

He discovered the plant could be saved simply by cutting off the flower soon after it bloomed.

Nooden pondered that fact for almost a year before he began conducting experiments at his University of Michigan laboratory and nearby farm.

Plucking Theory

Gardeners have applied the "plucking" theory to plant growth for years, Nooden said.

"Pick up any Burpee seed catalogue and you'll see recommendations to remove flowers from the plants as soon as they fade," he said.

But Nooden believes he may be the only botanist in the world who is researching the phenomenon on a major level.

The breakthrough in his research came when the government awarded him a federal grant to study the signal in an attempt to crack the yield barrier for soybeans.

"We're not going to solve the world food supply crisis in one shot," Nooden said. "But through isolation and control of the death impulse, it will be possible to greatly increase yields."

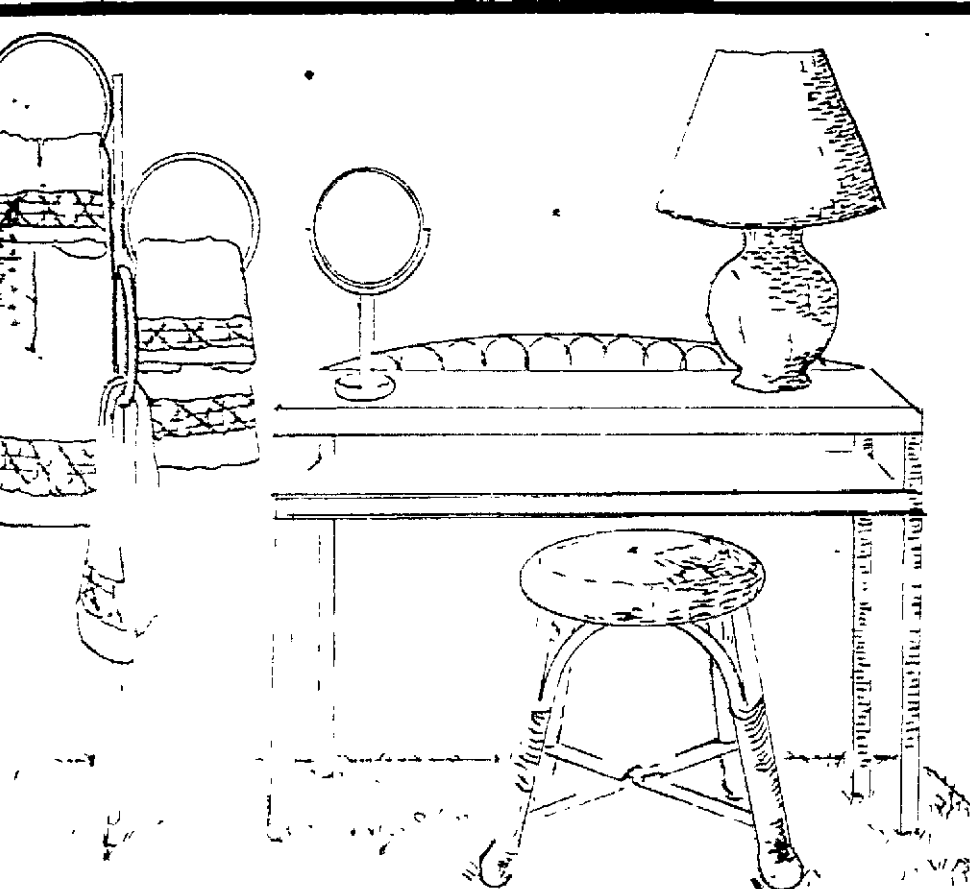

His studies of the signal suggest "that we are dealing with a new kind of hormone."

"There has to be some reason why that signal is there," Nooden said. "It must have a natural role, an adaptive significance but it is difficult to rationalize."

"Once we understand the signal, we can counteract it, and maybe, just maybe, breed it out."

Sue Schreyer and Larry D. Nooden study a soybean plant in his laboratory.

Europeans Find Ways To Tighten Belts; Often With Ingenuity

By Fred Coleman
London (AP) — In these days of soaring inflation, British millionaire Jim Slater advises investing in cans of baked beans. You can't eat stock certificates or fine art, but even if the bottom falls out of the baked bean market, Slater claims you won't starve.
One British newspaper, the Sunday Telegraph, took Slater seriously, bought 100 pounds, $240 worth of canned food and plans to see if that investment does better than the London stock market.

Across Europe in Aquino, a small Italian town south of Rome, grocer Antonio del Duca complains: "People here now raise pigs and hens in their back yard. They buy grapes and make their own wine, knead their spaghetti at home and even manage to prepare a homemade kind of soap."
"Believe me, we are back to a war economy like in 1943. It has come to that."

Cutting Back
Western European inflation today ranges from 7% annually in West Germany to 18.7% in Italy — compared with an 11% rate in the United States.

An Associated Press survey in Britain, France, West Germany and Italy indicates many Europeans are cutting back, often with ingenuity.

In Britain, for example, where the inflation rate was 10% last year and 17.1% this year, housewives write to newspapers to share money-saving ideas. Among them:

— "To make perfume last, shake a little on a small piece of cotton wool and drop this inside your bra. The scent lingers longer." Anne Numm, Ipswich — "Always have a meal of snack before shopping for groceries." Mary Rogers, Taplow.

— "Shop one day later each week. Every seven weeks you'll have one week's housekeeping money left over." Joan Read, Rochester.

— "If only a drop of lemon juice is required, pierce the lemon with a knitting needle and squeeze. The lemon will keep indefinitely as the hole closes again." Jane Smith, Nottingham.

Other housewives suggest that hair shampoo is cheaper than bubble bath and does the same job, that dad's old pajamas make good ironing board covers and that telephone directories can become children's scrapbooks.

Hits All Levels
Inflation worries people from all levels of society — bachelors, young married couples and pensioners.

Jenny Suslak, 28, a single girl who earns $4,800 a year with a London advertising agency — the average British salary — says, "It's really hit me badly in the last year. I have to think twice about buying new clothes. I can't entertain and any thought of buying my own place is right out. It's terrible."

Bob Kershaw, 27, and his wife Cathy work for publishing houses in Bristol, earning $12,000 a year between them.

"I find that all my money goes out on paying bills. Although our standard of living has not dropped, I find that I don't seem to have benefited from the fact that my salary has doubled. We can't save a penny," he complains.

John MacDonald, 69, a retired butcher, says the day he withdrew $25 from his savings account "really brought home to us what inflation means. We swore we'd never touch our savings." MacDonald and his wife Madge "have always been careful people, but the little pot where we keep money for emergencies is having to come out too often nowadays."

Inflation is hurting different industries and different classes of society in different ways. In general, Britain's rich lose more buying power, but people on small, fixed incomes have the worst struggle.

Sales of yachts and other pleasure boats fell 40% this year. The Mirabelle, a famed, expensive London restaurant, says business is off 5%. Both indicate belt-tightening by the rich.

Bookstores everywhere in Europe say cookbooks are selling well, especially those featuring recipes for pasta, Indian and Chinese dishes — in other words, cheaper food — indicating belt-tightening by the not-so-rich.

Architects are having trouble finding work as people cut down on building new homes. Dowling Appointments, which finds work for free-lance British architects, says some are working as clerks.

Elsewhere in Europe, problems are much the same as ordinary people and even the better-off struggle with inflation.

In Aquino, Italy, grocer del Duca describes the falling sales this way:

"Cross out marmalade, coffee, cocoa, tunafish, tinned meat and condensed milk. Do away with pastry, chocolates and think of the drop in cheese sales. Then you will understand the situation."

Fewer Frills
Italians buy fewer newspapers and rely more on television news. Expensive clothes are giving way to blue jeans and t-shirts. Hotel managers, bowing to new facts of life, allow patrons to dine tieless and in shirtsleeves outside, even at the fancier establishments.

"My husband and I wanted another child, but we are reluctant now," Giuseppine Callandro of Rome said. The average Italian salary is 180,000 lire or $280 a month.

In France, a 14% inflation rate has been softened by the fact that wage increases have generally kept up with price rises. Once again on the French Riviera, hotels and restaurants were full this summer despite substantial price rises.

But most Frenchmen—earning the average French wage of 2,100 francs monthly — voice the familiar complaints.

Marcel Warnaud of Neuilly-sur-Seine outside Paris says he is cutting down on weekend outings with his wife and two children. Yves Pousset, an industrial designer, banded together with friends to get a 20% discount on bulk orders for books.

Manuel Ramon-Martinez, a Paris concierge, says he is sacrificing his passion for soccer. "I don't go out any more," he admitted. "Now I get my football from the television."

Problems Same

In West Germany where the 7% inflation rate is the lowest in the European Common Market, the problems are much the same.

Klaus Schuetz, mayor of West Berlin, decided against buying a small property recently in the city's central residential district when he was asked $93,985 for the land alone.

A West Berlin housewife shopping at a supermarket explained, "If you buy less at a time you buy less junk. If you buy frequently, you have better control of where the money goes. If you know you cannot run to the store whenever you please, you learn to plan and make do with what you have at home."

After taxes, the average West German's income is 1,149 marks, or about $441 per month.

Still, with all the complaints, Europeans manage to put money aside for what they consider to be important.

In Britain, seats for closed circuit television coverage of the George Foreman-Muhammad Ali heavyweight championship fight sold for between $25 and $50, or up to about half the average weekly paycheck. All 12,000 seats in London theaters were sold out.

In Britain: There's a rather hollow ring about references to bargain items posted in the windows of a supermarket in a London suburb — especially the "low, low prices."

Going Like Sixty

By Jack Smith

Loneliness is a common ailment among single women and widows, regardless of age. Older women tell me that the more time one has to become accustomed to it, the worse it aches. I doubt that we men ever feel the solitude that women do. We can get away from it more readily.

It used to be that women's inability to escape loneliness was due to society's insistence that they be escorted by a male in order to keep their reputations. This is no longer true.

But, now that women do not require an escort, they sometimes almost require a bodyguard for any after-dark occasion.

There is no way to defeat loneliness if a woman stays around home. Television personalities are lively entertainment, but they do not provide company. There is no interaction.

Less of a Curse

I asked some unattached women, living alone, how they handle loneliness. Most of them say they don't handle it, really. But there are ways to make it less of a curse.

One partially satisfactory way is to work. The reason a job is only a partial cure is that it is equipped with a time clock. You are with people all day long, but at five o'clock, you still have to come home to an empty room and a single place setting on the table.

Daytime volunteer work has the same unhappy ending. It is better than being around the house all day, and it brings fulfillment that few jobs can because it is helping others. But it ends abruptly once a day.

Rooming with a friend or a relative is fine so long as you are genuinely compatible. If not, many women say the constant irritation is even worse than the loneliness would be.

The most satisfactory antidote for loneliness, say the women consulted, is that of joining a group which includes others with the same loneliness ailment, and hopefully, some from the other sex.

Meaningful Companionship

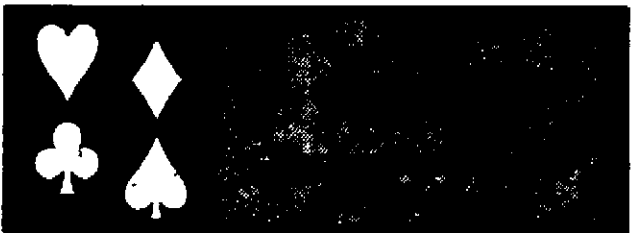

The single-mingle variety of club is only recommended if one has checked and verified its respectability. A few of these have only the girl-boy type of activity to hold them together. Dancing is one such activity and many singles enjoy it greatly, but it does not often build a meaningful companionship.

Better is a club that provides members with opportunities to share interests. For example, a church group where the binding material is a common religious faith, with the probability of sharing concepts and experiences.

Or a senior center. Most of these have varied programs of evening-out activities in which women can participate with a complete feeling of comfort — such as going to ball games, attending the ballet or a concert, viewing an exhibition, or attending the theatre.

Few women seem eager to cure their loneliness by living with their children. Most of the ones I talked to have enjoyed their independence far too long. And, unselfishly, they do not wish to intrude on their children's family life.

Today's quiz involves slam hands played in the 1974 World Championship between The Aces and Brazil. Match your slam bidding and leads with that of the contestants.

Question No. 1: You are South, both vulnerable, and hold:

♠ K 6 3
♥ J 10 6 4 2
♣ 10 6 5

What do you lead after this bidding?

West	North	East	South
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
3♦	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4♣	Pass	6♣	All Pass

Answer: The heart jack wins; all other leads lose. The entire hand:

NORTH		EAST
♠ 10 9 5	♥ 7 3	♠ 10 8 4 2	♥ 7 3 2
♦ 10 6 4 2	♣ 10 6 5	♦ 5 2	♣ 10 6 5

WEST: ♠ Q J 8 7 2, ♥ Q 9, ♦ K 10 6 4, ♣ A Q
EAST: ♠ A 4, ♥ A 8 5, ♦ A 9, ♣ K J 8 4 3 2

In the match, Ace Sammy Kehela of Toronto made the unfortunate choice of the diamond five and Brazil had its slam (the spade suit was established for discards). The lead of the heart jack would have established a defensive heart trick while South still had the spade king to beat the slam. In the replay, The Aces stopped at three no-trump and lost 600 points on the deal.

Question No. 2: You are South, not vulnerable, and hold:

♠ A K Q 3
♥ K
♦ Q J 5 4
♣ A J 9 4

What do you bid after this bidding?

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1♠	Pass
4♣	Pass	5♣	Pass

Answer: Six clubs and six spades are losers. Five spades rates to go down. Pass is the sure winner. The entire hand:

NORTH		EAST
♠ 9 7 6 5	♥ A 10 4	♠ 10 8 4 2	♥ 7 3 2
♦ K 7	♣ K 8 6 3	♦ 10 9 8 6	♥ 5 2

WEST: ♠ J, ♥ Q J 9 8 6 5, ♦ A 3 2, ♣ Q 10 7
EAST: ♠ A K Q 3, ♥ K, ♦ Q J 5 4, ♣ A J 9 4

In the match, Brazilians Gabriel Chagas and Pedro Assumpcao bid a not unreasonable club slam and went down when a club loser was unavoidable. In the replay, Canadian Aces Sammy Kehela and Eric Murray stopped at a safe spade game and gained 470 points.

Question No. 3: You are South, vulnerable, and hold:

♠ K 6 5 4 3
♣ A K 10 5 3

What do you do after this bidding?

East	South	West	North
1♠	?	1♠	?

Answer: One spade dodges the fireworks. Two clubs is a disaster. The entire hand:

NORTH		EAST
♠ 8 7	♥ K J 9	♠ A Q J	♥ Q 10 8 4
♦ K J 9 5 3 2	♣ 7 4	♦ Q J 8 7 4	♥ 6

WEST: ♠ 10 9 2, ♥ A 7 6 2, ♦ A, ♣ Q J 9 6 2
EAST: ♠ A Q J, ♥ Q 10 8 4, ♦ Q J 8 7 4, ♣ 6

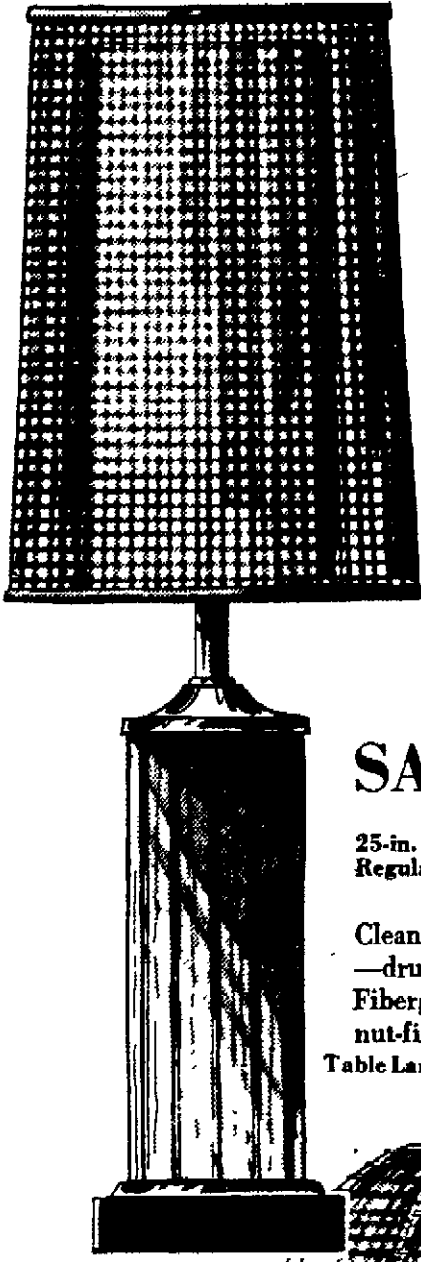

In the match, Wolff overcalled one spade and the opponents eventually played in four hearts, down two. In the replay, Goldberg overcalled two clubs and played it doubled. The penalty was 800 points and The Aces gained a large swing.

After Christ, Luther Written About Most

"More has been written about Martin Luther than about any other person in the history of the world, with the exception of Christ."

"We're used to thinking of Luther as a man with that thick Saxon neck and big head and 'Here I stand...' You may be surprised to hear he had a high tenor voice."

"Luther was great on the I-Thou relationship. Once he said the most important things in religion are the personal pronouns — the I, the Thou, the Ye, my brothers."

With such tidbits, Dr. Lewis W. Spitz, professor of history at Stanford University in California and a man with close ties to Lincoln, gave a vivid account of Luther's impact on history.

"It was a great moment in western cultural history when Luther made the decision that worldly culture was the highest creation man had achieved up to then and that it must by all means be preserved," said Spitz.

Personal Account

He gave also the following personal account of Luther's home in Wittenburg, Germany, the city where four and a half centuries ago Thursday, the Augustinian monk posted his 95 theses on the door of the castle church, an act that has come to symbolize the beginning of the Protestant Reformation:

"If you visit Wittenburg it seems as if Luther has just stepped out of his house. His table is there for his table talks, his lectern from which he lectured in the large assembly hall."

"You can see the little stool where Katie Luther sat and did her knitting by the window as Luther talked to students. You can see the oak that Luther planted at the end of the main street where the road divides."

"Or you can go next door to (Wilhelm) Melancthon's house and there see the garden and a stone table about the size of an altar where Luther translated the Old Testament from Hebrew into German — along with a professor of Old Testament and a Jewish doctor. His Sanhedrin, he called them."

Spitz on Luther

Professor Spitz had equally interesting things to say about the following subjects:

On Luther's writings — "Telling about them is a matter of scholarly engineering, of logistics, because he was so prolific. His 110 folio volumes comprise 60,000 pages."

"When Luther died, his left hand — as rigor mortis set in — stiffened as though he were holding a page. His right hand scrunched up in a writing position."

On Luther and Education — "Luther urged universal, compulsory education for every boy and girl as far as his wit will carry him."

"Three German states and John Knox's Scotland were the first places in the world to achieve universal literacy."

On Luther and the generation gap — "When Luther posted his 95 theses, he was 34 years old. With only one outstanding exception, all of his followers were 30 years old or younger. And all of his opponents — except Erasmus who was 47 and Dr. Eck who was 30 — were 50 years or younger. So there was a kind of generation conflict built into the situation."

Spitz quoting Luther on life and death — "Life is a walled city and we are the defenders and I have my place to stand on the wall as you have your place and the enemy death is creeping in closer and closer from all sides."

"And I cannot stand where you are and you cannot stand where I stand, but nothing prevents us from whispering encouragement to one another."

Lewis Spitz... Luther had a high tenor voice.

Catholic Directory Will Include Lay Suggestions

By Anita Fussell

People think the National Catechetical Directory is some sort of phone book, said its director Monsignor Wilfrid H. Paradis, in Lincoln this week to address Lincoln Roman Catholic Diocese school teachers and administrators.

Msgr. Paradis explained that the directory, resulting from the largest and most diverse consultation ever attempted by the Roman Catholic Church in any country, will give directions.

"It will be a guideline for dealing with content as well as methodology," he said, "a statement of faith put in contemporary terms."

Each country, said Paradis, is developing such a directory, based on the Vatican's General Catholic Directory but adapted to local needs.

This country, he added, is unique in its use of lay suggestions for the directory. So far, over 4,000 local meetings have produced suggestions representing the thinking of 25-50,000 persons, he said. Suggestions have come in from 132, or 85%, of the diocese.

Paradis said this is also the first time every part of the church has been represented at the decision-making level. One of the review committees is composed of laity and religious, including both men and women, as well as clergy and bishops.

The paripatetic director and his associate, Sister Mariella Frie, have crisscrossed the country the last 15 months, encouraging participation in the second consultation set for Jan. 1-April 30, 1975.

The first consultation ended last March and the third consultation will come late in 1975.

said Paradis, before he presents the final version to the 1976 General Assembly.

"This process will help him 'know what the people are thinking and what the problems are.' It will also 'establish dialogue, perhaps among people who need to talk to each other.'"

Paradis said the directory's content — the Christian message itself — drew the most comment from the first consultation.

Another popular topic proved to be adult education, one that would not have appeared ten years ago, he said.

"Catholics are beginning to recognize that religious education is not just for children, but a lifelong process from the cradle to the grave."

A surprising number of laypeople were interested in upgrading clergy education and preaching, he commented with a smile.

Paradis hopes the directory will give his church a new sense of direction.

Acknowledging a considerable amount of church division in religious education, he wants the directory to begin the healing process by indicating "those areas in which we must be united and those in which diversity is legitimate and wholesome."

R. C. Decline and Growth Predicted

By David E. Anderson

Washington (UPI) — Institutional Catholicism will decline in influence and significance over the next 10 years but a self-conscious and communal American Catholic community will grow in strength, according to one of the church's most prominent sociologists.

The Rev. Andrew Greeley, writing in the Nov. 1 edition of the National Catholic Reporter, said the decline of institutional Catholicism came from the church's being caught between two transitions: "from counter-Reformation to ecumenical age and from the immigrant old neighborhood to the professional class suburb."

"We are forced to struggle through these twin changes with an almost total absence of ideas," Greeley said. "No one is listening because the church as an institution in the United States today has nothing to say."

"The image of the priest and nun, already badly deteriorated, will not improve," Greeley said, adding that "even those Catholics who still have respect for the priesthood and the religious life will not take priests or nuns very seriously as a source for guidance even on religious matters."

Greeley, director of the Center for Study of American Pluralism of the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago, wrote the 5,500 word essay on Catholicism's future for the 10th anniversary issue of NCR, an independent, lay-edited newspaper dealing with Catholic issues.

But Greeley, while seeing a decline of the institutional or ecclesiastical church, believes "the self-awareness and the self-consciousness of the Catholic community improves, as an ever-increasing number of people begin to wonder quite explicitly what is the human and religious meaning of being a Catholic in the United States."

Mo. Synod Faces Deficit

By James H. Bowman
(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Chicago — The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has announced a potential financial deficit for 1974 of $700,000, on a $26-million budget.

The 2.8-million member Synod, torn in recent years by controversy, has never before had a budget deficit.

During September alone, giving by local congregations to Synod headquarters dropped $180,000 from September, 1973, the Synod's council of administrators announced.

Congregational giving this year is down almost $300,000 from a year ago. The $700,000 figure is a mean estimate between an "optimistic" $250,000 and a "pessimistic" $1.5 million, according to a Synod news release.

The Rev. A. Lorenz Grumm, Synod stewardship counselor, attributed the loss to the economy and to the withholding of funds "because of the doctrinal controversy" in the Synod.

sacrifices of their Lord.

Next Saturday members will give a sacrificial offering for Christian missions. In the past, some members have given as much as a week's pay at this special time.

Attends Ashram

Mrs. Lucy D. Lightle of Lincoln has recently returned from New Delhi, India, where she attended sessions of the United Christian Ashrams' World Congress.

Tribute was paid during the congress to Dr. E. Stanley Jones, late founder of the Ashram movement, which began in Sat Tal, India in 1930.

Disciples State Assembly Set

The 1974 State Assembly of the Christian Church in Nebraska (Disciples of Christ), to be held in Omaha Friday-Sunday, is expected to draw more than 1,000 participants from across the state.

Dr. Robert Hall of Lincoln, Nebraska Executive Minister, said Dr. Kenneth L. Teagarden of Indianapolis, Indiana, general minister and president of the Christian Church, will be keynote speaker Sunday morning. Teagarden recently returned from a National Council of Churches trip to Russia where meetings were held with Russian church leaders.

Sessions will be held at the First Christian Church, 6630 Dodge Street.

Dr. Kathleen Bailey Austin, on the national staff in Indianapolis, will highlight a Saturday noon luncheon marking the 100th anniversary of women participating in church work. Dr. Thomas E. Broce, president of Phillips University in Enid, Oklahoma, will be featured speaker Saturday night.

Dr. Hall will install newly-elected officers at a Sunday afternoon session.

Mrs. Richard S. Sack of Murray, president of the Christian Church in Nebraska, will preside at the Friday evening session. Sixteen workshops will be held Saturday afternoon, including all areas of activity in the church.

There are 59 Christian churches in Nebraska with a total membership of 12,600 persons.

English Visitors

George and Lucy Gorman of England will attend the Friends Meeting today at 3319 So. 48th St., with Gorman leading a discussion at 10 a.m. on "Quaker Worship and Extension Activities."

Mrs. Gorman will discuss "Pastoral Care in a Quaker Meeting" tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at the Meeting House.

Active in ecumenical affairs, Gorman has been general secretary of the British Friends Home Service Committee and is the author of "The Amazing Fact of Quaker Worship." Mrs. Gorman is active in Friends' educational work.

Week of Sacrifice

Members of the Seventh-day Adventist Churches of Lincoln have entered into their annual Week of Prayer and Sacrifice.

The five Lincoln churches have joined with more than 10,000 congregations around the world in the traditional event.

The week began with Sabbath morning worship Saturday, at which time messages from denominational leaders were presented. Similar program evenings will be held during the week.

Throughout the week members may follow a program of frugal living, reflecting on the ibsen, the famous turn-of-the-century playwright is the author of these memorable words: "I am half inclined to think we are all ghosts... It is not only what we have inherited from our fathers that exists again in us, but all sorts of old dead ideas and all kinds of old dead beliefs... Whenever I take up a newspaper and read it, I fancy to see ghosts creeping between the lines. There must be ghosts all over the world. They must be as countless as grains of the sands, it seems to me. And we are so miserably afraid of the light, all of us." Tree Has a Leader, Whip Doesn't Branch

"I thought I was buying a tree. But instead I got something that looks like a small telephone pole."

In recent weeks this column has discussed various parts of a tree and how they can suddenly become very important to the prospective tree buyer.

For example, a tree's leader is simply the extreme tip of the trunk, or that branch which reaches highest into the air. In the case of pin oaks, spruces and firs, the leader is usually well-defined and easily recognized.

Competing Leaders

In fact, if it isn't something should be done. If several leaders are competing with each other, the strongest and most vigorous should be left and the others cut away. If the surviving leader is not precisely perpendicular, a four-foot length of bamboo can be tied to the trunk and the new leader can be pulled over and tied to this piece of bamboo.

Special twine is available to hold the leader to the bamboo. It's strong enough to hold in storms and yet pliable enough that it does not cut into the tender leader. Of course, bamboo is preferred because it's exceptionally strong and yet will bend in high winds.

"As the twig is bent, so grows the tree."

The philosopher who created this saying probably was not a nurseryman, but he certainly knew the importance of leaders. If the leader of a tree does not have open sky above it, it will twist and turn and contort itself searching for the sun. In fact, I've seen leaders actually grow around the corner of a house or garage in order to find sunlight. Some nurserymen who aren't too scrupulous have been known to use this little phenomenon to make a fast buck.

Bidding Process

Many commercial landscaping projects are sold on bid with the buyer never seeing what he's bought until it's in the ground. Specifications may call for eight- to ten-foot high trees, with no requirement being made with respect to the length of side branches.

If bid trees are planted close together in a nursery, they develop very few side branches and put all their energy into a leader that is forced to work like the dickens to keep ahead of all the other leaders on other trees planted too close to it.

The person who complained about buying a small telephone pole had simply bought a tree that hadn't been given enough room in which to develop adequate side branches.

Reputable nurserymen call these branchless trees "whips" and, in the wholesale nursery business, a — say — five to six foot whip may sell for half the price of a well-branched tree the same size.

Obviously the sharpie who gets by furnishing whips for branched trees has a tremendous advantage in winning a bid.

Right of Refusal

How can the poor, innocent tree buyer protect himself from such shenanigans?

The answer is unbelievably simple. Merely insist on the right of refusal.

If, upon arrival at the property, the plant does not reflect what you'd been led to expect at the time you ordered it, simply activate your right of refusal — before the plant is in the ground, please.

Wilderness Park

Bourne's Claim Is Questioned

The local Bluestem Group of the Sierra Club has issued a statement questioning the validity of the claim of Kenneth Bourne, incumbent Republican candidate for the Lancaster County Board, that creation of Wilderness Park is one of his accomplishments while in office.

The club's executive committee said it feels the public should know that Bourne voted in favor of the proposed trade of land involving segments of Wilderness Park so the State Roads Dept. could build the West Bypass of Lincoln's proposed State Expressway segment.

Bourne's claim to helping create Wilderness Park is based on the fact it was the county board that purchased — and the county still owns and controls — the land necessary to create the seven-mile-long park along Salt Creek south from Lincoln.

Water Houseplants With Wicks

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

There is a method that assures houseplants a uniform supply of soil moisture. This semi-automatic watering system involves the use of wicks made of cotton or asbestos rope. Watering the plants by wicks is especially desirable when the plants are unattended while vacationing.

Plants potted with wicks work by capillary action. One end of the wick is inserted through the hole in the bottom of the pot and embedded into the soil. By submerging the other end into water, the soil is kept uniformly moist as long as the water supply lasts.

Houseplants with wicks can be set in pans filled with gravel or stones. The wicks protruding from the bottom of the pots are placed in the gravel and water is poured into the pans which keeps the wicks wet. The water in the gravel is replaced as it is used by the plants and by evaporation. The plant benefits from both the uniform moisture supply and the added humidity to the air surrounding the plant.

Ho! Ho! Ho! Are you ready? It's that time again. Decorating the yard for Christmas is a centuries-old tradition. A home colorfully bedecked is one of the most effective ways of expressing outwardly the inner joy. And what could be a more suitable display than this North Pole family? It be a special delight for children.

The outdoor Christmas display pictured can be completed in only a few hours. The pictures come painted in bright, waterproof colors. To make the display, simply glue the pictures to plywood, then saw them out and they're ready for your yard. They will withstand all sorts of outdoor weather, like billboards, and may be used year after year. Santa is almost six feet tall; the other figures are in proportion.

Prices, including postage and handling, are as follows: No. 189 Mr. Santa $2.75; No. 335 Mrs. Santa $2.75; No. C-10 Five Elves $2.75. If air mail is desired, add 50¢ for each item ordered.

To obtain any one, or all of the figures shown here send cash, check or money order to:

Steve Ellingson, Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91408.

Other available displays: No. C-7 Nativity Scene $10; No. C-17 Lifesize Santa, Sleigh & Eight Deer $10; No. C-6 Snow Family $6. If Air Mail is desired add 25¢ to the total amount of your order.

Community leaders from across Nebraska will be in Lincoln Nov. 15 to participate in the 1974 Nebraska Community Improvement Program (NCIP) Awards Day.

This year 204 towns and neighborhoods entered the NCIP, co-administered by the Community Affairs Division of the Nebraska Economic Development Dept. and the Community Resource and Research Center of the College of Architecture of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Following a day of community improvement workshops, Gov. J. J. Exon will present awards to communities for furthering community betterment at the evening banquet.

Topics To Be Early Education

Three nationally-known educators will lead an estimated 300 parents, laymen and school personnel Monday and Tuesday in a citywide examination of the future of early childhood education.

Participants will question the major speakers, then probe future direction of education for the very young in discussion sessions.

David Weikert, Ypsilanti, Mich., will speak Monday at 8:45 a.m. on the school as an early childhood center. Monday at 1:15 p.m. the parental role in education will be discussed by Earl Schaefer of the North Carolina State Education Dept. Tuesday from 8:30 to 11 a.m. use of the schools as centers for early academic learning of basic subjects will be explored by Siegfried Engelmann, University of Oregon Professor. He is author of "Preventing Grades" and "Teaching Disadvantaged Children in the Preschool."

Luncheon both days will be at the Knolls. Symposium sessions will be at McPhee Elementary School, 820 So. 15th. Ron Brandt, Lincoln associate superintendent for instruction, will chair a panel including all three major speakers at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday.

University of Nebraska Teachers College Dean Robert Egbert will lead a summary discussion Tuesday at 1:15 p.m. He is founding director of the federal Follow Through program for young children who have been through the Head Start program.

Lincoln school officials, including Supt. John Prash, who will open the symposium Monday, have expressed concern about the role of the schools in reaching young children. Ted Bell, new U.S. commissioner of education, has said early childhood education and relationships between school and home are among his major concerns.

THINGS TO DO . . . IN LINCOLN

Four Firms With Travel Units May Be Affected

Four Nebraska bank holding companies that operate tour and travel agencies may be affected by a hearing scheduled to be conducted Jan. 14 by the Federal Reserve System's board of governors in Washington, D.C.

Robert Hamilton, vice president in charge of the Omaha branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, said federal law requires holding companies to own businesses directly related to banking.

Holding company ownership of tour and travel agencies is being challenged by independent travel companies on grounds the agencies are not tied closely enough to banking, he said.

Affected Nebraska firms: First National Corp. of Lincoln, owner of First National Bank of Lincoln and operator of Lincoln Tour and Travel.

NBC Co. of Lincoln, owner of National Bank of Commerce and operator of Travel Unlimited. Omaha National Corp., owner of Omaha National Bank and operator of Travel and Transport. Bankshares of Nebraska, owner of First National Bank of Grand Island and operator of Holiday Tour and Travel.

Graff: Filing Delay Was An Oversight

Henry Graff said Saturday that an oversight caused the one-day delay in the filing of his final pre-election campaign finance report for the office of county surveyor. Shirley Stunkel, Graff's campaign secretary, said Saturday that $175 was contributed to the campaign, and $278 expended.

WHICH CLOSING COSTS DEDUCTIBLE?

Expenses connected with the sale of real estate over and above the selling price are known as closing costs. Some of these are deductible from your income tax—others are not.

Property taxes are usually pro-rated so that both the buyer and seller each pay the taxes for the portion of the year that each owned the property. Each may deduct this amount—and only this amount—even though one or the other pays the entire amount.

Another deductible item that appears in closing costs, is interest charged to you on the mortgage up to the date of closing. Also deductible as interest is the amount charged as discount points—provided they are charged as a premium for the loan of the money—not when charged for services.

Non-deductible closing expenses are fire insurance, FHA mortgage insurance, and charges for rent for occupancy before closing.

Realtor® Gerald L. Schleich is a Director of the Nebraska Realtors' Association, Past President of the Lincoln Board of Realtors® and a Graduate of the University of Nebraska College of Law.

Luxury Ranch Living

By Andy Lang, AP

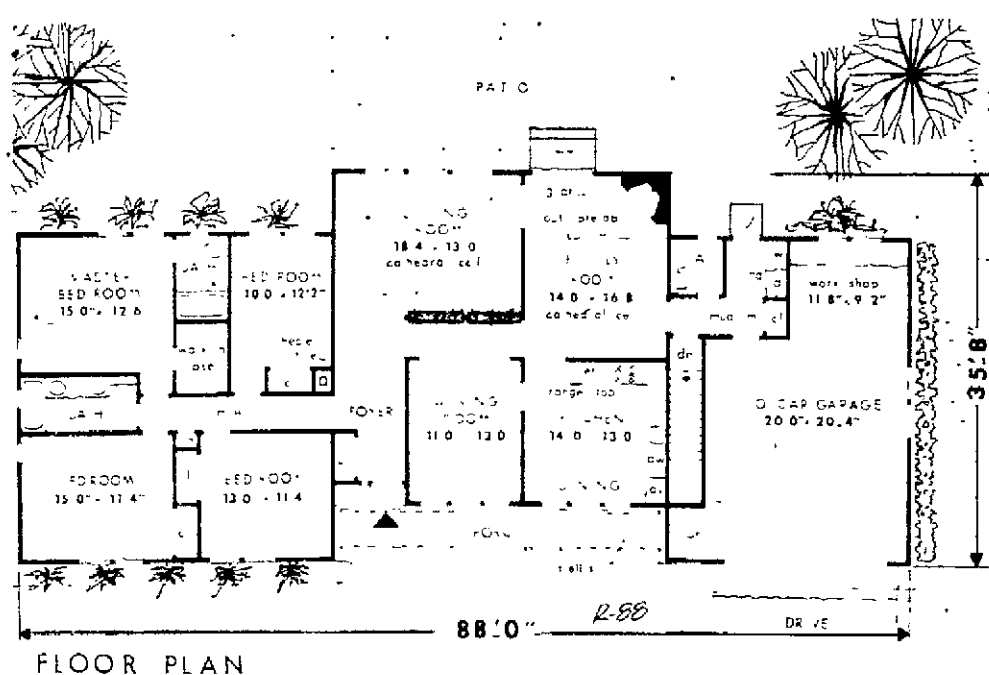

This long, low, sweeping ranch is accentuated with large roof overhangs and a trellised entrance. Along with the warmth of the vertical wood siding, the bold exterior wood trim around the large windows is expressive of the rambling prairie ranch.

The house has been divided by architect Samuel Paul into three main parts: the private sleeping area to the left of the foyer which contains four bedrooms and two baths; the central portion, which is the main living area, formal and informal; and, to the right, the garage wing—all on one level.

One is graciously welcomed into the house through the trellised porch and indented entrance.

The trellised effect over the front porch adds a distinctive touch to this luxury ranch house. Heavy wood trim adorns every window adding a rustic flavor.

The foyer is centrally located and leads to all the main rooms with the formal living and dining rooms immediately adjacent to the foyer.

To the right of these rooms are the informal family room and large eat-in kitchen. The cathedral living room towards the rear has a window wall facing the patio and garden. The dining room is in the front, also with a large expanse of glass. A circulation corridor separating the dining room from the living room is enhanced on one side with a planter divider and on the other side by the opening to the dining room, thereby eliminating any feeling of an enclosed corridor. This connection leads to the family room and kitchen.

The family room is also accessible to the living room through a sliding door which opens out to a large patio extending across the rear of the center section.

An optional corner fireplace is indicated. The ranch-type kitchen has all the equipment and counter space arranged in the form of an L, leaving an open area for informal dining.

The back entrance is located in the garage wing and leads into a mudroom, where the laundry is located as well as a lavatory adjacent to the family room.

In addition, there is a large closet for family use. The mudroom is also reached directly from the two-car garage.

Also off the mudroom and convenient to the garage and kitchen are the stairs to the full basement.

The garage is equipped with a work shop at the rear and storage space in the front.

In the bedroom wing, the master bedroom has its own private bath as well as a spacious walk-in closet. A sizeable hall bath equipped with two basins services the other bedrooms throughout the house. There is an abundance of closets.

Most Races, Issues Show Little Change Between Surveys

Poll: Dyas Gaining on Thone But Still Behind

© SRI Community Response, Inc. 1974

By John Barrette

Except in the First Congressional District race, few significant statistical shifts emerged from the comparison of a late October poll with earlier surveys of major Nebraska election contests.

There was some erosion of support for incumbent Republican Rep. Charles Thone in the Lincoln-dominated First District, but he still mustered a slight majority.

Challenger Hess Dyas, former Democratic state chairman, gained ground, but still trailed with backing from about one-third of those surveyed between Oct. 14 and 27.

The telephone survey of 918 registered voters throughout Nebraska was conducted for The Sunday Journal and Star by SRI Community Response, Inc. of Lincoln.

Voters questioned between Oct. 14 and

POLL OF NEBRASKA OPINION

27 continued their majority backing for retention of legislation to increase state school aid by $100 million over the next two years.

That law, LB772, is on the ballot as Referendum No. 300, with voters getting a crack at approval or rejection. The increased state school support would result in a shift of revenue reliance from local property taxes to state sales-income taxes.

The gubernatorial race is still a runaway, while two congressional contests and the battle for attorney general are still close enough to create election-night tabulation drama.

In the Oct. 14-27 survey, one of the tightest races appeared to be the battle for retiring Rep. Dave Martin's Third District House seat in western Nebraska.

Former State Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox held a slight edge, although the pollster warned that results were well within the tossup range.

Ziebarth, a Democrat, is running against Mrs. Haven Smith, Farm Bureau leader and wife of a rural Chappell wheat farmer.

Incumbent Democratic Gov. J. J. Exon dominates the race for the office he holds and is eyeing a landslide if voters follow poll trends.

He had more than double the support of the combined backing shown in the survey for both of his challengers, Hastings Sen. Richard Marvel, the Republican candidate, and Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers, a petition candidate.

Although still close in the polling, the attorney general race found Republican Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas in-

Innovators Put Money On Solar Energy Idea

By Bart Becker

In the gamblers' market of the modern world somebody will wager on nearly everything. True, there are few sure things, but there is one good bet for the timid speculator.

Even those who paid for their delusions and wagers on McGovern, the Dodgers and George Foreman wouldn't harbor such an abbreviated foresight that they'd bet against the sun coming up in the east tomorrow. It has been beaming solar radiation towards the earth at a virtually unchanged rate for several billion years.

Everybody wants a dependable employe like that and John McLaughlin and Allen Fries have decided to put Old Sol to work for them. As president and vice president respectively of Solar Inc. of Mead, they believe they have developed a solar energy system that will provide clean, low-cost heating, cooling and, potentially, electricity.

Fries says that, to his knowledge, Solar Inc. is the only company in the country — and probably in the world — working on a marketable solar energy collection, storage and distribution system. The patented system is expected to be on the market after the first of the year.

The company was founded by a series of coincidences.

Jim Schoenfelder of Iowa City, Ia., architectural firm of Hansen, Lind & Meyer invented the system and specified a particular type of insulation to be used in it. The manufacturer of Permafoam, a closed cell polystyrene insulation, was McLaughlin and Fries' Mid America Industries.

Solar Pilots

The duo formed Solar Inc., purchased the manufacturing and marketing rights to Schoenfelder's system and began planning buildings to put it to use. The pilot projects, an office building for the company and a home for McLaughlin, are both nearing completion.

Fries explained Solar Inc. holds two patents; one for the flat plate collector and another for the storage system.

"To our knowledge we are the only one in the U.S. perfecting the flat plate, air flow system for collection and distribution," Fries said. "Most use a heated water distribution system, but the biggest problem is water itself. The acid content in the water attacks the container."

In the home, two 30-foot collection plates face the south to catch the sun. The collectors are constructed of two layers of glass over a "hot plate" of black perforated metal. Temperatures in the panels will average around 210°.

Natural air flow moves the heat to the storage room where it is retained in a system of five-gallon containers of eutectic salt. In the house, a special 6x10 ft. basement room will hold all the heat storage equipment while the office's storage will be located above the main floor.

"The storage can be any place," Fries explained. "It could be detached, underground or in the attic."

A fairly conventional duct and blower system regulated by a thermostat moves the hot air throughout the house. The canisters maintain a reserve heat of about 95° with excess diverted to the outside.

Dollar Talk

Fries said Solar Inc. have spent about $250,000 proving the system works. McLaughlin's home is valued at about $100,000. But, he said, the buildings were "structurally overbuilt."

"Heating is the biggest problem in the country," Fries observed. "People can bear heat but they can't stand the cold."

The hundred grand, Fries said, is not a realistic figure once the system is being produced.

"For these models everything had to be hand made and it was very costly," he said. It would be best to install the system in a house designed specifically for it, he said. However the system could be adapted to many conventional homes.

He estimated it would cost $8,000 to $9,000 to install the system in a home, but once installed, Solar Inc.'s solar-heated office building near Mead. Exterior construction is completed.

"using local power to operate the system it would cost no more than $2 a month to heat a house that normally uses $60-80 worth of heat."

"The Federal government is talking about an extended mortgage if you buy a solar product," Fries continued. "And they're proposing each state give 10% real estate reductions for using a system."

Fries said the solar system is practical in any case, but "it really starts to pay" when it is used in a community of 100-150 homes or apartments.

"We have efficient heat storage for 8-10 days," Fries said. The longest continued cloudy period on local records dating back to 1896, lasted seven days, according to Fries.

Both innovators believe their solar heating needs no back up system. "but because of the mortgage we're obligated to include an electric coil as a preventive measure. If the temperature drops down, and there is no sun, the coil would automatically come in and heat that room."

Fries said a 16-unit apartment building is on the drawing board for construction near Ankeny, Ia. It would use one collector and storage system for all the units.

Amazing!

They are also considering an amazing project which they hope to give a serious push this spring.

"We have proposed a totally self-contained community of 8,000 - 10,000 people near Lincoln or Omaha," Fries said. We would manufacture our own electricity, design our own sewers, etc. We would use sophisticated windmills for power, have daily refuse collection and recycle all possible waste through a methane treatment to return it to the community.

"It would be our proposal that people would not have any utility charge whatsoever."

Fries said the company has been lobbying government officials for help on the project and anticipates some federal financial assistance. The Solar Inc. plan would generate electricity from the collector's heat rather than from steam.

"We would entertain other people's solar set-ups in the community," Fries said. "Of

Nebraskans' Action, Inaction Will Decide Elections

By John Barrette

Both action and inaction play a part in the choices Nebraskans will make when Tuesday's election fuses the present with the future.

Voters spurred to action will trek to the polls to choose a governor, other state officeholders and representation in Congress and to speak on the issue of increasing state school aid.

Post-Watergate reaction and general political apathy, however, could produce a different attitude among other potential voters. The result: inaction.

Secretary of State Allen Beermann predicted 410,000 Nebraskans will vote, a turnout of 52% of those registered. He said that would be the lowest general election turnout since 1946.

Some observers foresee an even lower turnout despite spirited congressional races, the school aid issue, an inviting weather forecast and near-completed farm crop harvesting.

The weatherman has predicted mostly fair skies and temperatures in the 30s Tuesday. The polls will be open from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. in the Central Standard time zone and from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the Rocky Mountain time zone.

GOP's Lead

Disenchantment with politics and a predicted easy win for Democrats in the governor's race may mean Republicans must spur themselves to the polls to avoid other losses.

Democrats, of course, can't sit on their hands in Nebraska and still make gains.

Republican incumbents lead in polls taken to assess voter mood in the state's two eastern congressional districts, but those surveys measure only preference at a given time.

Such polls fall short of predictions partly because they fail to determine whether the voters actually intend to cast their ballots or sit this one out.

First District Nebraskans find Republican Rep. Charles Thone facing the organized and well-financed challenge of Hess Dyas, former Democratic state chairman.

Second District

In the Omaha-dominated Second District, GOP Rep. John Y. McCollister is challenged by Daniel Lynch, chairman of the Douglas County Board.

The Third District race in western Nebraska is a tossup to decide who will replace retiring Republican Rep. Dave Martin.

Mrs. Haven Smith, a Farm Bureau leader, is the GOP candidate. Former State Sen. Wayne Ziebarth, Wilcox farmer-rancher, is her Democratic opponent.

Democrats have capitalized already by making dents in the state Republican registration majority.

In the First District, Republicans still have a 14,000-registration edge, but in the Second, the Democratic registration majority now is 30,000. In the Third, Republicans have a 37,000-registration bulge.

Approval or rejection of legislation to increase state school aid by $100 million over the next two years is a noncandidate issue voters will decide Tuesday.

If the law is retained through voter approval of Referendum No. 300, local schools will be financed half by local property taxes and half by statewide sales-income taxes. That is a statewide average, although district percentages for fund sources may vary.

LB772 was passed this year over the veto of incumbent Democratic Gov. J. J. Exon, who is seeking reelection. Exon is counting on his conservative image to woo voters into giving him a second term.

Few observers expect anything else. Exon and his running mate, Hastings attorney Gerald Whelan, face the Republican team of Hastings Sen. Richard Marvel for governor and Omaha-area publisher Anne Batchelder for lieutenant governor.

Petition candidate Ernest Chambers also is on the ballot as a candidate for governor. The Omaha state senator has run an articulate but underfinanced campaign.

Republicans hope to retain control of Statehouse offices below the gubernatorial level.

The hottest race pits Republican Paul Douglas against Democrat Frank Morrison to replace Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer, who is retiring.

Douglas, Lancaster County attorney, enjoys a slight edge in polls over Morrison, former Nebraska governor. A good Republican voter turnout could solidify his chances.

State Offices

Beermann seeks reelection in the face of a challenge from Omaha Democrat Catherine Dahlquist. Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson is challenged by Omaha Democrat Richard Larsen, who enjoys little support from officials in his own party.

The race for treasurer is between Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh, traditionally the leading vote-getter for the GOP, and Omaha Democrat Kurt Rasmussen.

Voters also will choose Public Service Commission (PSC) members in the PSC's Fourth District, which covers south-central Nebraska, and the Fifth District, covering western Nebraska. Republicans are favored.

On the nonpartisan ballot, 24 seats in the Unicameral are up for grabs election day. Lincoln races include two that are contested.

Sen. Roland Luedtke is challenged by Marge Schlitt in the 28th Legislative District, and Sen. Wally Barnett faces Jim Kubert in the 26th District.

Although the Legislature is nonpartisan, both races pit incumbents who are registered Republicans against challengers who are registered Democrats.

Other races on the ballot involve contests for educational, public power and environmental boards.

Voters must approve or reject three constitutional amendments. Amendment No. 1 would allow student representation on the University of Nebraska Board of Regents. The other two are governmental housekeeping measures.

GOP Voter Totals Ahead

Voter registration figures through Oct. 15 show Republicans leading Democrats in two of Nebraska's three Congressional Districts.

Democrats lead only in the Second District, which includes Douglas County. Registered Democrats total 127,709 there compared to 97,646 Republicans. Second District Independents totaled 13,882

In the First District, 134,906 Republicans were registered by Oct. 15. Democratic voters totaled 120,659 and Independents 12,881.

Republicans enjoyed their widest margin in the 61-county Third District, 150,768 Republicans registered there compared to 113,523 Democrats and 10,374 Independents.

Engagements Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Jacobs Jr. announce the engagement of their daughter Lana of White Plains, N.Y., to Porter Lamson Hovey of New York City.

Ms. Jacobs received her B.A. from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln School of Journalism. She attended graduate school at Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Mass.

Mr. Hovey attended Brooks School in North Andover, Mass. He received a B.A. in economics from Washington and Jefferson College in Washington, Pa., and a master's degree from the American Graduate School of International Management in Glendale, Calif. His parents are Willard P. Hovey of San Marino, Calif., and Mrs. Arlene Norris of New York City.

A Feb. 15 wedding is planned in New York City.

Fuller-Pedersen

Bend, Ore. — Dorothy Irene Fuller and Larry Dean Pedersen are planning a Nov. 9 wedding.

Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. Clark Fuller of Lincoln, Neb., and Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Pedersen.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Johnston-Pleskac

Omaha — A May 16 wedding is planned at Mary Our Queen Church by Miss Susan Johnston and Sgt. Joseph D. Pleskac of Rapid City, S.D.

Their engagement is announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Johnston. Sgt. Pleskac is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Pleskac of David City.

Miss Johnston is a senior at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, majoring in home economics education and extension. She is president of Phi Upsilon Omicron and a member of Mortar Board, Omicron Nu and Pi Lambda Theta honoraries.

Her fiancé serves with the U.S. Air Force, stationed at Ellsworth Air Force Base.

Wherritt-Martin

Fort Worth, Tex. — The engagement of Sherry A. Wherritt to Lynn W. Martin, both of Lincoln, Neb., is announced by her mother, Mrs. Evelyn Stafford.

Mr. Martin received his B.S. in microbiology from Iowa State University in Ames. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell H. Martin of Kahoka, Mo.

They are planning a Nov. 23 wedding in Lincoln.

Gaston-Pitts

Miss Vicki R. Gaston and Gary G. Pitts plan to be married Jan. 11 at St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Allie R. Gaston are parents of the bride-elect.

Her fiancé, son of Mrs. Edith K. Pitts of South Sioux City, attends the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Sconyers-Clifton

The engagement of Miss Patti L. Sconyers to Jim K. Clifton is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sconyers. Mr. Clifton is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald O. Clifton.

The future bride is a graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University where she is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority, and was W-Club sweetheart.

Her fiancé is a graduate of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a member of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

The couple plans a Feb. 1 wedding at Trinity United Methodist Church.

Phipps-Lorenzen

Ames, Iowa — Mr. and Mrs. Roger K. Phipps, formerly of Lincoln, Neb., announce the engagement of their daughter Rebecca Ann to Richard Carl Lorenzen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl R. Lorenzen, all of Dubuque.

Miss Phipps is a senior at Iowa State University, majoring in elementary education, and a member of Alpha Xi Delta Sorority.

Mr. Lorenzen is majoring in industrial administration at ISU and a member of Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. C. W. Hiatt and Earl D. Phipps, both of Lincoln.

And Maybe More?

Not 4 Spanish-American War Vets in State But 15

By Dean Terrill

Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Exactly how many Spanish-American War veterans are left to answer muster in Nebraska? Apparently the only certainty about that is that there are a few more than is commonly realized. Even the State Veterans Affairs Dept. can get fooled.

Queried for a Veterans Day article in the Oct. 27 Sunday Journal and Star, a spokesman for the state agency said "we think there are four but don't have their identities."

It was a gratified reporter then whose research turned up a four-some of Frank Clark of Friend, John Musil of Western, Hugh Clapp of the Veterans Administration Hospital at Grand Island and Albert Grimes of the Nebraska Veterans Home at Norfolk.

But bugler, sound retreat!

The article set Mrs. Claire Vix of Lincoln (1411 Harbour Blvd. West) to counting off — and up she comes with 11 more of the old soldiers. At that she makes no claim to naming them all, even though she is acting adjutant for the Nebraska Dept. of United Spanish War Veterans.

"I could come up with only eight men when I took over the organization's books in 1972," said the retired woman, daughter of a Fourth Cavalry sergeant-major. "I've been adding names one by one ever since and would sure like to hear of any other living Nebraskans who served in the war."

Besides the four mentioned, her roster includes:

George H. Allwine, Omaha.
Andrew Beck, Scribner.
Wilmer Blackett, Omaha.
J. A. C. Kennedy, Benkelman.
Ross D. Druliner, Benkelman.
Guy R. Sims, Waverly.
Virgil E. Barker, Scottsbluff.
Benjamin P. Dukes, Omaha.
James Knudson, Hastings.

Mrs. Claire Vix . . . on the lookout for more Spanish-American veterans.

John Morris, Lincoln.

Fred C. Robinson, now of Malvern, Iowa.

A former switchboard operator for The Sunday Journal and Star, Mrs. Vix confides that "on weekends I used to keep the WATS line busy keeping track of those fellows."

Also historian and acting commander of Lincoln's William E. Lewis Camp 2, one of several organization encampments in the state, she also has an extensive file of newspaper clippings on the veterans.

Interestingly, the reported death of Nebraska vet Frank M. Clark in New York two years ago reminded that another Frank Clark was living in Friend.

He was the sprightly veteran featured in the Oct. 27 article.

Mrs. Vix also called attention to the fact that Hugh Clapp was inadvertently demoted in the article. Although hospital officials had identified the Steele City native as a sergeant, they failed to note that the records also listed him as a brigadier general later on.

From 1917-19, he served as Nebraska adjutant general. A University of Nebraska law graduate of 1902, the veteran, 97, is also a former banker and construction engineer.

With so few veterans remaining, encampment activities are pretty much left to auxiliary organizations. And these are so much on the decline that the William E. Lewis group, for example, is down to nine members.

Of these, only treasurer Mrs. Daisie Garton is a Spanish-American widow. The other eight members are "daughters, daughters-in-law or granddaughters."

Mrs. Vix got involved in USWV work while living in Arizona in 1938. Her father, the late Emil Pauly, was a veteran of the Philippine Insurrection, the Indian Wars, the Spanish-American War and the Cuban Occupation.

"Dad was in the immediate outfit which captured Geronimo," said Mrs. Vix. "He died in 1945 and I suppose I'm really carrying on for him."

Our Attorney General should have the support of informed citizens throughout the state...

DOUGLAS Does.

Paul Douglas and I have discussed the work of the Attorney General often during the past four years. Knowing that Paul would seek the office if I chose not to run made the decision not to file for a sixth term much easier.

I know Paul Douglas to be a man of integrity and sound legal ability.

The responsibilities of this office now call for a hard working lawyer who can promise years of continued service to the state. That man is Paul Douglas.

Alliance Is Hesitating on Last Step to Boomtown

By C. David Kotok
Alliance — This Panhandle community is one step from becoming a boomtown, and its civic leaders do not want to take that step.
Once a symbol of the dying trend in rural America, Alliance has been able to turn things around at the crucial point. Oddly, the energy crisis helped. The population is now near the 8,400 residents the city held in 1960 after declining to 6,700 in the 1970 census.

The gravity of Alliance's population problem in 1970 and 1971 is illustrated by the estimate that 60% of the residents were retired ranchers, farmers and railroad workers. Burlington Northern was the only major industrial employer.

Shaking the Box Butte County seat out of its complacency was not an easy task.
The town's businessmen and property owners made substantial money during World War II, when an air base was located nearby. Agriculture was the No. 1 industry, and when prices were good, bankers and businessmen were happy.
But the prolonged outmigration of young people began to bother the community. C. W. Griffiths, vice president of the Guardian State Bank said the town "used to go days with no new babies born" because there were so few young married couples

"We developed a real concern," he said, "and that made us more progressive." In 1969, when rapid growth was not an immediate prospect, Alliance built a new sewer system that can handle a population of more than 30,000.
In 1972, things began to change. Electric Hose and Rubber Co. opened a new plant. Then Woolrich opened a facility to make down-filled jackets and sleeping bags. Things began looking up, but the growth explosion was yet to come.

Leading Supplier
BN and Wyoming coal mining companies combined to make Alliance one of the nation's leading energy suppliers. Today, it is the major rail division point for western coal, with more than 56 coal trains passing through the city weekly.
Transportation of coal has resulted in the addition of 250 railroad workers to the labor force since 1970. With the establishment of Electric Hose and Woolrich, there are more than 600 industrial employees in Alliance who were not there a few years ago. The number is going to climb.

City Manager Robert Placek finds his community out of the industrial promotion business. "I don't think we can honestly tell any industry we have the labor force," he said.

A BN spokesman predicted the number of railroad employees based in Alliance will jump from the current 550 to 1,000 in 1980. Some residents think the figure may be conservative, since it does not include an expected influx of construction personnel for new and renovated BN facilities.

Electric Hose, manufacturer of automotive hoses, is looking for new employees all the time. It has bought options on more property in the industrial park. Robert Simmons, plant supervisor, said the company cannot plan an expansion now because of a labor shortage.

Woolrich is on the verge of moving from its downtown location to a new building in the industrial park, and there were indications the company may maintain both plants.
So, like the neon on the motels in the area, Alliance has put out the "no vacancy" sign to industrial prospects.

Placek and others say they have a responsibility to work with the three industries they have now instead of bringing in new ones. For these leaders, the good is one of ensuring that the community does not grow so fast that it cannot be controlled by orderly planning.

With the growth has come a tremendous housing shortage that Realtor Jack Brittan says will keep the city "playing catch-up for three or four years." Prices on homes, he says, are skyrocketing at a much faster rate than the national 10%.

$10,000 Price Gain
In what he called an extreme example, Brittan said a house he sold for $20,000 a year ago was resold for $30,000 last spring.

Virtually all residents see housing as the No. 1 problem and the key to orderly growth of Alliance. For example, Electric Hose official Simmons says he feels as if he is in real estate business because of the difficulty he encounters in finding housing for his new employees.

Brittan has begun a housing development and has sold 11 of its 33 lots. Businessman Neil Colerick, described as one of Alliance's "movers and shakers," is soliciting $100 each from 100 residents to match federal funds for a low-cost apartment complex.

A mobile home park has mushroomed from farmland to a 100-unit complex in one year.

Placek said he does not want to see mobile homes become the chief source of housing because this would put pressure on schools and city services without providing a tax base. Such problems have made Placek a prime supporter of LB772, the state aid to education bill.

A newly opened office of Lincoln's First Federal Savings & Loan Assn. has been making housing loans. The financing however, is solely in the $30,000-plus range.
Simmons calls such houses "railroad homes" because of the $1,000-plus monthly salaries paid by BN. The theory that the new homes would empty some of the older ones in a lower price range has yet to be demonstrated.

Meanwhile, an independent consulting engineer has estimated Alliance's housing needs at 876 units in the next three years.

There are other problems, too. Many talk of the need for new commercial businesses, restaurants and motels. "We need a couple of new restaurants," Brittan said, "but where are we going to find the people to wait tables?"

Some Upset
The influx of industry and new business has upset some of the main-street businessmen. There is more money to spend downtown, but employers have had to increase wages to keep their help.

It is generally believed that downtown merchants have not maintained a competitive spirit in a day of fast-changing styles. Hence the problems.

Even Griffiths, who watched his bank's assets grow from $21 million in 1970 to $36 million in 1974, says: "There are some changes I just plain don't like."

Some of the new merchants, such as Marion Shumway, have begun to shake the established firms out of their complacency. Mrs. Shumway, who owns dress shops in both Chadron and Alliance, says merchants did not have a "give the public what they want" attitude.
She and Simmons, tongue-lashed businessmen recently at a meeting on night openings. She said she would keep her shop open nights regardless of what they wanted. Now, she says, even those who fought the idea are open Thursday nights.

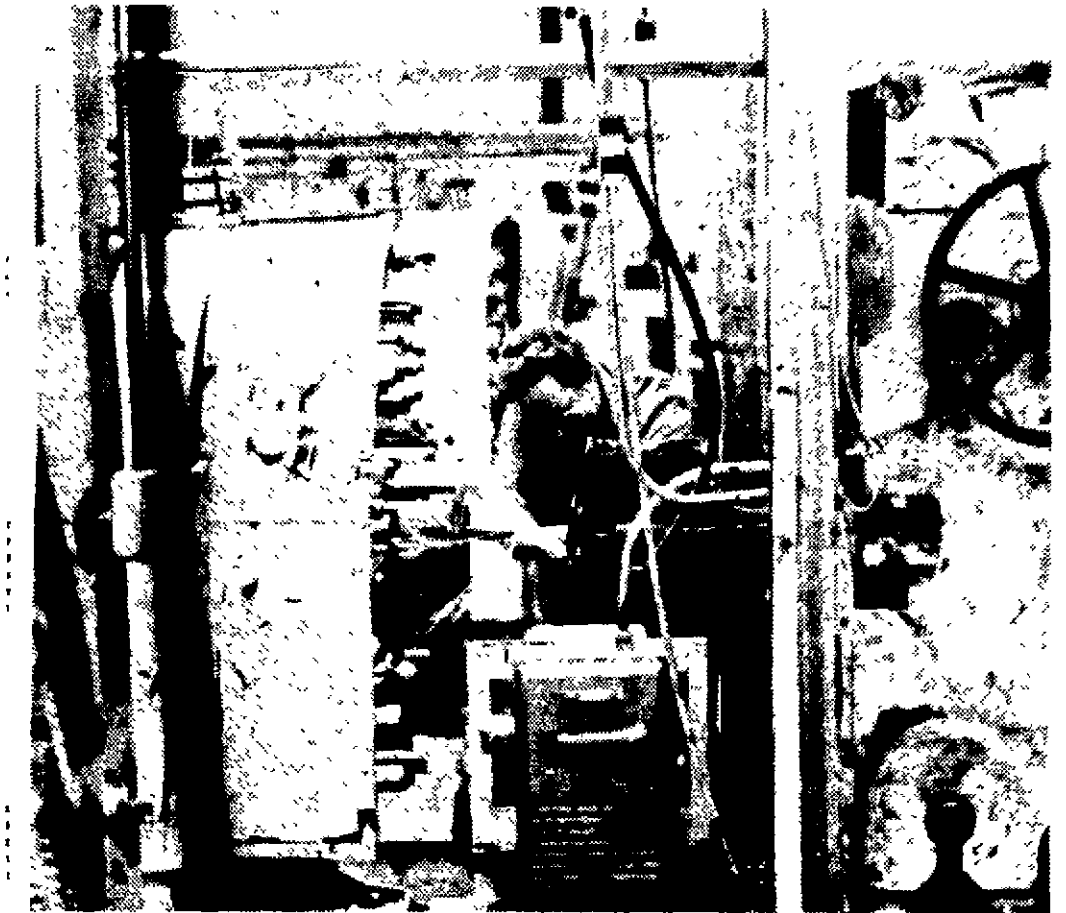

For Simmons and other Alliance newcomers from the East, the easier life of the town makes them "feel as free as a bird flying through the air." After spending much of his life in the industrial East, he has become a leading booster.

One large group has not benefited from the Alliance boomlet: the Indians. Most observers agree that the Indians have not shared in the increased job opportunities because many employers believe their absentee rate makes them poor risks. Simmons, who admits that the Indian workers in his plant do have a higher absentee rate, perceives some bias in the community.
He said he hopes that training, education programs and "open minds and hearts" will show the Indians "what a good life is waiting for them."

Hopper car after hopper car of Wyoming coal moves across Nebraska, above, after passing through Alliance, the major rail division point for western coal.

While the railroad remains the number one employer in Alliance, the town's growth also has been spurred by the influx of new industry, such as the Electric Hose and Rubber Co. plant shown here.

Poll: Incumbent GOPs Lead County Board Races

By Warren Weber
The two Republican incumbents in the Lancaster County commissioner races are leading by respectable margins, results of an Oct. 14-17 poll show.
In District Two, Bob Colin was favored by 45% of those questioned, compared to 30% for his opponent, Ralph Harlan.

In the District Three commissioner race, Kenneth Bourne was supported by 44% of the poll respondents, while his opponent, H. Bruce Hamilton, drew 34% backing.

The poll of 215 Lancaster County residents was conducted for The Sunday Journal and Star by SRI Community Response, Inc. of Lincoln. The pollster put the potential margin of statistical error for the total results at plus or minus 6.5 percentage points at a 95% confidence level.

Bourne, 65, a small businessman, has been a commissioner 16 years and is campaigning on his record.

Hamilton, 32, an attorney, has based his campaign on the contention that it's time for a change and a new approach to the problems facing Lancaster County government.

In the Oct. 14-17 poll, 46% of the respondents 45 and older supported Bourne and 42% of those in the 18-24 age bracket favored Hamilton.

Colin, 54, the owner of an electric motor service company, is campaigning on the theme that efforts to consolidate the county and city governments must continue.

He is seeking his second term in a race which pits him against Harlan, a 72-year-old former commissioner who maintains that county-city merger efforts have gone far enough and wants to usher in a return to rural representation on the County Board.

Harlan, a Hickman farmer and land developer, is trying to make a political comeback to an office held 12 years and vacated four years ago when he stepped down to run, unsuccessfully, for the Nebraska Railway Commission (now the Public Service Commission).

Nearly one-fourth of the Lancaster residents polled say they are undecided on their choice for county commissioner. The way the undecided vote goes at election time can sometimes determine the outcome of a race. This may be the case for the four Lancaster County Board contenders in 1974.

The questions asked poll respondents and their tabulated responses:

Not All Shares Sold, However Hastings City Nat'l. Stock Auction Successful — Yaussi

By Gene Kelly

For the first time since it was formed in 1967, Lincoln-based NBC Co. has failed to sell, in its initial offering, all of the stock of an affiliate bank holding company.

Fifty-one percent (212,581 shares) of the common stock offering of Hastings City National Co. were purchased by NBC Co. shareholders and the public last week. A total of 419,910 shares at $7.50 each were involved. Hastings City National, in turn, owns 98.8% of the stock of City National Bank of Hastings.

In spite of investor response, Glenn Yaussi, board chairman of NBC Co. (itself a bank holding company), termed the Hastings City National stock auction "successful . . . it raised $1.6 million, which is more than the total of any previous offering of an affiliate's stock."

The remainder of the stock, he explained, has been withdrawn and exchanged for 9% debenture notes, issued by Hastings City National.

Yaussi, who is also board chairman of Hastings City National, said the lack of investor response "probably reflects the preference of NBC Co. stockholders for investments with cash dividends. This is a growth stock."

"The rates of return on many fixed value investments are so good today that people are trying to lock in good returns, and aren't willing to wait for growth," he continued. "The U.S. economy is as bad as it's ever been for the purpose of selling equity issues."

Yaussi said the 51% figure means that "Hastings City National has less equity and more debt than we might wish, but it doesn't, at this point, affect the worth of the stock." And because there are fewer outstanding shares than had been planned, he explained, "the potential earnings per share increases."

NBC Co. stockholders were offered the stock on the basis of one share of Hastings City National for each two shares of NBC Co. stock they owned.

Some potential investors may have considered the Hastings stock overpriced, Yaussi noted, since it's unlikely that it will pay a dividend soon.

Other investors may have been scared away by a note on the cover of the stock prospectus which stated "these securities involve a high degree of risk."

The Securities and Exchange Commission has tightened its guidelines on this type of stock prospectus in recent months, Yaussi said.

Under a section on risk factors, the prospectus notes that interest and principal on a $3.2 million long-term loan from United Bank of Denver must be paid out of dividends paid to Hastings City National Co. by City National Bank of Hastings.

Interest must also be paid on installment notes to former stockholders of the bank.

In four of the last five years the Hastings bank earnings would have been insufficient to cover even the interest (11 3/4%) and principal on the Denver bank loan, the prospectus says. The interest rate is adjustable quarterly and keyed to the prime rate of the Denver bank.

But Yaussi says earnings of City National Bank are up. "Its growth is up . . . it's having one of its best years ever."

Other NBC Co. sources say the bank has the potential of doubling the profit level it had when bought by Yaussi last November, and would then have no trouble in handling its debt load.

The prospectus reveals that the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City is examining NBC Co. as to whether it is exercising a controlling influence over the management or policies of the affiliated banks.

The Federal Reserve Board is specifically watchful for evasion or abuse of the Federal Bank Holding Company Act in situations which might involve "common ownership of multiple one-bank holding companies," the prospectus says.

Yaussi notes that the NBC Co. board has been "pushing for a Federal Reserve decision on these questions. Their rulings could well be to the advantage of our affiliate network."

Yaussi says he doesn't expect that results of the Hastings stock offering will have any impact on the upcoming offer of the holding company stock of LBE Co. (Lincoln Bank East) to shareholders of NBC Co.

"We'll bring that to NBC stockholders on schedule, before the end of the year," Yaussi said. "It's a smaller issue of 187,964 shares which seeks an investor total of $629,000."

NBC Co., with assets of more than $550 million, has an affiliate relationship with seven other Nebraska banks and their bank holding companies: Fremont First National Co., Fremont First State Co., Kearney First National Co., Grand Island Overland Co., North Platte State Co., LBE Co. (Lincoln Bank East), and Lincoln Bank South. The National Bank of Commerce is wholly-owned by NBC Co.

The affiliates were acquired basically through this procedure: Yaussi negotiated the purchase of each bank by a group of NBC Co. directors. With Federal Reserve Board approval, a one-bank holding company was formed to own the bank. The stock of each holding company was then offered to NBC Co. shareholders.

Police Suspect Arson in Fire At Irvington

Irvington (AP)—Officials say arson may have been involved in a $60,000 fire at the Camelot Village Apartments Saturday.

Irvington Police Chief Jay Dunn said firemen found evidence someone may have been in the building before the blaze started. About 40 firemen fought the fire in an unoccupied townhouse and brought it under control in about one hour.

16 World War I Vets Left in Last Man's Club

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — The empty chairs increase.

There was room for 168, but 152 of the chairs were empty. A white cloth with a name printed on it was draped over each unoccupied chair.

It was the annual meeting of the Council Bluffs Last Man's Club, an organization started in 1933 with 168 World War veterans. The draped chairs honored deceased members.

There was a bottle on the speaker's table "about 85% full of an old wine. The missing portion is believed to have evaporated over the 39 years club members have carried it to each meeting."

The bottle has an important significance to the club. The last man will open it and toast fallen comrades for the time.

Conversations of old battles and experiences followed the dinner and the meeting — The Argonne Forest, Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood.

Then taps sounded and another meeting of the Last Man's Club ended.

Character Screening of Law Students Is Eyed

By Bill Kretfel

The character screening of potential future attorneys — both upon their entry into law school and again when they graduate — is a facet of upgrading the legal profession that is going to get further study in Nebraska.

Noting that "there's a real need" for such a procedure, Nebraska State Bar Assn. (NSBA) President Bernard B. Smith of Lexington said the bar will make "a studied and considered review" of such a plan during the next year while he's at the helm of the association.

The concept of character screening of law students by the bar was discussed by Bert Overcash, immediate past president of the NSBA, during an address to the association's house of delegates at the group's recent annual meeting in Omaha.

Texas Has Plan

The Lincoln lawyer said Texas has adopted such a plan, and suggested that because of the increasing number of students enrolling law colleges, Nebraska might want to consider it also.

While neither man is personally familiar with the Texas program, the deans of Nebraska's two colleges of law say they find nothing objectionable about a bar screening procedure.

UNL's Dr. Henry M. Grether Jr. said while that school already does a form screening, "we don't have the physical resources to do a thorough job. We'd have no objections to the bar doing it."

Creighton's Steven P. Frankino said: "The kind of professional investigation is very responsive to the need for strong policing of those who wish to gain admittance to the bar. It sounds like quite a positive thing."

Supreme Court

According to Mrs. Ann Palise, assistant director of standards of admissions for the Texas State Bar (TSB), the screening program went into effect there on Aug. 1 upon its adoption by the Texas Supreme Court.

She said it involved the establishment of a TSB screening committee in each of the state's 17 judicial districts, replacing the former bar candidates committees that existed in each county.

Mrs. Palise said the initial screening by the bar — independent of screenings by law colleges themselves which are designed to determine a student's qualifications for admission — is conducted during a student's first semester in law school. She said it deals with the student's moral character "and their general fitness to practice law."

She said while the TSB screening in no way dictates whether a person can enter law school or graduate from it, the results of it are critical in the determination of whether that student will be admitted to the bar and allowed to practice law.

Mrs. Palise said a student might pass the TSB screening with flying colors; be advised that there are some problems, but it's possible to work them out; or — in cases where findings are very negative — be told that admission to the bar is extremely unlikely.

Time and Money

"It's only fair to tell such students that they're not going to get into the bar before they expend the time and money" going to law school, she commented, but observed that some people might want to get that legal education without any intention of actually practicing law some day.

The recourse of a student who has been told that chances of bar admission are slim is a factor of the TSB screening program that Mrs. Palise pridefully points to, noting that "the constitutional due process procedure is absolutely spelled out."

She said the screening committees make their recommendations either for or against bar admission to the Board of Law Examiners — an arm of the Texas Supreme Court — which holds a full, adversary hearing on a negative report. If that board concurs in the negative finding, the student can then take the matter to district court, and go through the entire due process procedure . . . presumably up to and including courts at the federal level.

Six Attorneys

(In Nebraska, Supreme Court Clerk George Turner said the Nebraska State Bar Commission — made up of six attorneys from around the state and himself — reviews all applications for admission to the NSBA, reporting its findings to the high court.

He said if the committee recommends rejection, there is no "due process procedure" spelled out, although the applicant can ask the Nebraska Supreme Court to review that action. Turner said this has happened in the past and, in every case, the court has concurred with the committee.)

Mrs. Palise said Florida and California have similar bar screening plans, adding that Florida is often considered the leader in that field. "But," she noted, the due process procedure available to students in that state "is rather vague."

She said the screening of students in all of Texas' eight law schools is conducted by the TSB committee in the students' home judicial district. She said the investigation involves communicating by mail with references listed by the student and all of his or her past employers, plus checking court and school records.

Mails Used

If a further investigation appears necessary, personal contacts are made with neighbors and others who know the student's background, Mrs. Palise explained, noting that in instances where students come from outside of Texas, the TSB screening committee in the judicial district of that person's law school takes charge of the investigation.

She said procedures in these cases are the same as for Texas residents, principally using the mails to check out a person's background.

Mrs. Palise said when a personal investigation is also desired, the TSB can ask the bar association in the student's home state to conduct such a check, "or we can fund a private investigation."

"It's only a small percentage of all the students that you really need to but-thole," she offered.

Mrs. Palise said costs of administering the TSB screening procedure are borne by a $50 fee imposed on each student entering law school. She said the money is paid only once, although a second screening of each graduate is also conducted "to update our initial findings. Many things can happen during a person's years in college."

Second Screening

She pointed out that the due process procedure applies equally to the second screening.

She said the screening plan resulted from studies that the TSB began seven years ago, drawing upon the knowledge of attorneys, judges, law school deans and the Texas Supreme Court to determine, among other things, how to upgrade admissions to the TSB.

She said impetus for raising the standards was provided by studies and reports of the American Bar Assn. which she said indicated that as many as 4% or 5% of the nation's lawyers were either criminals or mentally incompetent.

NSBA president Smith said while that percentage "sounds high to me," he noted that he does not have benefit of the ABA studies to which Mrs. Palise referred. He added however, that bar screening of prospective lawyers "is something that has to be done."

"In defense of our profession, we must be selective about who we let in."

'We Need Now'

Smith said while the emphasis of NSBA studies during the next year "will be on things we need now," the Texas plan, along with others, "will demand our attention." He said filings for bar admissions are occurring "in unprecedented numbers," adding that because of this, "the whole screening process needs revamping."

Smith said the scholastic standards of law school graduates has been upgraded and, as a result, "we've been getting better graduates than in the old days. They're capable and smart."

"Now," he said, "a further look has to be taken at the character and integrity" of those who wish to enter the practice of law.

Creighton Law Dean Frankino said he believes that the decision about who is to gain bar admission "is a responsibility that rests with the bar itself. Law schools," he said, "are not the place where such a determination should be made."

'More Aware'

UNL's Law Dean Grether said he doesn't feel that the need for screening is any greater now than it ever was — "we're just more aware of it."

Grether said bar screening could have an additional benefit in cases where it was determined that something about a person characteristics might be detrimental to other students.

"If, for example, a student possessed a mental quirk that might indicate a tendency to commit rape, he shouldn't be here anyway."

CAN Backs Some Candidates

Consumer Alliance of Nebraska (CAN) urged voters to support candidates for state office who are aware of consumer problems and issues.

Based on a CAN conducted survey, the organization supports either J. J. Exon or Ernest Chambers for governor; Gerald Whelan for lieutenant governor.

Others are Hess Dyas, District 1, and Mrs. Haven Smith, District 3, for Congress, and Paul Douglas for attorney general.

State Legislature candidates and their districts supported by CAN are Jack Cary, 36; Thomas Dugdale, 8; Donald Dworak, 22; Richard Giblin, 6; Warren Swigart, 8; Roland Luedtke, 28; W. E. Nicholas, 48; Myron Rumery, 42; Larry Stoney, 4, and Hugo Srb, 18.

School Aid Bill

Warner Charges Whitney Information Misleading

State Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly has charged Chappell Sen. Ramey Whitney with distributing false and misleading material "at the last minute" before Tuesday's election concerning LB772.

Whitney has released material which leaves out much of the state aid provided for in the bill which would be distributed to schools, according to Whitney.

The releases contain false percentages of state aid various school districts would receive, Warner charged, because much of the aid that would be provided is intentionally left out.

Warner also charged:

—$5 million of state aid earmarked for smaller K-12 schools was ignored.

—All schools will be reimbursed one-half of their legally required transportation costs was omitted.

—The releases totally ignore that the bill provides for a reduction in non-resident tuition costs.

Hospitals To Hear Rate Review Merits

By Bess Jenkins

Norman Clem of Lincoln, director of the Nebraska Hospital Assn. Reimbursement Plan Rate Review, will be in Omaha most of this week conferring with officials who have not sought the rate review available to their hospitals.

Costs for such voluntary reviews are covered by annual Nebraska Hospital Assn. dues paid by each member hospital.

The goal is to help hospitals keep down costs to patients whenever possible, without putting a hospital in a position where it might have to close down or jeopardize quality of care.

In reporting to the association's Rate Review Committee (RRC), Clem said about six of the Omaha area hospitals have indicated an interest in the rate review certification next year.

These include University of Nebraska Medical Center, Douglas County, Immanuel Medical Center, Lutheran and Bishop Clarkson hospitals. The new Papillion hospital now replacing doctors hopes for a 1976 review, according to Clem.

Not yet making a commitment are Nebraska Methodist, St. Joseph, Children's Memorial and Archbishop Bergan Mercy. The last named had one review in which the RRC declined to certify the rate as necessary.

Jack Stiles, RRC chairman and St. Elizabeth Community Health Center executive director, said Omaha's slow action is puzzling in view of "the big interest by the smaller outstate hospitals."

"They are pounding at the door to have their budgets considered and get an increased rate certification after being under price controls so long."

In the RRC's opinion, metropolitan or larger hospitals will find benefits to certification and review as beneficial as smaller hospitals.

All of Lincoln's Community hospitals except Bethesda (formerly Providence) have had one or more reviews.

Clem believes at least 70 of the 106 hospitals in the association will be reviewed during 1975, perhaps as many as 10 a month. RRC members agreed this may call for more staff or contracting accounting firm services on a part-time basis.

According to Clem, a dozen of 15 hospitals in southwest Nebraska visited the previous week intend to seek initial reviews. One still is considering review, the other, may be closing its doors and the one is proprietary hospital.

The Lutheran Hospital and Home Society of Fargo, N.D., which operates eight hospitals in Nebraska, intends to seek reviews during 1975, Clem said.

Moulting Nails

Baker Lake, NWT (UPI) — The Ptarmigan — A game bird of high mountains and the far north — moults its toe nails twice a year.

During winter, the bird's long claw-like nails permit easier walking on ice. More conventional nails are grown in the spring to adapt to low, succulent vegetation.

Dr. Levin to Discuss Student Research Role

"The Role of the Student in Medical Research" will be discussed by Dr. William C. Levin of Galveston at the University of Nebraska Medical Center's first annual Student Research Day Nov. 11.

Dr. Levin will be on the Omaha campus as director of the clinical research center and president of the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

Scheduled the rest of the day are research paper abstracts by 16 medical students on the Omaha campus. Winners in clinical and basic science research competition that day will be given all-expense-paid trips to national student medical research meetings.

Fred McCurdy, junior medical student and Student Research Forum chairman, said the new day concept is to permit students to present research and to get the entire campus involved in student research and research day.

ATTENTION CONCERNED CITIZENS DID YOU KNOW?

THAT DURING THE PAST FOUR YEARS AND BECAUSE OF HIS REFUSAL TO YIELD TO THE COURTHOUSE POLITICAL PRESSURES, AND THE FACT THAT HE HAS HAD THE FORTITUDE AND ABILITY TO STAND UP AND BE HEARD AND SAY WHAT HE THINKS IS RIGHT, BOB COLIN, CHAIRMAN OF THE LANCASTER COUNTY BOARD HAS PROMOTED AND MADE POSSIBLE THE FOLLOWING CHANGES TO IMPROVE COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

- Rubber Stamping of County Government Operations.
Bob Colin feels this method of conducting any type of operation creates inefficiency and has been eliminated.
- Closed Door Meetings.
Bob Colin feels the public and the news media has the right to know what their County Government is doing at all times. Open door policies are now being used.
- County-City Government Cooperation.
Bob Colin feels that many costly duplications in services can be eliminated, and will not only save tax dollars, but will increase and provide more efficient services to the taxpayers.
- Advance Meeting Notices.
Bob Colin feels it is very important the public and the news media be notified in advance of the issues coming before the County Board.
- Standard County Building Code and Inspection.
Bob Colin feels the rural citizens of Lancaster County are now protected and assured of good building construction.
- Juvenile Attention Home.
Bob Colin feels this will eliminate the holding of juveniles in our present inadequate jail facilities.
- Lancaster Manor Nursing Home.
Bob Colin feels the cancelling of the appalling contract, and returning of control of operations of the manor to the county, has resulted in far better care for the residents and the savings of thousands of tax dollars each year.
- Citizens Involvement.
Bob Colin feels the many citizen advisory boards appointed have assisted the County Board in making decisions that are in the best interest of the taxpayers.
- Fire Protection, Emergency Medical and Rescue Services.
Bob Colin feels something must be done to improve these services in the rural areas of Lancaster County and a complete study is now underway.
- Standard Personnel System.
Bob Colin feels the new personnel system will not only provide County employees with job security and equal pay for equal work, but will assure the taxpayers that qualified employees are being hired to conduct county business.
- Standard Purchasing Plan.
Bob Colin feels that by consolidating all county purchasing under one office, to take advantage of volume buying and standard bidding procedures, will save thousands of tax dollars each year.
- Solid Waste Disposal Program.
Bob Colin feels this new program will assist the rural citizens in disposing of their solid waste that is becoming more of a problem each year.
- County Insurance Program.
Bob Colin feels the review of the county's insurance program has eliminated many duplications of insurance coverages and costly premiums.
- County Government Improvements.
Bob Colin feels that county government improvement has moved ahead during the past four years as a result of using good common sense — good business practices — and consideration for the taxpayers.

Bob Colin's opponent has publicly stated if re-elected he will return county government operations to the horse and buggy methods that were used in the past.

Please don't let that happen.

Christmas Seal Goal Is $225,000

Washington Perspective

By Andy Montgomery

Objection of Arizonan Could Hurt Nebraskans

Washington — Free enterprise advocate Paul Fannin, according to his official biography, is a "former partner in Fannin Brothers, an industrial concern marketing petroleum products and agricultural chemicals."

U.S. Sen. Paul Fannin, according to 25 Senate colleagues, is the reason the Senate may have lost the psychological edge in pressuring the Federal Energy Administration to hold the lid on propane gas prices.

Which means thousands of Nebraska farmers, ranchers and other rural users may face the prospect of paying up to 35% more for their propane this winter, atop the 200-300% boosts already experienced since last winter.

No one is accusing or has accused the two-term Republican senator of ulterior or selfish motives. But in placing a "hold" on Senate Resolution 424, Fannin has put himself in the awkward position of creating a situation that could benefit his family-owned business which operates not only in Arizona but in New Mexico, Idaho and Mexico.

By objecting to the resolution's consideration on the Senate floor, he blocked the Senate from going on record prior to the election recess in opposition to FEA's sanction of a 3-5¢ per gallon hike in propane prices.

A "sense of the Senate" resolution doesn't have the force of law but it can serve to effectively focus legislative displeasure on policies or actions felt to be against the public interest.

Rethinking Decision

Frequently, a heavy vote forces a rethinking of the official decision.

Resolution sponsors now believe this critical moment may have slipped by, even though the Congress is due back Nov. 18. They reason FEA officials may feel they can safely ignore senatorial and public anger once election pressures are behind them.

The resolution is supported by a fourth of the Senate, mostly Democrats but with some Republicans. A partial listing includes Gale McGee of Wyoming, George McGovern and James Abourezk of South Dakota, Peter Dominick of Colorado, Harold Hughes and Dick Clark of Iowa, William Proxmire and Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

Fannin contends the 25 are attempting to "jam it (the resolution) down our throats" before all the arguments are in.

Until we can do it in a more orderly fashion," a spokesman stresses, the senator plans to continue to prevent Senate action.

In the absence of hearing, he underscored, no one can say the price increases are not warranted "to produce maximum production" of propane in these energy-short times.

However, Humphrey counters that "we have had study after study made of this" and the gas industry has failed to produce data to justify any new increases.

'Unlimited Profiteering'

In harsh language, the Minnesotan declared "it is sheer unlimited profiteering that is going on," a charge echoed by Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington who alleges a "demonstrated record of gross abuses in the marketing of propane."

Humphrey said he wants the FEA and others in the administration "to understand that if they permit this kind of a price increase, or authorize it, that it is nothing more or less than an economic 'ripoff'."

Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri underscores that "pricing regulation loopholes last winter permitted disproportionate increases in propane prices" which still have yet to be cleared up.

"It does not appear logical to permit further increases when the FEA is not yet certain that earlier unjustified increases have been corrected," he said.

"In view of the importance of this measure in preventing a further inflationary propane price increase, and in view of the obvious support," his colleague, Thomas Eagleton, scolded, "I find it unfortunate and regrettable that a hold has been placed on the bill."

Social Security Office Is Purchased by Blood Bank

The present home of the Lincoln District Social Security office at 29th and O Sts. has been purchased by the Community Blood Bank of the Lancaster County Medical Society.

P.D. Duensing, administrative director of the blood bank and medical society executive secretary, said it is hoped the $25,000 purchased building can be occupied by next May or June.

This is when Social Security expects to be able to move into the new downtown federal building. Owners of the building until the blood bank purchase this weekend were Alan M. Oldfathers and Gerald G. Treadways.

According to Duensing, the one-story, architectural barrier-free structure will house both the community blood bank and its parent group, the Lancaster County Medical Society.

He said the bank-society space at 620 No. 48th has been inadequate for some time for the growing blood banking operation.

"We need more space for offices, the blood drawing and laboratories, not to mention semi-public auditorium meeting 'town areas,'" said Duensing. "We're running into each other as we process and ship out about 1,000 units of blood each month, to local hospitals," added Duensing.

Fortunately, he said, the O St. building will require very little remodeling.

Moving day, he said, when it comes won't be a matter of a day but hours. He explained:

"We can't close the bank down. It has to keep operating, moving day or not."

The American Lung Association of Nebraska will conduct this year's Christmas Seal campaign. The association hopes to raise a statewide total of $225,000.

The association, formerly the Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Assn., has as its goal the control of tuberculosis and other respiratory diseases, elimination of cigarette smoking, conservation of air and improvement of community health and welfare.

Nebraska will retain 90% of the proceeds from Christmas Seal sales, with 10% going to the national association. Last year's state funds were used to finance a Tuberculosis Seminar for health care personnel. The association also continued its support of the chest x-ray survey.

Nearly $5,000 of last year's campaign receipts was spent on public health education.

Literature on lung diseases, smoking and air conservation was distributed through schools, hospitals, industries and community organizations. An auto emissions testing lane at Sears Automotive Center during Cleaner Air Week was co-sponsored with the Lincoln-Lancaster County Air Pollution Control Agency.

Periodicals, pamphlets and films for the health professionals who care for the respiratory patient were distributed with Christmas Seal money. The Joy Hill McCaw Memorial Fund for Respiratory Therapy was established to provide medical education and training of respiratory therapy personnel in Lancaster County.

A service of special value has been the development of a tuberculosis reference laboratory at the University of Nebraska Medical Center. Here questionable specimens are sent to be given definitive investigation and the diagnosis is reported back to the original laboratory. Christmas Seal funds have helped develop this service.

The association has worked with other health agencies on the development of an educational program designed to teach the hazards of excessive cigarette smoking, particularly to young people. Efforts were made to coordinate the educational messages of the health agencies having an interest in this program.

LB600, which prohibits smoking in certain public places, was passed by the 83rd Legislature.

Omaha Farm Credit Board Reelects Two

Omaha (UPI) — Two members on the Farm Credit Board of Omaha have been reelected to three-year terms.

The new terms for Leo A. Allmendinger, a farmer and livestock feeder near Selby, S.D., and Fred J. Ludwig, a cooperative leader, farmer and livestock feeder from Laurens, Iowa, will begin Jan. 1.

Allmendinger was elected by members of the Federal Land Bank Assns and has served on the board since Jan. 1969.

Ludwig, board vice chairman, was elected by borrowers of the Omaha Bank for Cooperatives and has served on the board since Jan. 1972.

Burt, Cass May Get 5% Damage Loans

Washington (UPI) — The U.S. Agriculture Dept. said Saturday farmers in Burt and Cass counties of Nebraska may now receive 5% disaster assistance loans through the Farmers Home Administration.

The assistance designation resulted from livestock and crop losses during the summer drought and early September frost.

Loan applications may be filed within 60 days for disaster loans and within nine months for production losses.

Variety of Health Legislative Needs Upcoming

State Health's opportunity to become an early bird as far as discussion of 1975 session legislative requirements with the Public Health and Welfare Committee was gobbled up last week without hesitation.

The department's experience for 1974 legislation was a study in contrast since the time for discussion with the Kennedy committee came late in the session.

State Health Director Henry Smith said he suggested the bill discussion since the committee already was holding a public hearing on proposed medical and radiological technician licensure bills.

There is a variety of health legislative needs upcoming as Smith and various staff members illustrated in the presentation.

Some, such as the proposed amendments to the Radiation Control Act to include non-ionizing radiation like microwave ovens, airports and industrial uses, are holdovers from 1974 Health Dept. attempts.

Another holdover proposal would legislate a portion of the original LB513, relating to expanded categories of nursing and other types of care facilities. A portion of the bill was enacted at the last minute this session to provide some needed additional care categories.

However, the portion now proposed as another bill provides for a general $5 increase to original licenses and annual renewals of $35, plus $1 per bed, for hospitals, maternity homes, skilled nursing, intermediate care facility 1, intermediate care facility 2, custodial foster home and mental health center. Total bed fees could not exceed $100.

Original and annual renewal licenses would be $25 for these new categories: health clinic, boarding home for the aged, center for the developmentally disabled, alcoholic treatment center and drug treatment center.

The same bill covers rules and regulations, advisory groups as prescribed, inspections at least annually, expansion of the State Nursing Home Advisory Council and per diem expense payments.

Frieda Tice, in charge of the department's Vital Statistics Bureau, is asking for amendments that would fill a gap that makes it difficult to obtain the legal name for some children on their birth certificates.

"We want the proper legal name for the child, though he may be born out of wedlock, on the certificate because this is his official lifetime document," said Miss Tice. She said some doctors are not signing birth certificate cards when an unmarried mother is involved.

Rex Higley, the department's director of the Bureau of Examining Boards, asked that the state's basic science examination for physicians, osteopaths and chiropractors be repealed as it is in so many states today.

He pointed out it is generally believed by concerned groups that the examination taken at the end of the sophomore year of medical college is a needless duplication of material now in the national and FLEX (federated licensure examinations) exams administered nationally and by state boards of examiners in medicine and surgery.

Higley said it sometimes can be a hurdle to physicians, osteopaths and chiropractors wishing to be licensed in Nebraska to practice. This is especially true for men out of academic settings for some years, he said, but experienced in clinical practice.

In answer to questions from Sen Richard Maresh of Milligan, Higley said there are some who fail the annual exams but the number is small. He said Nebraska still is one of the top states in FLEX grade rates Louisiana was first this year, he adds.

According to Higley, 10 of the 106 Nebraska candidates taking the FLEX state exam in 1973 failed. Six of these were from Class A (Nebraska-Creighton) schools and four were foreign students here after taking special tests and filling house staff positions.

This June only 79 took the FLEX test and more of the remaining graduates the national examination. Of the 79, four foreign students and 5 Class A graduates failed.

An opportunity to retake the national or FLEX test is always provided. This year, in December, when a group of 20 graduates on house staffs also want to become fully licensed.

Graduates failing can continue to practice under a temporary education permit; if they stay in Nebraska, and if they are in a graduate medical program.

Burglars Kill Parrot Witness

Jackson, Miss. (AP) — Three boys burglarized a Jackson house and then killed the owner's parrot because they said they were afraid the talking bird would tell on them, police reported.

The two 15-year-olds and a 12-year-old said one of them called another's name during the burglary and they were afraid the bird would repeat it.

Police said the boys' arrests this week cleared up 12 burglaries in which televisions, jewelry, guns and stereo tapes were stolen. The boys were not identified.

GOP Chairman Disputes Demo Charge of Trouble

By Edward Howard, AP
Republican State Chairman Bill Barrett says he isn't trying to start an argument, but he disagrees with Republican National Committeeman Dick Herman about the shape of GOP candidates in the coming general election.

Herman was quoted in news reports as saying the GOP was in "serious" trouble in two congressional races. The reports quoted Herman as saying the state of Mrs. Haven Smith in the 3rd District, and Rep. John Y. McCollister in the 2nd District were "questionable."

"I don't want to make an argument of it, but I would like to say that I am very optimistic about Republican chances regarding the whole statewide ticket," Barrett said. "I especially think our three congressional races look very good and I expect a Republican victory in each of our three congressional districts."

"I think our statewide ticket is very strong," Barrett said. He added that "based on activities and enthusiasm that I've encountered after stumping the state for several weeks, I think the gubernatorial race is perhaps closer than some people think."

"I am very confident that the other four statehouse offices will remain Republican," Barrett concluded.

Barrett commented in a telephone interview from York, where the GOP state executive committee was meeting.

Herman was unavailable for comment. A member of his family said he was in Colorado.

"I didn't read the story (that quoted Herman) myself," Barrett said. "I heard it on the radio and I guess it was in the newspapers."

Pierson Backs Fluoridation

"I can't figure it out either, though it is real easy to scare older citizens."

The speaker isn't a spring chicken himself. He is Dr. F. Pierson, 78, Lincoln, who happens to be Nebraska's only past president of the American Dental Assn.

Dr. Pierson's point of concern about all his peers in Nebraska's smaller communities is the Nebraska Dental Assn. goal to see that all Huskers of all ages have the benefits of fluoridated water for better dental health.

But a bill passed by the 1973 Legislature requiring all municipal water supplies to be fluoridated by next Jan. 1 is now being attacked at the polls.

The legislation provides that communities may elect not to participate if citizens disapprove the concept through a referendum.

It is indicated that as many as 200 Nebraska communities will vote on the withdrawal privilege during Tuesday's elections. There were 110 communities rejecting fluoridation and only five approving at last May's primary polling.

Dr. Pierson's failing vision, affected by years of controlled diabetes, forced his retirement this year but he is still interested in dental health.

He says he agrees with most health food advocates that if people "lived and ate right," such protective measures as fluoridation might not be necessary, but the average person and family do not live and eat the way they should.

Beermann Denies Negligence

Omaha (AP) — Secretary of State Allen Beermann, for the second time, has denied charges of negligence in handling money processed through the corporation division of his office.

Beermann's Democratic opponent, Mrs. Catherine Dahlquist, has charged that some money sent to the division by corporations is being held longer than the 10-day period state law permits.

Beermann said Saturday that Mrs. Dahlquist doesn't understand that money can't be accepted from corporations and the necessary documents can't be filed if there are any errors in the documents.

And, Beermann said, there are errors of some kind in about 25% of the filings and one occasion in about 40% of the filings.

Once corrected documents are received, they are filed immediately, Beermann said. The 10-day period doesn't start until a correct document is received, he added.

voters by reissuing a challenge for a face to face confrontation on local television.

Incumbent Rep. Charles Thone said Saturday that Dyas position papers had falsely indicated that Thone had voted against a 5.6% cost of living increase for people on Social Security.

Dyas acknowledged Saturday that Thone did eventually vote to approve a 5.6% increase, but to become effective in July, instead of April as the original measure stipulated.

"The point of the thing is the cost of living didn't go through when it would have, and people had to struggle by that many more months without the increase," Dyas said Saturday.

"I continue my invitation to Mr. Thone to appear at 8 p.m. Monday on KOLN-TV at my expense. I know, as will anyone else who researches the facts, that his complaints are unfounded," he said.

Dyas renewed his charge that Thone uses public relations in his voting habits, adding, "now when he sees the results... sees his support in the polls decline as the facts come out — he has issued a reckless flock of politically motivated statements."

Exon Charges Sun Ray Issue Partisan

The timing of his gubernatorial opponent's announcement of an investigation into a state contract with the Sun Ray Lighting Co. of Omaha was "pure, unadulterated, partisan politics," Gov. J. J. Exon said Saturday.

State Sen. Richard Marvel, Republican candidate for governor, triggered a legislative investigation Saturday — three days before the election — into a contract between State Engineer Thomas Doyle and Sun Ray for maintenance service in the State Roads Dept. building.

The Democratic incumbent added he "will be as open and complete with any information regarding anything the Legislature wishes to investigate."

Exon called the investigation an example of the dirty tricks he predicted would be used.

"I've never seen this type of campaigning by Democrats or Republicans," Exon said, "...including Sen. Marvel calling me, the governor, a dirty liar."

The Republican state hierarchy must take responsibility for Marvel's campaign conduct, according to Exon.

Exon said he had no knowledge of the contract until recently and has not received a report on the matter from his staff.

"This state has always negotiated these types of things," Exon said. "You select the firm that will do the best job."

The governor cited the hiring of Einar Viren as legal counsel by a subcommittee of the Marvel-chaired Appropriations Committee investigating the JADO labor lease as an example of the practice.

"When Sen. Marvel looked into the JADO lease, he used taxpayer money to hire Einar Viren, paid him $600... they didn't ask for bids," he said.

Distributing state contracts without taking bids isn't a revolutionary practice, according to Exon.

"New editions in Portuguese and Serbo-Croat out this week plus another in Finland put us just past Spock," said Norris McWhirter, editor of the records book.

He said the book of superlatives now has sold 23,916,000 copies, passing the old record set by Dr. Benjamin Spock's "Baby and Child Care."

Marvel Orders Probe Of Sun Ray Contract

By Associated Press
For the second time in a month State Sen. Richard Marvel has used his legislative power to order an investigation of government contracts.

Marvel, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, said in a press release Saturday he has ordered a budget committee investigation into a state contract with Sun Ray Lighting Co. of Omaha.

He had previously ordered an investigation of the state lease with the JADO Investment Co. of Omaha for a building occupied by the State Labor Dept.

Marvel said he ordered an investigation of the contract between State Engineer Thomas Doyle and "his long-time friend, Robert W. Fitzpatrick, president of Sun Ray Lighting Co. of Omaha" after receiving "anonymous telephone calls and two envelopes" on the contract.

He said Doyle, Fitzpatrick and Gov. J. J. Exon have made statements to the press saying the contract was secretly negotiated. Also, said Marvel, Doyle and Fitzpatrick have made statements saying terms of the contract require the firm to make a 120-mile round trip to replace a single burned-out light bulb.

Marvel said Doyle had been quoted as saying he picked Sun Ray for the contract without seeking other proposals because he knew of no other firms engaged in the same or similar business in the Lincoln area and "none were listed at that time." Marvel said at least a dozen electrical and janitorial firms that provide the same type of maintenance services are listed in the Lincoln telephone directory.

227 Lose Nebraska Drivers Licenses in October

The State Motor Vehicles Dept. reported 227 persons lost their Nebraska drivers licenses in 12-point revocations during October. That is an unusually high monthly total.

In September 155 licenses were revoked and 150 Nebraskans lost their right to drive in October, 1973.

Lancaster County residents offering revocations numbered 38 while 46 Douglas Countians lost their licenses in October.

Balloon Project Called Off

White Sands, N.M. (UPI) — Approaching thunderstorms Saturday forced an early termination of the scheduled 36-hour flight of the Project Da Vinci manned research balloon, an Atomic Energy Commission spokesman said.

The balloon landed safely in the plains of northeastern New Mexico 12 hours after its 8:45 p.m. launching Friday at Las Cruces in the south-central part of the state.

Announcement of the safe landing was made by AEC spokesman Jim Griffin, who had earlier reported: "We've been nip and tuck with the weather" since the beginning of the flight. The balloon landed about four miles east of Wagon Mound, N.M., with all four crew members debarking safely.

An instrumented observation plane aided the balloonists in selecting a landing site, he said.

The 70-foot balloon with a two-tiered gondola attached was finally launched at 8:45 p.m. Friday after a series of delays since Oct. 12 because of unfavorable weather. Along with the three men and one woman in the crew, it carried a ton of scientific equipment.

Millionaire Doris Day Puts On Her $8.88 Jeans, Talks

Doris Day

By Patricia Shelton
(c) Chicago Daily News

Something is bugging Doris Day — work.

"I'm really starting to get busy, and it's bugging me. I don't have to be working on a sound stage to enjoy my life, she said.

She was sitting sideways in a big easy chair in the den of her Beverly Hills home, her jean-clad legs hanging over one arm. The jeans were from Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s catalog, price $8.88.

A few weeks back she had been awarded a $23 million judgment in Los Angeles Superior Court against Jerome Rosenthal, business associate of her late husband, Marty Melcher. "The judgment was staggering, but what I'll actually realize I don't know," she said.

Oddly enough, the judgment was handed down at a time when she suddenly found herself up to her ears in work commitments after a year of relative freedom after she finished her television series.

'So Little Time'

"I like to work. I enjoy it. But I don't want work to take over my life ever again." And that, she said, has nothing to do with the court judgment. "I've worked so hard and so long, with Pittsburgh (UPI) — If you've got an empty Playmate Malt liquor can lying around, please give Bruce Nist a call.

And if there's a 1955 vintage Sir-Lady Frothingslosh beer can in your basement, Jim Cyphers might be willing to give you 30 or 40 empties for it.

The Playmate can once made by the now defunct Sunshine Brewing Co. of Reading, Pa., is just what Nist needs to top off his collection of 1,950 beer cans. The light blue container bearing a woman's lips and legs is a classic.

And Iron City Brewing Co.'s 1955 Frothingslosh — picturing former Pittsburgh radio personality Rege Cordic in zany male and female getups — would complement Cypher's rare Lederbrau one half gallon can, his 1955 8 oz. "Tech" and his 1950 "Tube City" conetop.

Nist, 23, a computer operator, and Cyphers, 24, a fast-food restaurant manager, are respectively secretary and president of the Old Frothingslosh Chapter of the Beer Can Collectors of America.

Drive Long Distances

The BCCA, a 3,000 member group, is dedicated to preserving and collecting obsolete, unusual, historical, attractive — in fact any and all kinds of — beer cans.

The members spend a lot of time and energy trading through the mails, picking up cans on vacations and attending BCCA trading sessions. Recently people from as far as South Carolina, Illinois and Massachusetts drove to Pittsburgh for a swap session. Both Cyphers and Nist have traveled as far as Detroit in pursuit of their hobby.

Unlike stamp or coin collectors, BCCA members are not interested in making money. Organization bylaws forbid members from buying or selling empties, although they do buy full cans.

"The lack of money makes it a lot more relaxed and friendly," said Bill Whitworth, who drove from Wayne, Mich., to attend the Pittsburgh trade-in.

"My main hobby is collecting license plates — I've got about 15,000 of them — but I'm getting into beer cans more these days. With license plates everyone is in it for the dollar."

Whitworth kind of fell into his hobby, salvaging several hundred cans his uncle was throwing out.

"You see, my aunt was filing for divorce at the time and she was trying to prove he was crazy, so he thought it would look better for him if he got rid of the cans," he said.

It's Different Hobby

Nist said he started his hobby because he wanted to do something different from people on his street.

"I used to collect stamps and coins, but there's too many people into that. So I got this idea," he said.

"I just noticed all the different kinds you could buy and I started getting one of each. I was going to put them on our fireplace, but there got to be so many I had to start building shelves to put them on."

Cyphers, who has 2,900 different styles among the 7,000 cans stacked, shelved and boxed in an extra bedroom of his home, says the hobby does have one drawback: "The most collectable cans are the ones with the worst beer."

Many collectors plan family vacations around areas laden with defunct breweries, a mother lode of discontinued or "obsolete" cans.

"We spend our weekends dumping," said Kathy Daniel, whose husband, Paul, 29, is president of the Detroit Chapter, BCAA.

"That means we hit all the best garbage dumps to see if there's any good cans lying around. We even stack the back seat of the car with cans on every trip in case we run into a good trade."

The collectors divide the cans into two general categories of current and obsolete for trading purposes. The organization will toss out any collector found violating the rule that forbids buying cans.

"If we bought and sold the cans instead of trading, it would take the fun out of it," said Daniel, a General Motors employee.

Collectors' Goals

The goal of most collectors is to acquire as many different brands and types of cans as possible. Breweries that frequently change the design of cans are rated high by the collectors, such as the Pittsburgh brewery that produces Iron City beer.

"Iron City beer cans have schedules of Pittsburgh's sports teams printed on the back of the can," Daniel said, "and they change them around all the time."

Daniel has a collection of 1,700 different brands that he wouldn't part with "for $10,000."

The cans are neatly stacked in the basement of his home, with rare "conetops" forming the heart and the rest fanning out in alphabetical order across one wall. Conetops are a type of can discontinued in the 1950s. They formed a spout at the top and could be capped like a bottle.

Playmate and Soul cans are searched for, haggled over and subjects of many a daydream.

Playmate was produced by a Pennsylvania brewery until it got slapped with a lawsuit from Playboy magazine's Hugh Hefner and went out of business.

Soul beer originated from the Soul Brewery Co. of Los Angeles, a firm that grew out of the Watts riots and folded within a matter of weeks.

"There's a guy in St. Louis that's trying to sell a can for $150," Daniel said, "but I wouldn't touch it because of the rules."

Needs Bigger House

The collectors often exhibit almost fanatical concern about their collections, one collector, who already uses a spare bedroom to store his cans, said he'd been thinking about asking his son to sleep in the living room in order to have more space for his collection.

"I just don't think my wife would go along with the idea," he said. "But maybe I could build an addition to the house."

Football, Prison Combination Works in 'The Longest Yard'

By Holly Spence

The Longest Yard, now showing at the Cooper/Lincoln, is tailor-made for our crop of Cornhusker Football zealots — or at least its final 45 minutes are.

This rough and tumble bit of two hours culminates with one of the wildest gridiron clashes imaginable. Robert Aldrich's direction involves a bit of audience psychology, playing the audience for maximum reaction. And it works.

The drama-comedy revolves around the formation of a convict football team that eventually plays a highly successful semiprofessional team of prison guards.

On the whole, the film tromps along with slow to fair speed before its lickity-split pace of the actual game. Because of the last 45 minutes of the film, one is left with the impression the whole endeavor is nearly a blockbuster film.

The cons are organized by Burt Reynolds, who portrays a former pro quarterback in the clink for stealing a car. Occasionally Reynolds slips into the sly, arrogant talk show host role, but not enough to annoy. It is his strongest screen moment to date.

The rub — the ragtag squad is to suffer defeat. If the cons lose, the guards will rub it in. If the cons win, the hateful warden (Eddie Albert) will have his vengeance. The entire endeavor is a stinging bit of blackmail.

There are times when some will insist the violent treatment of the cons by guards does not make an amusing cinematic cup of tea. But this violence, strangely enough, has the ability to take a backseat to what we usually think of as screen violence.

The comedy comes in the field contest and scrimmages, the inmates joining in the hope of clobbering the hated guard squad.

Some will think the idea overdone and really not a very funny joke. But the commercial clash of muscle has been cast to perfection. The Mean Machine (con squad), as precarious as some of their backgrounds are, has the audience's support. You can't help but root for the bad guys.

With all of this talent and the unique story, it is surprising that editing chores were not more precisely carried out. Even the most devoted of football maniacs will probably find their attention lagging until the actual football game clash.

The idea of combining sports adventure with prison drama is unusual enough to make it a winner. And it is certainly one of those instances when brute force becomes nearly acceptable.

The film is basically oriented to the male audience (I could tell from the reaction to film-going cohorts — the Oklahoma State University football team) with its nearly all-male cast, and the language is fairly rough, too. Bernadette Peters makes a super choice as the horny secretary who has a brief but amusing turn with Reynolds.

The Longest Yard is a slick package of entertainment. R.

By Frances Taylor

(c) Newhouse News Service
New York — John Cassavetes's film, A Woman Under the Influence, was conceived and produced because his wife, Gena Rowlands, asked him to "think of a part" for her.

Serious about her profession, she wanted a part that illuminated some facet of life, of the kind of life most of us live. Cassavetes, who has made seven extraordinary films beginning with an underground movie 12 years ago, is remembered as the husband in Rosemary's Baby. The films he has written and directed include Husbands and Minnie and Moscovitz.

"I did this film (A woman Under the Influence) to show the plight of a woman whose devotion to her husband is such that she's actually married to his family, his friends, his house," Cassavetes says. "Her whole life is dictated by her husband's choices."

A Woman Under the Influence is an absorbing and provocative film. Its exploration of a marriage will be familiar to many husbands and wives. Unlike Scenes from a Marriage, the fine Bergman film about upper middle-class marriage, this movie is on a level common to millions of movie-goers. The husband is a construction worker. The house is sturdy and old-fashioned.

The wife has no real place of her own. Even her love for her children is circumscribed by what her husband considers acceptable behavior. The wife sinks into confusion because her obsessive love of her husband makes her a shadow of the man. She is losing touch with herself, or perhaps never had been aware of her own independent personality.

Peter Falk, TV's Columbo, plays the husband.

"I wanted so much not to have her unrelated to other women," Gene Rowlands says of her character, Mabel. "This woman goes crazy for a while but what's important is her frustration and her enormous desire to make her marriage work, to meet her responsibility to her kids."

In spite of her complete devotion to her husband, Mabel can't help feeling she also should function as a person in her own right.

Both sets of parents, his and hers, contribute love, criticism, understanding and confusion.

This is one of the movie's achievements, describing the influence of families on marriages.

Performances by Rowlands, Falk, Katherine Cassavetes (John's real mother) and Lady

John Cassavetes

Gena Rowlands

Rowlands (Yes, her mother) are on the highest level. Having been an actor in film and TV for many years before his first directing job, Cassavetes always evokes rich, living acting from his cast.

"I hope and I think this film makes clear our views and our experiences," he says. "A film has to please us in this way, it has to reach people with what we think and feel."

Cassavetes spends many months editing a film. For A Woman Under the Influence, an editing problem was retention of the air of family life. "We wanted to keep the feeling of being in an actual home," he says. "We are making a study of emotions with a delicate treatment and yet in the reality of a home like millions of homes."

If you saw Faces or Husbands you already know that a film by Cassavetes is wedded to reality, to people and places and language experienced by most people.

In A Woman Under the Influence, every character is one you could meet almost anywhere. Yet each character becomes unforgettable because when the movie ends you've come to know him or her.

BYU Folk Dancers

Do International Show

The Brigham Young University International Folk Dancers will appear at Kimball Recital Hall at 8 p.m. Saturday. This public appearance is sponsored by the University of Nebraska Union contemporary arts committee.

The program will give audiences a preview of European festivals and the cultures of several foreign lands.

These student performers from the Mormon-supported university at Provo, Utah, toured Spain, Greece, Israel and France during their ninth tour of Europe last summer. They have folk dances from a dozen different countries in their repertoire, under the direction of Mary Bee Jensen.

Their colorful and musical program takes in the dance cultures of Latin America, United States, Poland, Austria, Yugoslavia, Israel, Britain, Hungary and the Ukraine — everything from the village square of Tuzia, Yugoslavia, to a colorful fiesta in Mexico City.

Peru Planning Tourist Mecca

Cuzco, Peru (UPI) — Eight new hotels are in the planning stage in and around this city, capital of the Inca Indians and the early Spanish Conquistadores and now the leading tourist mecca in Peru.

Officials of the Ministry of Tourism say the number of first-class hotel beds in the museum city, now 827, will increase to more than 4,000.

Groups of investors plan to restore and reconstruct as hotels two colonial landmarks: the 400-year-old cloister of San Francisco Church and the House of the Four Bells. The mansion is believed to have been the house of one of the leaders of the small band of Spanish knights who overthrew the vast Inca empire.

Lightfoot Here

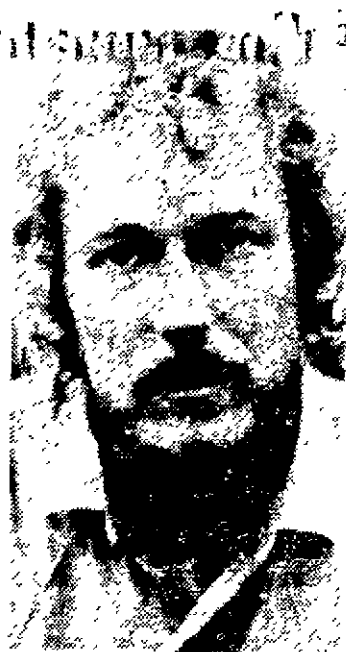

For Auditorium Concert Friday

One of the best known folksingers — Gordon Lightfoot — will be at Pershing Auditorium Friday at 8 p.m. for a concert.

In addition to being a top-rated singer, Lightfoot is a prolific tunesmith, having written about 400 songs in a career spanning 10 years.

A native Canadian, he migrated to Los Angeles and began taking an interest in the early 1960's folksingers. Lightfoot's work took him to the bars and coffee houses.

In 1965 he signed with United Artists and did five albums and since joining Reprise in 1969 he has produced five more albums, one of which contained his hit single entitled If you Could Read My Mind. His tunes have been widely recorded by music

Perlman's Recital Thursday

Violinist Itzhak Perlman will be heard in public recital at 8 p.m. Thursday at Kimball Hall as part of the University of Nebraska Performing Arts Series.

In the 10 years since his Carnegie Hall debut, Perlman has established himself as one of the world's greatest violinists.

Born in Tel Aviv in 1945, the son of Polish emigrants, he was stricken with polio when four.

His first studies were at the Tel Aviv Academy of Music.

In 1958, the late Ed Sullivan, went to Israel to put together a TV show to bring to America and Perlman was part of that group. After two TV appearances the young violinist decided to remain in the U.S. with scholarships from the America-Israel Cultural Foundation and the Juilliard School. Sol Hurok became his manager. By the 1965 season, Perlman was touring coast to coast. Now he tours the world.

Family Comes With J. Cash

An entourage of country music performers, with headman Johnny Cash leading the way, will appear at 8 p.m. Thursday in Pershing Auditorium.

Along with Cash's wife, June Carter, of the famed country Carters, will come the Cash daughters (Rosey Nix and Rosanne Cash) by another marriage.

Carl Perkins, the Tennessee Three and Gordon Terry are also Rosey Nix, Rosanne Cash scheduled to join the country music fun.

Three Operas At Omaha This Season

Omaha — Jonathan Dudley, general director of the Omaha Opera Co., announces three productions for the 1974-75 season with Beverly Sills as principal headliner.

The company's 17th season will open with Puccini's La Boheme Nov. 22 and 23 at 8 p.m. All performances of La Boheme will be at the Omaha Auditorium Music Hall. Dudley will make his Omaha debut as conductor of La Boheme, which will be sung in English.

Heading a cast of 40 are Metropolitan Opera tenor Raymond Gibbs and soprano Patricia Craig of the New York City Opera. Newly designed costumes and sets will come from the Cincinnati Summer Opera, which premiered the production in July with Dudley as conductor.

Beverly Sills will make her Omaha debut Feb. 6 and 8 in Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor, sung in Italian. This will be the opera company's first offering in the former Orpheum Theater, now being remodeled.

Described as "America's queen of opera," Miss Sills is to make her debut at New York's Metropolitan Opera about a month after her Omaha date.

The season's finale will be a comedy, La Perichole, by Offenbach, April 24 and 26 at the Orpheum. The tuneful light opera, which contains spoken lines, replaces the originally scheduled Boris Godunov, Dudley said.

Boris Godunov, a 4½ hour Russian opera, has been withdrawn by its sponsor, the Cincinnati based Corbett Foundation, Dudley said.

Brass Quintet To Play

A significant new work in an avant-garde style will be featured during a free public recital of the Nebraska Brass Quintet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Kimball Hall.

The quintet is composed of faculty and students at the University of Nebraska in the School of Music: Prof. Dennis Schneider and graduate student Stephen Erickson, trumpets; Prof. Vernon Forbes, tenor trombone; student William Buntain, bass trombone, and Prof. David Kappy, horn.

Featured number on the program will be Triptych for Brass Quintet written in 1970 by Charles Whittenberg. This contemporary piece uses the serial technique and exploits all the range and dynamic level of each instrument. The second movement, in which a pointillism technique is employed, is dedicated to the memory of Anton Webern, a German composer who was a master of this practice.

The program will also include two renaissance pieces, Centone No. 8 by Isaac Posch, and Ecco O Mia Dolce Pena by Ponponia Nenna.

Two contemporary numbers, Fife Miniatures written in 1952 by Robert Starer, and Suite No. 1, composed in 1967 by William Schmidt complete the program.

NU Chamber Concert Now Set for Friday

A chamber music concert by students of the University of Nebraska School of Music has been rescheduled from later in the month to Friday.

The concert at 8 p.m. in Kimball Hall is free to the public.

The program originally was scheduled for Nov. 18, but has been changed because of the University Orchestra's Nov. 16 concert at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington.

The student chamber music concert is coordinated by Prof. Arnold Schatz.

Muddy Waters

Muddy Waters Has Campus Date Nov. 10

Legendary blues artist Muddy Waters and his Blues Band will present a public concert at 7:30 p.m. next Sunday in the University of Nebraska Union ballroom. The program is sponsored by the Nebraska Union concerts committee.

Born in 1915, Waters began playing harmonica and later guitar with the great delta bluesmen of the South. In the early 40's he moved to Chicago where he soon became an influential and powerful blues singer and performer.

In 1954 Waters' hit song Rollin' Stone was recorded. His influence on the Chicago blues sound and today's rock music is only now being fully recognized.

Appearing with Muddy Waters will be the younger blues sound of the Son Seals Blues Band.

Ceiling and backdrop of Minneapolis' new downtown concert hall have sound-diffusing angled cubes created by Dr. Cyril Harris, acoustician for Washington's Kennedy Center and New York City's Metropolitan Opera House.

Good Acoustics Make Up For Hall's Exterior

By Byron Belt

(c) Newhouse News Service

Minneapolis — A controversial new home has just been opened for Stanislaw Skrowaczewski's superb Minnesota orchestra. Controversy stems from the exterior and public areas of Orchestra Hall, but the plaguing problem of auditorium acoustics has been resolved splendidly.

The building, designed by Hardy Holzman Pfeiffer Associates of New York and architects Hammel Green and Abrahamson of St. Paul, is divided into a handsome, curving sweep of dark brick to encase the auditorium itself, and an airy glass and steel neo-Bauhaus construction of exposed piping and beams that unhappily dominates the front of the exterior and the interior lobby areas.

The oceanliner atmosphere does have the advantage of informality, and the public moves from the gaudy modernity of the foyers into the hall through somber, soundproofed hallways carpeted on all four sides.

It is doubtful that the general design will wear too well visually, but the building's raison d'être — the auditorium itself — is an aural beauty. Thanks to the specifications of maestro Skrowaczewski and the acoustical genius of Columbia University's Dr. Cyril M. Harris, the sound is both bright and warm, with orchestral timbres and balances given full value.

The October dedication stressed two things most dramatically. One is the extremely high caliber the Minnesota orchestra has achieved under Skrowaczewski during the past 14 years, and the other is the extraordinary vitality of all the arts in the Twin cities environs.

The conductor, architects and orchestral officials stress that the sole aim of the new auditorium is to provide "an optimum acoustical environment" for the great orchestra, after years of being sonically and atmospherically lost in monster Northrop Auditorium on the University of Minnesota campus.

Nureyev, 36, Is Still Hit

By Frederick M. Winship
New York (UPI) — Rudolf Nureyev, at 36, is a senior citizen of the ballet world but he may be counting on modern dance — a very different discipline — to extend his career.

The Russian-born superstar, made his American stage debut with the Paul Taylor Dance Company during its annual run at the Alvin Theater. He made his first appearance with the company on television two years earlier and has since performed with it briefly in Mexico City and London.

As expected, the debut was a triumph and the stage was pelted with roses when Nureyev made his curtain calls. The dancer was seemingly at home in the barefoot modern idiom, his animal liveness suited to the pace and athleticism of Taylor's (Aureole) even if his movements seemed more lyric than the usual body language of the modern dancer.

Nureyev made known his desire to wet his feet in modern dance some years ago, and he is grateful to Taylor for giving him the chance. He donated his services to the 19-year-old company for two benefit performances which helped cut its inevitable deficit. Naturally, the performances were sold out at $15 tops a ticket.

"It's a very different style from what I am used to, but I live Taylor's way of moving and dancing," Nureyev commented after the performance — an indication that he wants to continue his association with the company.

Twenty years is a long career for a male ballet dancer (women seem to have more staying power, witness Dame Margot Fonteyn who still is dancing at 55). Nureyev has been dancing for 17 years since his debut with the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad, from which he defected to the West in Paris in 1961.

He is still the greatest male dancer in ballet but there has been some diminution of his prowess, most noticeably in the elevation of his leaps. But he is thinner and trimmer now than he has been in years and a new shorter haircut has given his Tartar good looks the appearance of a youth 20 years his junior.

Nureyev is not attached to any one ballet company but appears with several as a guest artist.

Concordians Do 'Staircase'

so little time to just do what I please."

Miss Day, who hasn't done much singing except on her bicycle for more than two years, is polishing up her do-re-mis for a CBS television special and is starting to record again.

Since John Denver is scheduled to be on her TV special, she said she presumes she'll be on his special later — which adds up to two.

Her recording dates are with her son, Terry, 34, who will play piano and produce two singles for her. "We'll start with a couple of singles, probably on Equinox, our own little record company. I don't want to get involved doing a whole album, at least not now."

Beauty Consultant

Besides that, she's also up to her ears in boxloads of cosmetics from Helene Curtis' Studio Girl division. Six months ago she signed on as a beauty consultant, which in itself is turning into a full-time job.

"I try all the products. If my name is connected, you'd better believe I do!"

And then there's her pet (literally) project — Actors and Others for Animals, which raises funds to save stray animals and place them in homes. "Could you print the box number? It's Post Office Box 445, Beverly Hills 90210."

Her own home looks like the neighborhood kennel. "All strays," she said proudly about her canine corps.

Miss Day, who started singing with a band at 16 in 1940 and got her first movie role in 1948 in Romance on the High Seas when Betty Hutton became pregnant, hasn't gained a pound or acquired more than a hint of a line or two in her tanned, freckled face in all the years since.

Sees Shop Keepers

"Diet? Never!" she exclaimed. But she swims in her back-yard pool twice a day and goes bicycling almost every morning. "I'm usually out about an hour, but not riding all the time. I stop, and see all the little shopkeepers, and do my little chores. Sometimes I stop and have some melon if I haven't eaten, and then I take the long way home."

If she never worked another day, she added, she could stay plenty busy and happy doing all sorts of things she had little time for in earlier years.

A widow since Melcher, her husband and agent, died in 1968, she said: "I don't date a great deal. I find that unless it's someone who's really interesting and has something intelligent to talk about, I'd rather stay home. I have to have a good reason to go out."

What Image?

As for the clean-cut American girl-now-woman image associated with her over the years, she quipped: "What image? Everybody sees something different."

Home is a sprawling, but unpretentious, house near the Beverly Hills Hotel that doesn't look sprawling from the front iron gates. "You don't know what we went through to get the police to let me put up gates, which weren't allowed on this street. When I was doing the television series, people used to follow me home and park in my driveway, and it finally got so bad the police let me have the gates," she explained.

Inside, it's eclectic, charming and homey in the sense that her dogs, and those of her friends when they visit, are not only allowed inside, they're allowed to sit in chairs.

Although she says she doesn't know what she will actually realize ultimately from the big court judgment, she declared: "My life-style has not changed one fraction. I've always lived very simply. I live on the block. I have nice neighbors. I don't need to impress anybody."

$150 Pants

Miss Day bicycles in $8.88 pants because she thinks they're "the best" for bicycling. But she might turn around and put on a $150 pair of pants — or a $30 sale dress — to go out to dinner. Most of her dresses are clinging jerseys, usually covered rather than bare for the plain reason that she thinks suggestion is a lot sexier than exposure. As for white collars and cuffs, they're back somewhere in her old movies.

She stays up on new music the same way the kids do — listening to the radio on her bicycle or the one she says is usually "blaring" in her home all day long.

And she buys records, most often those by male singers. One of her favorites is Charlie Rich. "He's so laid back," she said, using the current slang.

Oatmeal No. 1 Hot Cereal

Battle Creek, Mich. (AP) — More than 8 million Americans a year sit down to eat a bowl of hot oatmeal on an average morning — half again as many as eat any other hot or cold cereal — and this number is growing by leaps and bounds. According to an industry spokesman, the burgeoning consumption of the wholesome cereal is due largely to "its economy compared with other hot breakfast foods and the introduction of convenient, new instant oatmeal varieties and flavors."

The spokesman also reports that the on-coming cold weather months will increase the cereal's popularity even further. "People buy about twice as much oatmeal in January as they do in July," he said.

Beadell Is a Quiet Man Full of Music

By Holly Spence

Robert Beadell could paper his walls with commissionings and awards for his compositions. He doesn't.

His study is highlighted by a warm painting in red tones which he commissioned from a friend.

Beadell is a rather quiet unpretentious man whose head is filled with beautiful musical sounds.

Many of his pieces are related moodwise and in title to dance "because I grew up in a dance-oriented social and musical atmosphere," he reminisced as he recalled a love for the big band times.

His Chicago childhood centered on big band dances and movies which were filled with the dancing of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

Although sporadic commissionings do not provide "a kind of income a composer could sustain himself on," Beadell looks upon it as a necessary creative endeavor.

But being a full-time University of Nebraska professor makes the deadline pressure of commissions even tighter.

"And it is difficult to keep the priority level," said Beadell.

But since the mid to late 1960s, Beadell has had a many successes with his compositions. One of the most exciting things about compositions is hearing them in premiere performances.

Prof. Robert Beadell

Beadell said the trouble is in getting the pieces played a second time.

Commissionings are generally one-time occasions. And the high cost of production often makes the "second comings" bleak. That is probably the greatest problem holding up the restaging of the opera Napoleon which he scored.

"I think that all the things (his compositions) since Napoleon are worthy of repeating," said Beadell.

But even though dance has had much influence on the composer's works — especially his jazz compositions — history plays a great part in a number of his pieces.

"I am not a history freak and I am not a scholar, but history is fascinating to me," he said.

And even though a native of Illinois, he has a special love affair with Nebraska and its authors Willa Cather and Mari Sandoz.

The inspiration for a commissioning by the American Chorale-Directors Assn. national conclave last year came from the texts of antiwar poetry of Stephen Crane, James Russell Lowell and Herman Melville.

This piece for chorus and brass ensemble now is being published for college and high school groups.

"I have a thing — a good thing — about American writers," he said.

His love for American literary figures is as strong as his love for music steeped in the American culture. Himself a big band instrumentalist, Beadell developed a black jazz course which dips back into musical history.

He has been approached by Dom Spera of Wisconsin State University's jazz program to do a piece for jazz band and symphony.

He also fantasizes about an American Requiem for chorus and instruments.

"I would like to take a more universal concept (of death), a poetic look at death," he said.

Beadell would like to do a work for soprano and small orchestra on a Mary Magdalene "my favorite Biblical character." A commissioning entitled "Images in the Wind" was also written for the Lincoln Public Schools Year of the Arts festival finale, and he now is working on a piece for the University of Nebraska Symphony called Elegy for Duke Ellington.

And he approaches his young creative composing charges with zeal equal to his composing duties.

One of his burning academic desires now is to revise the music theory curriculum. Theory — "the grammar of music" — is made up of performance, composition and listening.

"The music of the 18th and 19th centuries will no longer dominate, but will be at the core," he commented of his revision plans for theory curriculum. The curriculum will give recognition to the contemporary as well as traditional classical music.

Ex-Lincolniters, Dennis and Doyle, Play Broadway

It may be only 1,250 miles to Broadway from Lincoln. It also may take only a few hours to get there by air.

Frequently though, the trip takes many years — with stopovers in between — when a thesbian heads for the bright lights of the famous street.

Two former Lincolniters now are treading the boards in different plays in New York. It is not a first Broadway appearance for either. But it is perhaps the first time they have appeared in Broadway productions at the same time.

Sandy Dennis plays Eva in Absurd Person Singular showing at the Music Box, and Mary Doyle is playing Nurse in Equus showing at the Plymouth Theater.

In the Oct. 9 issue of the New York Times, Clive Barnes says:

"We have a new fun house in town. It is called Absurd Person Singular, has been constructed by Alan Ayckbourn and unveiled at the Music Box last night..."

"The undersexed sextet is completed by the one swinger, a failing architect, Geoffrey, whose affairs stand up better than his buildings, and his wife, Eva, a catatonic kitten who has plenty to be catatonic about."

"This is brilliantly polished comedy... The cast is uniformly excellent, and can only be saluted in order of appearance... The final couple is equally up to this mixed doubles, with Sandy Dennis fiercely implacable as the architect's wife..."

The Oct. 21 issue of Time magazine also devotes space to the play and has this to say about Sandy's part:

"... Eva sleepwalks her way fixedly toward suicide. She tries to jump out a window, impale herself on a knife, throttle herself with a rope, electrocute herself and take poison. (Half dead with fatigue, she ends the act conducting the others, with a waveringly insistent hammer for a baton, in a chorus of The Twelve Days of Christmas..."

Pictured with the report is the Lincoln actress with her head in the oven and Carole Shelley, who plays Jane in the production, hovering over her.

Miss Dennis is a Lincoln High School graduate, who attended Nebraska Wesleyan for a time before making her way to a career in acting. She did some roles in the Lincoln Community Playhouse before she left.

Her last performance in Lincoln and Nebraska was as narrator in the Willa Cather Memorial Concert. Her father, Jack H. Dennis, lives in Lincoln.

Equus opened Oct. 24. Again Barnes reviewed the play in the Oct. 25 issue of the Times.

"A bare stage, a few actors, a standing ovation and quite clearly Broadway had gotten a new popular success in Peter Shaffer's play Equus, and a new star in the shock-headed, 21-year-old Peter Firth..."

"The rest (members of the cast) are the background, yes, even the psychiatrist who by any count has the most important role, if only because it represents the playwright himself coming to terms with alienation..."

"The casting was exemplary... This is a very fine and enthralling play..."

Miss Doyle grew up in Lincoln and had parts in the Lincoln Community Playhouse productions and the old straw hat theater, the Hayloft.

She spent two years at New York Neighborhood Playhouse

Company Finds N.Y. Home

New York (AP) — The Jose Limon Dance Company, which has carried on since the death of its founder, is making the 92nd Street Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Assn. its official home.

Carl Urbont, executive director of the Y, said that in the 1940s and '50s the building had been the modern dance center of New York. "It is our aim to revive that center," he said. He said the Kaufmann Concert Hall stage will be enlarged by 1975. The company rehearses, teaches and performs at the

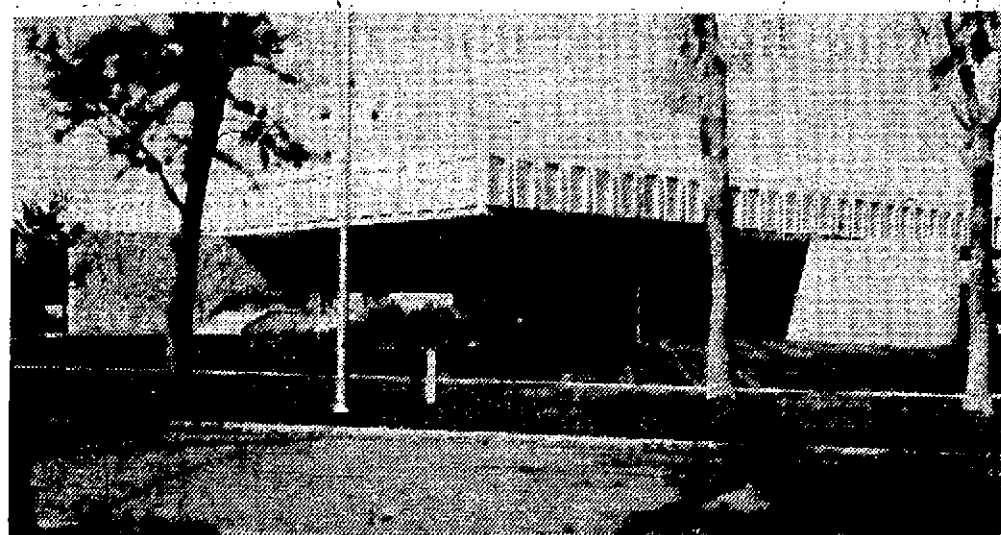

Mary Doyle

School where she studied her trade.

Though she has not appeared in productions in Lincoln recently, she did visit here last summer. She is the sister of John R. Doyle. Mrs. Doyle attended the opening performance of Equus.

YMHA. It has 16 dancers, Ruth Currier as artistic director and a technical staff of three. It will work toward creating a repertory theater of American modern dance and also will continue to tour.

At the time of Limon's death, the company was denied the right to perform any of the works of Doris Humphrey. Now that the company has proved stable through the past year and a half, it has received permission again to include Humphrey works in its repertory.

Logan's Dane G. Hansen Memorial Plaza.

Gift to North Kansas Village Growing Into Cultural Mecca

Logan, Kan. — So the building cost $450,000 plus landscaping? What's unusual about that?

Described in the March 4, 1973, issue of the Kansas City Star as a "breathtakingly beautiful, floodlighted monument..."

Why the excitement?

Well, the Dane G. Hansen Memorial Plaza in a block-square area in this town of about 824 people is fast building a reputation as a cultural mecca in this area.

In addition to the Hansen Trust and Foundation offices, a community meeting hall, town library and city offices, the building houses a museum-exhibition room.

It is not an ordinary small town activities building. Consultants from the Smithsonian Institute and the University of Kansas at Lawrence have helped establish traveling art exhibits such as one would expect to see in Kansas City or Denver, Dane G. Bales said.

Bales is managing director of the foundation. He also is the nephew of the late Dane G. Hansen, a Logan native who earned his wealth in oil, road construction and other activities. He left his fortune to the town.

In the museum's permanent collection are American and foreign coin collections, guns of Europe and America and oriental art collected by Hansen's sister, Katie Hanson, who was a missionary in Japan for many years.

Church, the renovation of the cemetery, public tennis and basketball courts and many others.

Logan is about 35 miles southwest of Alma, Neb., and 92 miles from Hays, Kan., home of Fort Hays State College. The foundation and the college have developed an educational program for the museum.

During September John C. Thorns Jr., chairman of the college art department presented lectures, "A Means of Understanding Painting," at the Plaza. Dr. Leo E. Oliva, talked on "Indians of Western Kansas" during October.

Martin Shapiro, assistant professor of music history, presented the first of three lessons in beginning guitar last Thursday. The other two lessons will be Nov. 7 and 21.

Hanging in the exhibition area now until Nov. 15 is Poster Prints #1 from a collection of the college's art department.

Bales stresses the variety of the museum's exhibition program. When the museum opened in April, 1973, a collection of works by modernist Peter Max was displayed.

The opening exhibit was followed by six-week exhibitions of such collections of glass from London's Victoria and Albert museum, Thomas Hart Benton's lithographs, Eskimo art and Guajiro tapestries from Mali Mai workshop in Venezuela.

Mrs. Bales (Polly) was described in a Kansas City Star article as "in the forefront of planning displays and foundation projects."

Ray Paintings on Exhibit

Opening Wednesday in the Miller & Paine fifth-floor gallery tea room will be an exhibition of 27 paintings by James Ray and three paintings by his mother, the late Waunita Ray.

Ray is dedicating the exhibit to his mother.

He studied with such artists as Terence Duren, Dale Nichols, Augustus Dunbar and Bill Hammond. He also took art courses at Doane College, Peru State College, the Omaha Art School and Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles.

His instruction in printmaking was from Barbara Kendrick and at the University of Nebraska.

In the exhibition, which hangs through Nov. 22, there are watercolors, lithographs, drypoint and embossing and oils.

Nine Paintings By Brink in Hastings Show

Hastings — Sabbathical Exhibition, nine paintings by Richard Brink, assistant professor of art at Hastings College, are on display until Nov. 30 at the college gallery.

Brink, a native of Odell, received his B.S. degrees in art education and his M.A. in painting degree from the University of Northern Colorado. Greeley. He joined the college faculty in 1966.

Spinning Vane

In a steady breeze, the familiar weathervane on a farmer's barn may not move for days. But a weathervane in most large cities today would probably spin off its pole. Tall buildings lining canyonlike streets deflect the wind and cause gusts to blow from several directions at once.

Paintings Seen

Paintings by Keith Jacobshagen are on display at the Mark IV Gallery, 1030 Q, through November.

Preserving Art Is Not an Easy Task

When an art gallery adds a piece to its collection, it takes on the responsibility of preserving that art for posterity.

That is the opinion of Norman Geske, director of the Sheldon Art Gallery at 12th and R Sts., on the University of Nebraska campus.

Works of art are like organisms, Geske compared. He said as soon as one piece is finished, it starts to deteriorate — just as humans start to deteriorate as soon as they are born.

But if an artist is a reasonably competent technician and the work is properly cared for, it will last, he added.

Aging is only one of the causes for deterioration in art, the director said. Others are handling, temperature changes, accidents, vandalism and shipping.

"People wonder why we scream at them to keep their hands off a painting," Geske said. "There is a reason. No viewer realizes that just touching a painting is a cause of deterioration. After all, what can a mere touch do? Fingers have oil and moisture on them, and these are transferred to the painting. Infinitesimal? Yes. But more and more touching changes the size until deterioration grows and grows."

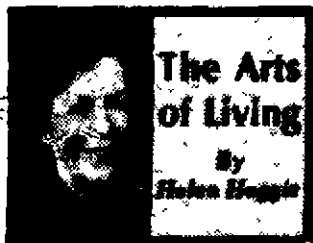

The problem of deterioration because of temperature change is not as great at Sheldon Gallery as in some museums, Geske explained. But an example of such a change was when Sheldon loaned Standing Woman With Folded Arms, by Ernst Barlach, to a New Mexico gallery.

"Because of the totally different environment, the wood split — it's called checking because the wood expands and contracts — Geske said.

How are art works repaired?

Conservator Necessary

Large galleries have resident conservators, but Sheldon is not large enough to require the services a full-time conservator. "Most of our collection is 20th century art — therefore not very old. In comparison with a museum such as Joslyn (in Omaha) our conservation problem is considerably smaller," said Geske.

F. du Pont Cornelius of the Cincinnati Museum is the conservator for Sheldon. He comes to Lincoln every other year to check each picture and sculpture in all collections and makes a condition report on each piece.

"Our files have these 10-year reports. Listed on them is work which must be done," the director pointed out. "The discouraging thing is that we have no funds to do it. Some of the repairs can be done here. Some must go to the laboratory."

"An example is the damage done to Mark Rothko's Yellow Band. In handling or in some such way, a large black thumb print appeared on the piece. Cornelius' method of repairing it was to camouflage it by blowing rouge onto the surface.

Some rouge probably has come off in the past two or three years, and it needs to be done again," Geske raised the question of why funds were not provided in the University budget for conservation. "Other departments surely have such funds."

Miles Tommerasen, vice chancellor for business and finance at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said other departments which were considered teaching departments did have budgeted funds for teaching equipment.

He added providing physical maintenance for the gallery plus security is, in a way, providing conservation.

But this does not take care of repairing, restoring and maintaining art. This is the battle Geske is fighting — to keep the art in good condition. The Nebraska Art Assn. (NAA) has allocated some money to conservation, he said.

Modern Art Problem

Some modern artists are creating new problems in conservation. "They have no interest in posterity. Artists will do as they want to — it is not our business to tell them how to do their work," Geske said.

Red Frame by Helen Frankenthaler is such a case. It is a stained picture. The pigments are put on unprimed canvas for esthetic reasons. "She wants the image on the canvas to be a symbol of space — forms and patterns of color in space."

"Some fool — for what reason I can't imagine — put a four-inch line on it with a ball point pen. This cannot be corrected because unprimed canvas absorbs whatever is applied to it. I doubt that the act was malicious. Probably it was unwitting ignorance."

When Sheldon Gallery opened in 1963, the budget included $10,000 for conservation, Geske said. There has been no money from university funds since. "I squeeze some from the operational budget and NAA contributes some," he added.

Preserving Art Is Not an Easy Task

How much money is needed for conservation? "We should have $5,000 a year at the minimum. Cornelius won't handle works of art on paper, and our collection has considerable numbers of prints, drawings, etc. Some need cleaning, some need rebacking. Art on modern wood pulp paper is murder to care for. Art on rag paper will last a lifetime," he said.

And what is being done about it?

The NAA board has decided that a certain part of the volunteer program will be devoted to conservation. Proceeds from the Bread Festival to be held at Sheldon Nov. 18 and 19 sponsored by NAA, will be put into the conservation fund.

Preservation of acquired work is as important as adding to existing collections, Geske said. And it is necessary to have money to continue conservation.

Sheldon Gallery Silver Show Film Schedule Opens Tuesday

This week's film schedule at Sheldon Gallery begins Tuesday with a documentary, Que Hacer, which continues through Thursday. Free to the public, it will be shown at 3, 7 and 9 p.m. on each of the three days.

Also free to the public is the art film Jean-Auguste Dominique Ingres at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Open to the public is Repulsion, a horror-fantasy film, at 3, 7 and 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Opening Tuesday at the Sheldon Art Gallery is an exhibition of antique silver pieces. The exhibit is from the Folger Museum in Kansas City. It will be at the gallery until Dec. 1.

Monty's Bridge Blooper at Arnhem on the Rhine

Cornelius Ryan

A Bridge Too Far. By Cornelius Ryan; Simon & Schuster.

Cornelius Ryan's third, and presumably last, book on the winning of World War II in Europe has been eight years in the making, but it has been well worth waiting for.

The Longest Day (1959) brought to life the Normandy landings and The Last Battle (1966) the struggle for Berlin. A Bridge Too Far about the gigantic British airdrop at Arnhem on the Rhine, is different in that it is a story of failure, one of the rare Allied failures in the reconquest of Nazi-occupied Europe.

Even at this distance of time, 30 years after the event, the memory lingers of brave men massacred in an ill-conceived parachutist operation, the major blame for which falls squarely on the shoulders of British Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery.

It was Monty who, after bickering with Gen. Patton and other U.S. commanders, finally persuaded Gen. Eisenhower that a simultaneous airdrop over five Rhine bridges would open the road to Berlin and shorten the war. His own deputy commander Lt. Gen. Frederick Browning, was dubious about the fifth bridge at Arnhem. "I think we might be doing a bridge too far," he said. He was right.

Ryan tells the story in his ultravivid, now familiar mosaic method—that is, in a sequence of interlocking scenes and episodes each of which contributes to the overall picture.

As in the two earlier books, his research has been staggering. The facts are so massively marshaled (and don't omit reading the fascinating footnotes) that I had the impression of a writer deploying his material like a general deploying his forces. Every page carries its quota of first-hand interviews with participants and survivors, from generals and troops on both sides to Dutch civilians trapped in the battle.

Let me cite a minor example: as a United Press correspondent, Walter Cronkite unwittingly led a group of parachutists who mistook him for a lieutenant because of a helmet he wore.

Field Marshal Montgomery had the reputation among German as well as Allied commanders of being supercautious, of never taking a risk until he was reasonably sure of success. That it should have been he who conceived the audacious airdrop for capture of the Rhine bridges was one of the surprises of Allied strategy.

Ryan attributes it to Montgomery's pique at having to serve under an American supreme commander. Gen. Omar Bradley disliked the plan when he heard of it later, but knew nothing of it until after Monty had sold it to Eisenhower.

The Germans, Ryan tells us, came into possession of the plan fairly early, and when the British 101st Airborne Division jumped at Arnhem, it landed right on top of Gen. Wilhelm Bittrich's waiting Panzer divisions.

The fighting was bitter and bloody. In the nine days before the British retreated back across the Rhine, their casualties reached 17,365.

Ryan's vignettes are superb—and sometimes ironic. While the British parachutists were fighting a losing battle against German tanks, two of their generals were arguing over which one was in command. Shades of Cardigan and Raglan at Balaclava!

Today one remembers not the four bridges that were taken but the one at Arnhem that was not, "the bridge too far." It has provided Ryan with a theme that will evoke memories in older readers and spark the imagination of younger ones who had not been born when it happened.

Cornelius Ryan is no dry-as-dust academic but a recorder of living history. His research has been so meticulous (every statement in the narrative, he says, is backed by documentation or corroboration) as to make the book a sine qua non for future historians.

You finish it with the feeling that you have been there. And, in a vicarious sense, you have.

Once Upon a Time, There Were 2 Brothers

By Victor Wilson

Washington — Since time immemorial, writers the world over have sought an opening for their stories that would rivet readers' attention, persuading them to continue.

Few, if any, have topped the opening coined and used by the Grimm brothers for many of their fairy tales "Once upon a time..." Those four words have commanded instant attention from generations of children since the first book of the tales appeared in Germany in 1812.

It was a precarious printing venture for Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm, even though the volume appeared at the Christmas season. For that was the winter of Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow, and all of Europe was in anxious turmoil. But the book was an immediate success and, with a later volume, has prospered down to this day.

So it is a pleasure to report that after 30 years, Pantheon Publishers now has issued a second edition of its The Complete Grimm's Fairy Tales.

It contains all 212 exquisite drawings by the late Josef Scharl used in the first edition. Scharl, noted German illustrator and painter, emigrated to the United States in 1938 when the Nazis were about to touch off World War II.

Grimm's tales are available in the United States piece meal and in various anthologies, but Pantheon's is the only complete edition in print in this country.

Of the first edition, British Poet W.H. Auden wrote: "Among the few indispensable, common-property books upon which Western culture can be founded it is hardly too much to say that these tales rank next to the Bible in importance.

Although the stories are known and loved world wide, few parents reading them to their children know much about the authors.

Jacob (1785-1863) and Wilhelm (1786-1859) were natives of Kassel, Germany, graduated from law school together, and almost immediately embarked upon a lifelong career of collecting for publication simple folk tales heard on farms, in small villages and spinning-wheel rooms where thread was group-produced, and in the plentiful beer halls.

Unlike earlier writers for children, the Grimms never edited the stories they heard to screen out cruelty, greed, etc. Thus they became the first writers to produce tales for children in the words of the people who told them.

Jacob was a positive, vigorous man, while Wilhelm was gay and gentle. The pair spent their lives together, using the same bed as children and the same work table as youths. Wilhelm married Dortchen Wild in 1825. Jacob never married, but shared his brother's house and children, to whom he was Uncle Jacob.

Jacob had tireless zeal for collecting tales, while Wilhelm, who suffered from a heart condition, toiled over getting them written, using fine judgment in selecting, piecing together and arranging.

The first volume was banned in Vienna as a work of superstition, but the brothers went ahead on the second and it was published in 1825. New editions followed one another as demand grew. Later, the Grimms published a volume containing their favorite 50 tales. But it wasn't until 1837 that they published as one book the first two volumes.

Translations into Danish, Swedish and French were almost immediate upon the first book's publication in 1812. After the second volume appeared, translations of both volumes appeared in nearly all the world's major languages.

But no matter what the language, the characteristic opening remained, whether "Once upon a time," or "A thousand years ago," or, perhaps, "In the days of good King Arthur."

Often as not, the closing line was the reassuring "And they lived happily ever after."

Memoirs of a Grid Pro

Sunday's Fools. By Tom Beer; Houghton Mifflin.

Football fans have in recent years been deluged with books about their favorite sport, but none has looked at the action from the point of view found in Sunday's Fools.

This book was written by a player whose pro career was as undistinguished as the teams for whom he played. But former tight end Tom Beer, with an assist by journalist George Kimball, does reveal what goes on among the losers.

Beer played with the Denver Broncos and the New England Patriots, two clubs that until recently were among the most consistent of also-rans.

He spends several pages telling of an exhibition game Denver played in North Platte during the Nebraska Centennial. How North Platte hosted the Denver and Oakland teams and how the guests returned the favor provides some insight into the pro player's social demeanor, which, to say the least, is not copied from Amy Vanderbilt's playbook.

Former Oklahoma coach Chuck Fairbanks rates a zero from Beer. However, the ex-Sooner chief now is a smashing success.

Vadim Vadimovich

Look at the Harlequins! By Vladimir Nabokov; McGraw-Hill.

Who but Vladimir Nabokov would invent a fictional novelist for the sole purpose of comparing him unfavorably with Vladimir Nabokov?

Vadim Vadimovich, the hero of Look at the Harlequins! is a Russian emigre writer whose career "styly" parallels his creator's. They diverge significantly only in the quality of their work.

Though Vadim is a celebrated author of considerable accomplishment, he is haunted by "a dream feeling that my life was the now-identical twin, a parody, an inferior variant of another man's life... a demon, I felt, was forcing me to impersonate that other man, that other writer who was and would always be incomparably greater, healthier and crueler.

The Nabokov the world sees is Vadim. The real Nabokov is that ineffable "other," beyond the reach even of our dreams.

A charitable interpretation of Look at the Harlequins! would suggest that the author is poking fun at himself, but, in my opinion at least, neither the tone of this book nor anything else ever written or uttered by Nabokov encourages this view.

Far more convincing is the impression that he is condescending to indulge in a few pleasantries on the subject of our short-sightedness. This is your paltry three-dimensional Nabokov, he implies. Now I will give you a few hints, a clue or two, a fascinating trompe l'oeil tease of a glimpse at the true Nabokov as only I can know him.

Nabokov is fond of instructing reviewers regarding his books; in this case, he goes further and revises the entire critical consensus concerning his work. He is not merely the famous artificer, wit and stylist his admirers consider him to be, but "incomparably greater." So great, in fact, that he passeth understanding.

On another level. Look at the Harlequins! is a relentless reminiscence over the minutiae of the author's literary evolution. "Indeed," writes the narrator Vadim, "the present memoir derives much of its value from its being a catalogue raisonne of the roots and origins and amusing birth canals of many images in my Russian and especially English fiction."

A rude sort of justice triumphs at the end of Look at the Harlequins! Vadim is struck down by his solipsistic perspective. In trying to turn himself, instead of a street, around, he falls into a paralytic fit.

While I suppose Nabokov is up to one of his metaphorical mirror tricks here, it seems to me that his sleight-of-hand has slipped up once again, leaving him in a cruelly exposed position. To say it plainly, the book strikes me as the production of an imagination paralyzed by vanity.

Our Little Town Schools Merger Proves Success

By Gertrude Skinner
Superior

Early last summer the Hardy school district voted to merge with the Superior school district and to send its students to Superior to school. The merger has been a very successful marriage, both partners contributing equally.

The final decision to merge with Superior was hard for the Hardy folks to come by. There were travail, injured egos, bitterness and a climate of unrest, unreality. Even those who voted in favor of the merger were not happy about it.

There was so much trauma involved: Losing the children to be educated, traditions, buildings to be left unoccupied and haunted by better days. The merger meant an end to a way of life, a life that had been rewarding and satisfying and familiar.

Hurting others is not the way of life in the little places. Life is too personal for one to escape the troubles of another. If you hurt those near to you, you bleed.

But hurt is what happens when any facet of village life is threatened. Discontinuing a school is the ultimate of wounds, the radical surgery that often sounds the death knell for rural communities.

Often but not always. Take for instance the village of Hardy. With all of the sturdiness that her name implies, she has made a remarkable recovery from the loss of her school, the radical surgery that threatened her life last summer.

She is alive and well. How well — just ask the people of Hardy and Superior at this time, the end of the football season.

Separately neither school had been fielding football teams they could grow ecstatic about. This year, together, they have been indestructible. Ask the people of Aurora. The Superior Wildcats took them over the pigskin highway for the first time in 20 years.

It may be that a blood transfusion benefits both the donor and the receiver, but when you have two donors and no receivers it is happily confusing.

Hardy or Superior? Superior or Hardy? Same difference.

SUCCESS.

Playhouse Will Offer Three Classes.

The Lincoln Community Playhouse will offer three new Academy classes, open to the public, beginning in November.

A "No Nonsense" Sewing Course for Men only, led by Puppet Master Lee Ridge, will include use of the sewing machine, construction techniques, selecting and reading a pattern, handling fabric and general sewing.

The course will run for 10 sessions on Monday evenings for those over 14 years of age, beginning Nov. 18.

A Dance/Movement for Theater class, led by choreographer Barbara Maxwell, will include body control, tap, character, contemporary dance, improvisation and movement for singers. It will meet Saturday mornings or Tuesday evenings beginning Nov. 9 and 12 for 10 weeks.

Mime/Pantomime, taught by Connie Amundson, will include use of the body for dramatic expression, improvisational movement, techniques of mime and pantomime, plus free and easy movement for theater.

Ten sessions will meet Thursday evenings beginning Nov. 7 and Saturday afternoon beginning Nov. 9.

Information may be obtained at the Playhouse.

Ground was broken for this structure at 18th and M in 1900. It was used by one faith (United Brethren in Christ) from its completion about 1904 until 1945 when it was sold to the Greek Orthodox Church of the Annunciation, a Congregation that still uses the building.

The congregation which built Caldwell Memorial was organized in Lincoln in 1888. Several other structures were used by the congregation before this was built. Southminster United Methodist, the successor congregation, is made up of Calvary U.B. which formerly worshipped in a chapel on the west side of 13th St. between Otoe and Van Dorn, and the Caldwell Memorial congregation. They united in 1945.

The Southminster congregation observed the 25th year of occupancy at 16th and Otoe last Sunday.

Why Should Our Youngster
Have A Newspaper Route?

The living is good. Plenty of money, nice home, nice furnishings, another salary raise in sight; we've never had it so good. Why should our youngster manage a newspaper route? Most any educator or businessman will tell you why in three simple words; it builds character.

Often times the child who grows up in comfortable circumstances and who gets his weekly "handout" from dad never realizes the value of money or the efforts required to make it and manage it, until he's on his own. By then attitudes and habits are difficult to reverse.

But the newspaper carrier learns valuable lessons that stick. While making money on a newspaper route is important, the experience of getting-the-job is important. When through route management, responsibility and self-confidence are acquired at this early age, a newspaper carrier has an advantage over other youngsters that no amount of money can buy.

Old Nebraska

1867: Lancaster County citizens met to discuss financial aid to induce a railroad to build a line through Lincoln and the county.

The commissioners accepted a plan for the Capitol submitted by John Morris of Chicago. The plan called for a building 180 feet long and 70 feet wide.

100 1874: Nearly a third of Lincoln's merchants agreed to close their stores as early as 8 p.m.

A special election was set for Dec. 2, to vote on a $7,000 bond issue for the purchase of a steam fire engine and equipment for the city.

90 1884: In the presidential election Lancaster County cast 4,011 votes for James G. Blaine, 2,180 for Grover Cleveland. Lincoln Democrats celebrated Cleveland's election to the presidency with a big rally.

Complaints were numerous that gambling houses were operating openly in Lincoln.

80 1894: Plans were submitted to the City Council for a municipal auditorium with a seating capacity of 7,000 on the main floor, a large stage and other rooms.

70 1904: As election time neared, many citizens began to voice curiosity as to why public officials had not installed a mechanical system of voting.

The University of Nebraska experiment station announced it was devising plans to enable farmers to cope with the prairie dogs.

60 1914: A plan to consolidate the University of Nebraska by moving the downtown campus to the College of Agriculture site was defeated after a statewide election. It lost in the state 184,110 to 66,843 and in Lancaster County 9,065 to 3,106.

The Flying Squadron of America, a group working for nationwide prohibition, visited Lincoln to enlist supporters.

50 1924: The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce voted to recommend to electors a $3 million school bond issue. Gov. Charles Bryan's vice presidential campaign tours that caused him to be absent from his office and the state for weeks at a time drew criticism from his opponents to the effect that "We are not governed enough."

40 1934: Lincoln police were restoring order after a Halloween night that brought more than the usual number of pranks.

Lancaster County farmers received a total of $71,110.82 in federal wheat checks.

30 1944: Nebraska voters defeated a statewide prohibition proposal by a decisive margin.

Lancaster was one of 31 Nebraska counties that went over their goals for the war bond fund.

State treasurer Carl G. Swanson said the improved financial condition of the state necessitated the purchase of an accounting machine that carried totals in excess of $9,999,999.99.

20 1954: Republicans continued their 14-year domination of the Statehouse. Election of Victor Anderson of Lincoln as governor led the sweep of state offices.

The State Highway Department said that contracts for reconstructing the West O Street viaduct probably would be let soon.

The first of several proposed murals were installed in the Capitol rotunda. They were defended as "Byzantine, not modernistic," by Col. Harry F. Cunningham, professional advisor to the Capitol Murals Commission.

10 1964: For the first time in seven presidential elections Nebraska voters gave the Democratic candidate a majority. In addition to the Lyndon Johnson-Hubert Humphrey president-vice president slate, the Democrats held the governorship for Frank Morrison, elected Phil Sorensen lieutenant governor, Fred Sorensen Sr. state treasurer and sent Clair Callan of Odell to Congress from the First District.

LeRoy Abbott, of Alliance, owner of several banks, received approval of State Banking authorities to move a bank from Wood Lake to Valentine. The Nebraska State Bank of Valentine had been closed after its president admitted misappropriation of $1.5 million.

Traveler With ??? May Also Save $$$

By John Justin Smith
(c) Chicago Daily News

Send me my WIN button, please, President Jerry Ford, old buddy. I deserve it for the following inflation-fighting tips for travelers:

- You may be able to save $5 or so on a plane flight by declining the meal offered. This must be done when you purchase your ticket. It's not legal to bring along your own
- booze, but there's no law against brown-bagging a sandwich.
- If you're going to Europe, take a look at something other than the first-class hotels. Second- or even third-class accommodations may suit you quite well, and you can cut the cost in half, maybe even more.
- Stop being overly generous with tips. This, the head doctors say, is a sign of an inferiority complex. You overtip to compensate. So stick with the local - custom (most often 15%, sometimes less).

- Don't think you must take a plane everywhere. The Germans have a thrifty custom of using trains for trips under 300 miles and planes for longer distances.
- Ask questions when you fly. You may find a fly-and-drive package to your destination that will give you a much lower air fare. Consider fly-cruise packages, too.
- Look at the new domestic midweek fares, especially to Las Vegas and California. They can save you up to $70 on each ticket.
- Avoid fancy restaurants. They charge tremendous prices for service. A good tip in foreign cities, especially Paris: ask a local person where he had dinner out most recently — and go there.
- Use a smart travel agent. He'll know where you can cut corners and can steer you to the best buys in packaged travel.
- Ask questions and you may get to visit another city for peanuts.
- When driving, check out economy motels.

And finally, a note about low-cost inflation. The inter-island fare in Hawaii has been increased by 93 cents. Formerly, people who flew to Hawaii could visit each of the other islands by air for $8.33. The Civil Aeronautics Board the other day approved a hike to $9.26.

Tent Shows Are Popular In Britain

London (AP) — The bottom has not fallen out of the Big Top in Britain.

The 1974 Circus Directory of the British Isles, issued with the circus magazine "King Polo," lists no fewer than 40 troupes operating in Britain. They range from the mighty traveling circuses to one which is worked by just two people.

The magazine says it hopes that the directory "will help in persuading local authority councillors and officials, and anyone else with an interest, that the circus is very much alive and kicking."

Language Can Help Ordinary Civitano

(c) New York Times
New York — In Rome an Italian Guide, mispronouncing the English word "wallets," cautions a party of American tourists to watch their "walnuts," because of proliferating pickpockets.

In Moscow a sign at the airport reads: "Aeroflot Soviet Airlines disposes of the latest equipment and experienced pilots."

In Japan an announcement occasionally posted in a railroad station proclaims: "All tickets for the train to Tokyo are soiled."

Such linguistic boo-boos, say the 2,000 delegates from 50 countries who attended a World Esperanto Congress in Hamburg, West Germany, last summer would disappear if mankind adopted a simple second language for worldwide use.

The language they are pushing, naturally, is Esperanto. Their stated reason: "Esperanto estas utila, praktika, internacia lingvo por la sciencistoj, studentoj, turistoj au ordinara civitano."

No one knows how many hundreds of thousands of people speak Esperanto today, but the language has been learned by millions since it was invented by Dr. Ludwig L. Zamenhof, a Polish physician, in 1887.

The International Esperanto Assn., based in Rotterdam, says there are 500 schools in 40 countries teaching the language, over 100 publications regularly printed in Esperanto, 23 radio stations around the world that regularly broadcast in Esperanto and more than 10,000 books in print in the language.

In New York, the Esperanto Society meets every month.

According to Mark Starr, the New York-based chairman of the East Coast Information Center of the Esperanto League of North America, who attended the Hamburg Congress, the conference devoted more attention to tourism this year than ever before.

And the 81-year-old Starr should know; he has been at every international esperanto convention since 1917.

"Tourism is very big in Esperanto circles today," said Starr. "To date about 1,500 tourist brochures have been printed in Esperanto, and there are even detailed guidebooks to such countries as Denmark, Iceland, Japan — we're very strong in Japan — Brazil, Norway, India, Spain, Hungary, France and both Germanys.

"But the greatest service that the International Esperanto Assn. provides to Esperanto-speaking tourists is through its network of 3,500 Esperanto 'consuls' in 80 countries throughout the world.

By means of this network

Esperantists meet fellow-speakers in the countries in which they travel and use the language as a passport to worldwide freindship."

The names and addresses of all the consuls are published annually in the association's yearbook available for $10 from the Esperanto Information Center, P.O. Box 508, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

Final Concerts

New York (AP) — The Little Orchestra Society and its musical director, Thomas Scherman, who have performed since 1947, are presenting their final season — five concerts in Avery Fisher Hall.

The season will be devoted to repeat performances of the most outstanding opera-in-concert-form events offered by the society during the past 27 years.

Bienvenidos! To La Paz/Cabo San Lucas to fish for marlin. To Guadalajara to listen to the beat of street music where the mariachis were born. To Puerto Vallarta, hideaway of the jet set. To Guaymas to shop for treasures—a dollar's still a dollar (12½ pesos) in Mexico. To Mazatlan where white beaches turn you a beautiful brown. There's a new way to get there that's quick and easy. Two great airlines make it happen. Take Frontier's breakfast jet to Phoenix or Tucson. Then connect pronto to Hughes Airwest, the only U.S. airline that flies to all five Mexican resort destinations. Great vacation packages save you money.

*Tour package in Mazatlan includes 4 nights at the deluxe Camino Real Beach Hotel, transfers and baggage handling (including tips), welcome cocktail, and sightseeing. Price based on double occupancy, air fare not included. Tour package rates are higher effective Dec. 16 (winter season). New Area For Skiing

(c) Newhouse Service

Winter sports enthusiasts have a new Colorado Ski Area. Known as Tamarron, it's a $40-million-plus, all-year resort in the southwest corner of the state near Durango. There's a downhill and cross-country ski school on the site, as well as beginner and intermediate slopes. Daily rates begin at $19 per person, double occupancy. You can get information from Tamarron, Dept. P, Box 3131, Durango, Colo. 81301.

Center Needed For Arts Group

New York (AP) — Clark Center for the Performing Arts, founded in 1959, is looking for a home.

The YWCA, which didn't charge rent for two floors of its residence for girls on West 51st Street, and which paid salaries of some of the center's technical staff, has closed the building.

The Clark Center had two theaters, of 350 and 90 seats, three rehearsal rooms and offices. A Dance Horizons program showcased new dance groups, a Playwrights Horizons program gave 70 new productions by new writers during the last two and a half years and there were many classes in dance and drama.

'Upstairs, Downstairs' Takes Another Look at Class System

Viewers rejoining the Edwardian English Bellamy family and their servants for 13 more stories in Masterpiece Theater's presentation of Upstairs, Downstairs will miss some old friends but make quite a few new ones.

Upstairs, Downstairs will air 7:30 p.m. Sundays on KUON and the Nebraska ETV network, starting tonight.

The initial season of the Emmy-winning British costume drama made viewers familiar with the elegant innards of 165 Eaton Place, Belgravia, London, home of Tory Member of Parliament Richard Bellamy (David Langton), wife Lady Marjorie (Rachel Gurney), their caddish but dashing son James (Simon Williams) and beautiful daughter Elizabeth (Nicola Pagett).

Downstairs in the servants' quarters there is Hudson (Gordon Jackson), Aloyal, Bible-reading Scottish butler; Rose the head house parlormaid (Jean Marsh); Sarah, cheeky, irresistible and ever-pregnant parlor/nursery maid (Pauline Collins); Thomas Watkins, enterprising and arrogant Welsh chauffeur;

Mrs. Bridges (Angela Baddeley), pint-sized and flustered cook with a heart of gold and monster menus; Ruby (Jenny Tomasin), mouselike kitchen maid, never seen above floor-level in the esteemed "upstairs" residential quarters of the Bellamys, and Edward, the cheerful footman (Chris Beeny).

Action for the first series moved on from 1903 to 1910. The next 13 stories take the Bellamys from 1912 to 1914 and the outbreak of the World War I. Gone are Sarah and Watkins.

From upstairs Elizabeth Bellamy has gone, too, off to America to marry a wealthy business man.

The departures are caused in part by previous commitments by the actors who played those roles.

Lady Marjorie Bellamy will appear in tonight's chapter, but there will be a thrilling cliff-hanger exit for her (because actress Rachel Gurney wanted out for the rest of the season).

Richard and James Bellamy are still upstairs, while downstairs Hudson, Rose and Mrs. Bridges are still "in service," as are Edward and Ruby. To compensate for cast departures, three new characters are to appear.

Filling the gap left by Lady Marjorie is Hazel Forrest, played by Meg Wynn Owen.

Hazel enters Richard Bellamy's life as a secretary and sticks around to become deeply and matrimonially linked to the family.

The rigid English class system of the Edwardian era is temporarily violated as a suburban type-writer — a stenographer in those days — is allowed to eat upstairs, and eventually is treated as one of the family.

In the eyes of the paternal and unbending Hudson and his domestic staff, people should keep to their station in life. And for a type-writer that station, thinks Hudson is more downstairs than up.

And, as a sort of Christmas present, there's a surprise package of two new young ladies — one upstairs, one downstairs — who will not appear until the holiday season.

ETV offers a second helping of Upstairs, Downstairs starting tonight.

Sesame Street Adds Muppet and Mostel

Children and parents who signed "Save Sesame Street" petitions will welcome the sixth season of the entertaining and educational program for children which begins Monday.

New goals in affect behavior, divergent thinking and career awareness, a series of cameo appearances by Zero Mostel and a new "Muppet" are part of Sesame Street's new season.

Poco Loco

The daily series, produced by the Children's Television Workshop (CTW), is aired across the nation by 250 stations of the Public Broadcasting Service (including KUON and the other Nebraska ETV network stations) and the 30 commercial stations that show the program without commercial interruption.

Originally developed for American audiences, the program or one of its several foreign language offshoots, now is being seen in 58 countries and territories around the world.

Joan Ganz Cooney, CTW's president, calls Sesame Street "truly the longest street in the

John Brown May Revive

By Irv Kupcinet
 (c) Chicago Sun-Times

John Brown's body may lie "a-moldering in the grave," but he's very much alive for TV. Producer Walter Schwimmer is planning a special on The Trial of John Brown, in which Charlton Heston has evinced interest. Schwimmer contacted Ralph Newman of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop in Chicago to inquire if he had any material on the subject, only to learn that the largest collection of John Brown memorabilia had just been acquired by Newman.

Dinah Shore is working weekends to pretape enough programs to enable her to take a long vacation with Burt Reynolds.

Technique Reused

Jack Haley Jr., who produced the exciting movie That's Entertainment, is adopting the same technique (old film clips) for his first special as TV president of 20th Century-Fox. The special, James Dean—Revisited, will include clips of Dean's brilliant performances in three movies, Giant, Rebel Without a Cause and East of Eden. Natalie Wood, in a rare TV appearance, and Sammy Davis Jr. will appear in interviews as close friends of the young actor who died much too soon.

Representation

ABC-TV is running into union opposition in its effort to produce a series in England based on Gore Vidal's Burr. The series was planned to coincide with the American bicentennial celebration in '76. But an amalgam called the National Council of Motion Picture and TV Unions is protesting the making of a bicentennial series on foreign shores. The council's world" The street extends to France this season with the Bonjour Sesame.

Sesame Street News

This year Sesame Street's cast will be joined by Broadway star Zero Mostel, exhibiting his famous pantomime, Poco Loco, a parrot, and "Muppet" (the word combines marionette and puppet) who has a number of lessons to teach despite the fact he only repeats exactly what he hears.

Poco Loco joins a furry, feathered and tin-plated Muppet cast that includes such favorites as Big Bird, Oscar the Grouch, Grover, Ernie and Bert, Kermit the Frog, Snuffle-Upagus and Same the Robot

The Muppets, the show's human hosts — David (Northern J Calloway), Susan (Loretta Long) Gordon (Rosco Orman), Bob (Bob McGrath), Mr. Hooper (Will Lee), Luis (Enrulo Delgado) and Maria (Sonia Manzano) — and live-action films and animation provide the educational vehicle for the show.

Broadcast times for Sesame Street, on the Nebraska ETV network are Monday - Friday at 12 noon and 5 p.m. and Saturday at 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

4TV Show Biz Speed Noted by Ebsen

By Holly Spence

You'll probably never see low-key private detective Barnaby Jones dance a jig, but that's how Buddy Ebsen got his stage start.

He began his career as a song and dance man many years ago and show business had changed, he said at a CBS press conference in Chicago.

"When I did features in the old Hollywood, I would learn the lines like they were chiseled in stone, but you're not allowed to do it now — the business is so fast today you have to wing it," he said.

The Barnaby Jones series, which airs on CBS in a new time slot at 9 p.m. Tuesdays, was preceded by Ebsen's successful appearance in the Beverly Hillbillies series. But he has never felt he was typecast because of the hillbilly role.

"I've played all kinds of parts and I believe if you do them honestly and credibly that people accept," said Ebsen, who added that he and his sister were "favorites in smart supper clubs in New York" in the early days.

After five years in the service, he returned to Hollywood to learn that he was too old for his former dancing roles. So for a time he turned villain.

"It completely destroyed a preconceived image," he commented. "As long as a part is playable, I welcome a change; it's a chance for growth."

But Ebsen doesn't forget his early dancing and is working with his actor-dancer daughter Bonnie on a new musical. To prove his terpsichorean training, Ebsen stepped off a bit of the old soft shoe in Chicago.

And further disbelievers can be convinced after a look at the current MGM release, That's Entertainment. Lanky young Ebsen has a dancing sequence with an equally youthful Judy Garland.

The ruddy complected actor, whose conversation is slow, easy but deliberate, considers his role as vice president in The President's Plane is Missing as "one of my best efforts."

He has run the gamut, role-wise.

"I don't know what people have in their minds when they see me or what my performance suggests to them as a possibility," he said. "I'm wide open if someone comes up with a playable part and a viable script."

But his dramatic involvement doesn't end with acting. Ebsen has written a play entitled Champagne General, and he may even fill the part of President Lincoln on a possible play date at the Ford Theatre in Washington, D. C.

The play grew out of his interest and research on the Civil War and is specifically based on the controversial northern general George McClellan.

Violence Exploitation, Not Its Presence, Plagues TV

By John J. O'Connor
(c) New York Times

New York — Like some festering sore, the issue of violence on television is given serious examination at monotonously regular intervals.

The experts are summoned, the evidence is considered, the conflicting opinions are delivered and all is forgotten until the next crisis of inflammation.

This pattern has served the financial structure of television well. The programming status quo is threatened only briefly, continuing undisturbed after little more than minor adjustment and touchingly sincere promises.

For a variety of reasons, examination time seems to have rolled around again, but this time a growing number of influential voices are insisting the sore has become malignant, that violence on TV presents an ominous threat to the social fabric, that there is a direct relationship between TV content and the fact violent crimes in the United States are increasing at a rate four to seven times the growth in population.

This revival of concern is accompanied by a scattering of related developments.

Item: The Federal communications commission (FCC) is struggling to meet a Dec. 31 deadline on a report requested by the house appropriations Committee to outline "specific positive actions taken or planned by the commission to protect children from excessive programming of violence and obscenity."

Item: A San Francisco woman is suing NBC and its affiliate, KRON-TV, for $11 million on the charge her 9-year-old daughter was "raped" by a boy and three girls, ages 10 to 14, in a fashion similar to the broomstick assault depicted in Born Innocent, a made-for-TV movie about juvenile detention homes. The youngsters had seen the movie a few days earlier.

No Fantasy Refuge
The issues are hardly open to simple solutions. And television cannot be expected to completely ignore violence, to become a fantasy refuge from the more unpleasant facts of contemporary life.

As a critic, I did defend the violence of Born Innocent, believing it was used for sobering documentation not sensational exploitations. I am unable to defend, however, that the film was scheduled for early evening, when it was more likely to be available to young audiences.

Where, then, does this leave the issue of violence on TV or, more specifically, the effects of violent content on TV viewers, both young and old?

There has been no lack of extensive studies, financed either by the networks or independent agencies. But generally the findings of one study, perhaps conducted by an independent agency, tend to be contradicted by the conclusions of another, quickly touted by a network.

Now, Victor E. Cline, a professor of Psychology at the University of Utah, is insisting the latest evidence compiled by social science researchers leaves no room for doubt.

In Where Do You Draw the Line? published by the Brigham Young University Press, he was edited an anthology of essays and reports carrying the subtitle, "An Exploration Into Media Violence, Pornography and Censorship." Professor Cline's own conclusion is explicit:

"In fairness, individual studies can always be nitpicked; however, the overwhelming consensus of the research still suggests that media violence does affect us, and potentially adversely.

"How and to what degree will be determined by a host of other factors — predispositions, family and peer influences, chance happenings in the environment and others.

But this in no way lessens the significant role of the media in suggesting, teaching and even triggering increased aggressive behavior toward our fellow man."

However, the authors of such studies do not argue TV itself is bad for children. Rather, they reach a more fundamental conclusion: Any steady diet of television, regardless of content, can exert a powerful influence on children.

Obviously, television does not have a monopoly on violence. The commodity can be exploited anywhere, from tabloid journalism to an Alice Cooper rock concert to a Sam Peckinpah bloodbath film. All of these, however, can be expected to find their way onto a TV screen eventually.

It is impossible to ignore the observation of a TV writer interviewed in a study for the surgeon general's report "Television and Social Behavior."

He said, "We aren't going to get rid of violence until we get rid of advertisers. The advertisers want something with which to get the audience. Violence equals excitement equals ratings."

While conceding some of the best American television is among the more violent variety — series such as Kojak and Police Story — it would be too easy to agree with that writer.

Although American Television can dabble successfully in non-violent, quality programming for occasional "specials," it seems incapable of putting together a sustained series of the multifaceted level of an "Upstairs, Downstairs" or "A Family at War," which are being shown here on Public TV. Both were produced for the commercial channels in England.

The problem with television is not the inclusion of violence but the exploitation of violence.

The FCC, in preparing its report, will probably revert to the familiar escape clause of self-regulation for the industry.

If that regulation is to be enlightened, the industry needs advice from the public it supposedly serves. A good way to begin might be by turning off the TV set more frequently.

Islands Mark Churchill Centennial

By Joe Planas
Special Writer

"This is something up with which I will not put," Winston Churchill is supposed to have said at some time in his life.

It was to avoid ending a sentence with a proposition, and many a school kid remembers Churchill for that if for nothing else. And only because a demanding English teacher might have forced that remembrance.

Three British Commonwealth nations are commemorating the 100th anniversary of Sir Winston Churchill's birth by striking sterling silver proof coins.

The Cayman Islands, Turks and Caicos, and Cook Islands have struck coins to honor the former Prime Minister of England. The Cayman Islands will strike a $25 coin (45 mm), and the Cook Islands will strike a $50 silver coin (58 mm). Turks and Caicos will strike a 20 crown coin priced at $30 to mark the occasion. The Cayman coin will sell for $45 and the Cook Islands coin is priced at $175.

The Cook Islands coin reverse features a portrait of Sir Winston and the British Union Jack, and House of Parliament in the background.

Observes of the Turks and Caicos, and Cayman Islands coins will feature Churchill's portrait; reverses of the coins will bear the coat of arms of the respective island nations. The Turks and Caicos Islands Churchill commemorative will have a lettered edge which will read "Redeemable at Turks and Caicos for U.S. currency." It may be converted into U.S. dollars without premium on the islands. Paramount International Coin Corp. is the distributor.

Dove Stamp Fails to Fly On 1st Day

Distribution of the first U.S. postage stamp ever printed with pressure sensitive adhesive — the 1974 precanceled Dove of Peace stamp — has been delayed. The U.S. Postal Service said the precanceled stamp, intended to further test precancellation as a means of speeding seasonal mail processing, was scheduled to have been issued with the other two 1974 Christmas stamps on Oct. 23 in New York.

The Postal Service said no problems were experienced in the actual printing of the stamp. However, there were major technical difficulties in die cutting the stamp for ease of the customer removing the backing paper. One step to solve the problem was to eliminate phosphor tagging which had caused excessive die wear. The stamps are being manufactured by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, using newly acquired die cutting and stripping equipment.

First day cancellation requests for the Dove of Peace stamp will be held by the Postmaster in New York pending developments. Where the precanceled stamp has been requested in combination with the Altarpiece and Currier and Ives Christmas stamps, only the latter two stamps were canceled on Oct. 23. The Dove of Peace stamp will be canceled on a separate envelope at a later date, the Postal Service said.

Quantities of the stamp will be available for collectors from the Philatelic Sales Division in Washington, D.C. 20036.

Stamp, Puzzle Hobbies Join In Jigsaw Set

By Associated Press

An innovation in philatelic hobby items is a stamp jigsaw puzzle prepared by H. E. Harris & Co. It comes in three designs.

The 300-piece puzzles measure 11 x 17 inches apiece when completed and they are composed of oversize, full-color reproductions of postage stamps. The designs are: Bicentennial, featuring U.S. stamps honoring the American Revolution; Space with U.S. and foreign stamps depicting rockets, satellites, space walks and lunar landings and Travel consisting of U.S. and foreign stamps illustrating trains, planes, ships, autos and other forms of transportation.

Israeli Architecture

As a follow-up on the three new stamps recently released by Israel calling attention to the rebuilt synagogues of Old Jerusalem, the Israel Philatelic Agency in America noted a simultaneous issue of a trio of stamps depicting Israeli architecture since 1948. One stamp shows the Lady Davis Technical Center "Amal" in Tel Aviv. A second adhesive pictures the Elias Bourasky Library at Tel Aviv University while the third portrays the Mivtahim Rest Home at Zikhron Ya'akov. The designs are photographic views and architectural elevations.

Questions for Governor

*Designates Incumbent

The governor is the supreme administrative officer of state government, constitutionally charged with the responsibility of taking "care the laws be faithfully executed and the affairs of the state efficiently and economically administered." Provided with a home in the Executive Mansion, the governor heads and supervises all "code" agencies. He even names officers of governing boards of technically independent agencies such as the State Board of State College Trustees, the Game and Parks Commission, the Liquor Control Commission, the Equal Opportunity Commission and the State Crime Commission. The governor commands the State Patrol and the National Guard. His legislative powers include presenting an annual budget bill and vetoing bills. The governor fills every state bench vacancy and appoints Omaha and Lincoln municipal judges and county election commissioners. The governor is chairman of the State Board of Equalization and Assessment, the State Building Commission and the State Board of Pardons. Salary is $25,000 per year with a four-year term of office.

Programs—What state government program changes do you propose for Nebraska? (Be specific about how you would finance any new programs and about which programs you would eliminate or reduce.)

Highways—How would you propose to meet highway needs?

School Aid—Do you favor or oppose repeal of the state school aid bill LB772? If it is repealed, what alternate proposal for school financing would you propose?

(Explanation of LB772, which is on the General Election ballot, can be found on Page 10 of this guide.)

Pay Increases—Do you favor giving state employees annual cost-of-living pay increases even though that might require an increase in tax rates?

Questions for Lt. Governor

The lieutenant governor elected this year "shall serve on boards and commissions . . . (as) designated by the governor, shall perform such duties as may be delegated him by the governor . . ." The extent of the lieutenant governor's involvement will depend on the governor. If voters reject Amendment No. 1 in the primary, the lieutenant governor will continue to preside over the Legislature. The proposed change would eliminate the lieutenant governor's legislative branch connection. Current salary is $7,500 per year but will increase to $25,000 in January. Term of office is four years.

School Aid—Do you favor or oppose repeal of the state school aid bill LB772? If it is repealed, what alternate proposal for school financing would you propose?

Governor, Lt. Governor Candidates Run as Team

Democrat

J. James Exon, 53, 1615 Brent Blvd., Lincoln, incumbent governor, businessman. Attended UNO. Immediate past chairman Midwestern Governors' Conference, Executive Committee of National Democratic Governors' Conference; member Shrine, Elks; life member, VFW, American Legion, Optimists Episcopal Church.

Programs—State government should continue the business like approach and "Good Life" Nebraskans have experienced. For example, aggressive road building with highway safety, record shattering industrial growth, intense state tourism program and improved agriculture. Nebraska has progressed in education, law enforcement, mental health and retardation facilities while holding line on tax rates.

Highways—I would continue Nebraska's aggressive "pay-as-we-go" highway program and oppose expensive and unnecessary deficit financing proposals. I would press for early resolution of Nebraska's lawsuit demanding full release of our federal highway funds presently impounded by the national administration. I support a balanced rural-urban highway system.

School Aid—Repeal for reasons expressed when I vetoed this unfair tax increase legislation LB772 would unfairly shift the tax load to those with least ability to pay. It is monstrously unfair—some districts receiving a bonanza while others receive none. I recommend fair law that I submitted in this area.

Pay Increases—Yes. We must fairly compensate our state workers. However, the question's presumption of a tax increase is fallacious. I could not foresee a tax increase for this purpose alone. However, if the Legislature continues to Programs—Reorganization and consolidation of existing state agencies along four functional lines of human resources, natural resources, administrative and community affairs would eliminate fragmentation of authority and duplication of effort. New programs should be financed largely by cutting out unproductive and unnecessary programs and making wise use of federal funds.

Highways—Professional criteria should be the basis of the selection of the head of the Roads Dept. Priorities for maintaining primary roads, upgrading secondary roads, locating the North-South Interstate must be assigned according to traffic volume and economic necessity. Highway construction and maintenance can not be based on political expediency.

School Aid—I favor state school aid which would equalize educational quality and provide a redistribution of burdens imposed on property taxes. The drought this year emphasized the necessity for property tax relief so landowners wouldn't be paying taxes on land that lost them money during the year.

Pay Increases—I favor annual cost-of-living increases

Voters Face 3 Amendments

Amendment 1 Regents Issue LB 323

Constitutional amendment to provide for nonvoting student membership on the Board of Regents of the University of Nebraska.

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR this proposal would enlarge the present eight-member elected Board of Regents of the University of Nebraska by adding three University of Nebraska students as nonvoting members, who would be the student body presidents of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, the University of Nebraska at Omaha and the University of Nebraska Medical Center. Their term of office would be for their period of service as student body presidents.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would retain the present Board of Regents of the University of Nebraska consisting of eight elected members.

Arguments FOR

The Board of Regents makes decisions affecting the university community and the student body. Because students 19 or older are legally adults, they should have some representation and input on a board making decisions that affect them daily.

Arguments AGAINST

Special representation for students opens the door to pleas for such representation from all groups in the university community: instructors, administrators, staff. Any student 19 or older could run for election to the office anyway under current law.

School Aid — Oppose.

Pay Increases — Yes.

Highways — By use of revenue bonds.

Michael Neil Fitzpatrick, 27, Weeping Water. Laborer. High school graduate. Disabled veteran, member American Legion. Married.

School Aid — I think LB772 is a step from one regressive tax to two taxes; taxes not equally fair to all. If sales taxes were frozen at today's rate and income tax laws were changed to include all income and close most loopholes, I could really go for LB772.

Pay Increases — Everyone needs a pay increase every year, but not everyone gets one. I don't think state employees should be special. Those employees on the low end of the pay scale need a cost-of-living increase every year, but those who get $20,000 a year could surely get by.

Highways — I don't think added gas taxes are the answer. Maybe a set percentage of all state revenue.

Stoney Whitesell

Larry D. Stoney, 36, 12626 Shirley St., Omaha. Insurance. UNO. Pi Kappa Alpha Vocational Guidance Board. Former Jaycee. Bd. of Deacons Presbyterian Church of the Cross.

School Aid — I oppose repeal. Prior to enactment of LB772, property tax for the '73-74 school year accounted for over 70% of public school revenue. A more equitable means of providing public school revenue is through combination of property, state and local sales and state income taxes.

Pay Increases — Maximum salaries for every job should keep pace with current economic situation. Every employee performing satisfactorily should receive annual increase based on merit even though this may result in increased taxes. I do not believe in blanket cost-of-living increases per se.

Highways — Construction and maintenance of state highways should be funded through a base of gasoline taxes, licensing fees, special vehicle permits and state and federal revenues. Utilization should be a criterion in determining the degree of participation. Because we all benefit directly or indirectly, the expense must be shared.

Carl H. Whitesell, 59, 901 So. 85th St., Omaha. Engineer. B.S. U.S. Military Academy, M.S.C.E. Iowa State. Adviser Economic Development Dept., State Alcoholism Council, vice president Chamber of Commerce, chairman Omaha Alcoholism Council, Omaha Safety Council, president Nebraska Resource Foundation, president Society of Military Engineers, Moles; past president Goodwill, Omaha Symphony Assn. Dundee Presbyterian Church.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772 because of serious flaws in its provisions. School financing must be provided partly by state aid from sales and income taxes. A better formula than that provided in 772 is necessary and provisions must be included which assure property tax reduction.

Pay Increases — State employees must receive equitable salaries even though that may require increased tax rates. Annual automatic pay increases result in ever-increasing budget items over which legislative and executive branches have no control and tend to eliminate periodic reviews of performance and pay of employees by supervisors.

Highways — Highway construction and maintenance must be met by taxes on gas, trucks, vehicle, etc. None of these taxes should be diverted to other uses. I do not favor major tax increases or debt funding for this purpose until inflation is brought under control and a depression is avoided.

Moylan Giblin

Harold T. Moylan, 71, 3862 California, Omaha. Real estate broker. B.A. Creighton U.

School Aid — As the bill is written, I favor repeal. If LB772 would be amended for a more equitable distribution of state funds to all children and taxpayers in the state, I would oppose repeal. I especially want the people to have an opportunity to vote on the bill.

Pay Increases — I favor giving any state employee trying to do a good days work annual cost-of-living pay increases. It is responsibility of department head to determine efficiency of employees.

Highways — By careful review of priorities to make sure we get maximum improvements from funds available.

Richard D. Giblin, 53, 5017 Chicago, Omaha. President Associated Insurance Managers. High school graduate. Member Independent Mutual Insurance Agents Assn.; past member Jaycees, American Legion, VFW, Youth for Christ, Knights of Columbus, Scout Master, Director Operation Lifeline. St. Margaret Mary's Church.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772. It is the greatest subterfuge on unsuspecting people since the Trojan Horse was wheeled into Troy. The tax burden falls on those least able to pay — the wage, earner, elderly, retired and Social Security recipients and the family farmer.

Pay Increases — Yes, if the cost of living warrants it. A public employee cannot live cheaper than an ordinary citizen simply by being a public employee.

Highways — Nebraska has one of the highest gasoline tax rates in the nation. 23% of the present general fund comes from gasoline taxes. There is a limit to the burden. This problem will take considerable study and analysis.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772 as being unfair to the poor, the old, the city dweller and those on fixed income. Alternatively, educational needs could be financed via a lottery or by placing an additional tax on all parimutuel wagering done in the state.

Swigart Dugdale

Pay Increases — I favor cost-of-living increases for state employees even if it results in a tax increase. State employees are dedicated public servants and not slaves. To deny them cost-of-living is to force them not only to work for less but to live on less.

Highways — Additional highway construction, maintenance and repair should be borne directly by the user in proportion to use. A trucking company should pay a greater percentage of cost than the average citizen. This may be accomplished by additional fuel taxes, a tax based on gross vehicle weight, etc.

Warren R. Swigart, 66, 3328 North 58th, Omaha. Real estate. Attended UNL, UNO. 15 years city councilman, vice president Open Door Mission; associated with Salvation Army, Red Cross, National Association of the Physically Handicapped, Benson Commercial Club, Florence Men's Club, North Omaha Commercial Club. Member of Covenant Presbyterian Church.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772. Real estate taxes should be partial support as long as it is legal. I favor a combination of real estate, sales and income tax for the schools.

Pay Increases — It would be unfair to not allow state employees to make a living wage and to keep step with workers everywhere. I am convinced that moderate yearly increases can be made without raising taxes for this purpose. Highways — Be prepared to match every possible dollar obtainable from federal sources. Questions for State Senator

*Designates Incumbent

The State Legislature is comprised of 49 members, called senators who are elected by district for four-year terms. Twenty-four senators will be elected this year. Senators are paid $4,800 a year. The Legislature is the state's supreme body in passing of laws and declaring public policy. All political subdivisions and state administrative agencies gain their missions and authority by delegation from the Legislature. Annually the Legislature determines appropriations. It has the power to impose taxes and raise and lower tax rates. By three-fifths vote of its membership, the Legislature can override a gubernatorial veto. All major appointments made by the governor, except judges, require legislative confirmation. The Legislature meets for 90 days in odd-numbered years and 60 days in even. A four-fifths vote permits any session to be extended indefinitely. During legislative interims, senators participate in studies authorized by the Legislature prior to adjournment. No political-party designation on ballot.

School Aid — Do you favor or oppose repeal of the state school aid bill LB772? If it is repealed, what alternate proposal for school financing would you propose?

Pay Increases — Do you favor giving state employees annual cost-of-living pay increases even though that might require an increase in tax rates?

Highways — How would you propose to meet highway needs?

Nebraska Press Photographers; member Shrine, Boy Scout Council, 33rd degree Scottish Rite Mason. St. Paul United Methodist Church. School Aid — I oppose LB772 and favor continuing present state aid to education until we can develop a formula as fair to urban areas as rural. Property tax carries too much of the tax burden in Omaha and Douglas county. Also, LB772 would increase the sales and income tax.

Pay Increases — I favor state employees being treated the same as those in private business and industry. I also favor getting a dollar's worth of work for that amount of pay from both groups.

Highways — Favor the present pay-as-we-go system and not place a financial burden on the next generation.

School Aid — I oppose repeal of LB772 because the students would not enjoy comparable education regardless of birthplace if it is repealed. The legislature would reflect the vote of the public in future financing of public education. If it is repealed, the state will continue financing schools through property tax.

Pay Increases — Because Nebraska state and local governmental employees as of 1973 received the lowest of all 50 states in average monthly earnings, I certainly would favor giving state employees annual cost-of-living pay increases.

Highways — Due to rapidly rising costs of highway materials and construction, Legislature will either have to increase annual appropriations to highway department based upon needs or resume selling bonds to satisfy needs of agri-business and other economies.

Hess Dyas, 38, 1688 Otoe, Lincoln. Past teacher. B.A. NWU. Past state chairman Democratic party, Democratic Midwest Conference. Unitarian Church.

Health Care — We need a national health insurance program with comprehensive benefits, including catastrophic coverage, increased health planning and health maintenance organizations and programs, improved rural health care with incentives to attract doctors, to train more physicians, and to expand "physician extenders" who can perform some medical services.

Priorities — Top priority is stopping inflation. Inflation and shortages stem from a government without adequate information and planning. Protect the family farm against nonfarm corporations. Stem the move to cities by emphasizing farm stability and rural development. Establish Congress as an equal partner in government.

Dyas

Thone

Campaign Financing — Requirement of complete disclosure of personal finances and interests of candidates. More limitations to make sure elections are won not bought. More broad-based financing at the federal level through limited public financing in some matching arrangement with small, individual contributions.

Republican

Charles Thone, 50, 1531 Longworth Building, Washington, D.C. Attorney. B.A., J.D. NU. Past chairman Lincoln Human Rights Commission, Republican State chairman, deputy secretary of state, assistant state and U.S. attorney general, senatorial assistant. Member VFW, Elks, historical society, governor Neihardt Foundation, past president Jaycees, PTA, NU Alumni Assn.

Health Care — I favor a national program of insurance to pay the costs of catastrophic illnesses and disabilities. I favor insurance standards for medical care. Those employed would have at least this minimum insurance paid for by employer and employee. Federal funds would pay premiums for those who cannot work.

Priorities — Most of the work of the 93rd Congress remains to be done. Priorities for the 94th Congress convening in January, 1975, will depend on what this Congress accomplishes and fails to do. Fighting inflation will certainly be one of my principal goals. It is cruelest upon the aged.

Campaign Financing — I sponsored a bill in August concerning financing. It passed in the House but without some original points. The original bill called for a commission to supervise congressional elections, federal matching of small contributions up to a limit and regulation of donation of services as well as cash contributions.

amount a recipient must pay before receiving help from $70 to $300. This must be remedied. Private health insurance covers only 25% of consumer's medical bills. Government and the insurance industry must solve this.

Priorities — We must stop inflation, and increase real purchasing power. The condition amounts to a national emergency. We must also assure America of low-cost energy, both for home and industry. To do so, we must break our dependence on the petroleum cartels by developing practical, space-age energy sources.

Dundee Presbyterian Church.

Health Care — Plans should reserve privacy of physician-patient relationship; rely on private sector rather than government where possible; emphasize proposals to solve problems of unequal distribution of health care facilities; with federal budget deficits making inflation more devastating every day, primary attention must be given to keeping costs reasonable.

Priorities — Tax reform — to simplify the law, eliminate tax avoidance, end discrimination. Congressional reform — to re-establish public confidence the Congress needs to re-organize the committee system, reduce the power of committee chairmen, provide for better legislative oversight of government agencies. Overhaul federal agencies, anti-trust policy and tax policy.

Campaign Financing — Independent administration and enforcement agency to assure vigorous and judicious law enforcement. Limitations on contributions to avoid suspicion of "bought" candidates. Limitations on expenditures to give challengers a fair chance to beat incumbents and too eliminate high-spending races. $50 limit on cash contributions. Stringent regulation or restriction of special interest contributions.

ESU Board, American Legion, Community Action Agency Board, Bathphage Mission Board; past chairman Bicentennial Commission, past state senator. Trinity Lutheran Church.

Health Care — No family should be ruined financially by high medical and hospital costs. Both Kennedy and Nixon plans, however, are too expensive at this time. My inclination in the field of health care would be to assist families faced with a financial catastrophe, based on a correlation to need.

Priorities — Balance federal budget to halt inflation. Develop agricultural policies that will not force farmers to bear financial burden for federal government mismanagement of economy. Reduce bureaucracy that has become the trademark of federal government. Restore public confidence in both the institutions of the presidency and Congress.

Campaign Financing — Abuses in campaign contribution and spending have contributed to government corruption. I support stricter reporting laws so the public knows the amount and donor of each contribution. Current spending limits for congressional races should be retained or tightened. I do not support public financing of campaigns.

Health Care — Any government health care program should preserve the relationship between doctor and patient; rely extensively on private insurers; provide for a contribution by recipients except in case of clearly demonstrated inability to pay; include special provisions for catastrophic illness; and make maximum use of skills and facilities already available.

Priorities — A carefully thought-out foreign policy to build world peace. Decrease in regulation by the federal government. Unnecessary regulations result in inefficiencies, disruption of the market, higher costs and loss of freedom. Reduction of government spending to control inflation. Solution of transportation problems to insure dependability, adequate service to rural areas.

Campaign Financing — Large, including "inkind," contributions should not be allowed from labor unions, corporations any organizations or individual. Individual contributions in moderate amounts should be encouraged. Government policies should not be so restrictive as to discourage contributions. I oppose public financing of political campaigns.

noon on the first Tuesday in January.

Arguments FOR

Every few years, the first Tuesday is New Year's Day, a holiday. Opening the Legislature on this day forces legislators and staff to work on a holiday and also hampers any significant accomplishments on that day, wasting one of the days to which the Legislature is limited each year.

Arguments AGAINST

Legislators are elected to tackle the job of necessary revision of state laws without regard to imposition on time. Lawmaking is not a "9 to 5" job. Too, a Jan. 1 Legislative meeting occurs so seldom it isn't worth amending the Constitution.

Amendment 3 Governor Approval LB 1034

Constitutional amendment to delete as obsolete language referring to submission by the two-house Legislature of certain orders, resolutions or votes by the Legislature to the Governor.

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR this proposal would remove language requiring every order, resolution or vote of the Legislature be presented to the Governor for his approval or disapproval, but would retain the provision that every bill passed by the Legislature be presented to the Governor for his approval or disapproval.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would retain the provision for presenting to the governor for his approval or disapproval every order, resolution or vote, in addition to every bill passed by the Legislature.

Arguments FOR

Current Constitutional language is vague, and there is a question as to whether the governor has a valid say on legislative resolutions and other actions outside of legislation. A vote for would eliminate some paper-work and unnecessary communications with the executive branch.

Arguments AGAINST

The executive and legislative branches of government act as a check on each other. The governor and his office should remain officially informed on all actions by the Unicameral. Even if the governor doesn't have veto power on certain resolutions, he should know of them for purposes of public discussion.

nia's Supreme Court found local property taxes plus state "equalization" funds failed to provide equal educational opportunities. Adequate state aid seems inevitable. Minor adjustments may be made in LB772.

Pay Increases — It might be cheaper to provide cost-of-living pay raises to state employees rather than pay the cost of training persons willing to work for lower salaries than those offered by companies having cost-of-living provisions.

Highways — Keeping qualified persons in top jobs in the department is key to meeting highway needs. Competitive salaries would stop current costly, excessive turnover in these areas.

Fitzgerald

Tom Fitzgerald, 53, 8104 No. Ridge Dr., Omaha. Mailman.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772. While I favor providing greater state funding for education, I am opposed to this bill's present formula and the burden it places on low and middle income taxpayers. I favor a bill that emphasizes equalization among rich and poor school districts so quality education will be available to all.

Pay Increases — State salaries have too long been a political football. I favor fair pay for all employees. Legislators must be mindful of the tremendous increases in the cost of living when funding salaries.

Highways — Inflation and the energy crisis have hit highway construction and maintenance costs hard. Solutions are not easy, and many possibilities must be explored. Priorities must be set, withheld federal funds sought and alternative funding studied. Our present pay-as-you-go may have to be re-examined.

Pay Increases — Yes. A retirement program with a fixed amount could lead to disaster for the employee. The scale should be geared to go down as well as up. With the increase in interest, the increase in taxes would be minimal.

Highway — Since the federal government has withheld funds from Nebraska, we have two choices: To limit construction or increase maintenance. I have reservations about a gas tax increase. When a tax increases, it seems to mushroom into many other areas where taxes also must be increased.

I favor holding governmental expenses. I offer my record as former teacher, school board member and legislative experience to help solve problems.

Pay Increases — Pay increases when economic analysts are predicting a recession or depression is not the time for consideration of state employee's annual cost-of-living pay increases. Those fortunate to be employed while unemployment is increasing are also interested in reduction of the inflation spiral.

Highways — I favor "pay as you go" in road building and School Aid — I neither favor nor oppose repeal of LB772. The source of school funding is up to the public to decide. There are advantages and disadvantages to both positions. If it is repealed, I favor 50% funding of the old 448 statute.

Pay Increases — Annual cost-of-living pay increases should not cause a tax increase. We must review this item yearly when we have the economic growth figures. If the economic picture continues as it is now, we will still be able to recognize the cost of living for state employees.

Highways — I propose we continue to fund highway needs on a pay-as-you-go basis. I will not vote to increase the gas tax to build new roads.

Gerald J. Harrington, 35, 4856 Robin Hill Dr., Omaha. Attorney. Creighton U. St. Thomas More Holy Name Society.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772. As an alternative, I favor a proposal to increase the permissible allocation from the assessed mill levy for school financing, either construction or operations.

Pay Increases — Yes.

Highways — I would hope to solve one area of this problem by pushing mass transit in highly developed urban areas.

St. Bonaventures Parish.

School Aid — LB772 is history for the Legislature. It is up to the voters. If LB772 is repealed, the Legislature will have to find broadened methods of school financing. Opponents of LB772 are not opposed to the broadened tax base but ask questions about apportioning and who determines the amount.

Pay Increases — I oppose automatic pay raises. Many state employees are underpaid and some are overpaid. A merit system should be implemented whereby productivity is rewarded.

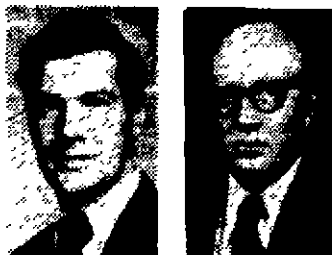

Highways — Our present system of financing highways is not adequate. I question how we arrive at our priorities. Good roads are imperative to our agricultural economy. Any curtailment of farm-to-market commerce weakens our economy. Priorities are often based on population rather than overall economic needs.

Ken J. Torczon, 49, Columbus. Farmer, livestock producer. Graduate UNL. Past director State Office of Planning and Programming, State and Urban Affairs Division, adviser National Governors' Conference agricultural committee, member state Comprehensive Health Planning Committee and State Crime Commission. St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

School Aid — I oppose repeal of state school aid bill. Through use of revenue generated largely by sales and income taxes, LB772 lightens the inordinate burden property owners bear for public education. It provides more equitable educational opportunities for all Nebraska students.

Pay Increases — State employees should receive increases to match Nebraska living cost hikes. However, such increases should not exceed wage increases for similar positions in Nebraska's private sector. If state salaries are allowed to lag, greater job turn-over will hurt efficiency and be false economy.

Highways — Closer scrutiny of maintenance, engineering costs, highway widening and right-of-way proposals and departmental buildings construction may yield some highway dollars. If additional revenue is needed, I favor a set increase in the gasoline tax.

Walter H. Epke, 57, York. Owner livestock auction market, farmer and livestock feeder. Member York County Veterans Service Committee, Member American Legion, York Country Club, V.F.W. Methodist.

School Aid — I oppose repeal of LB772. If the bill doesn't fit needs of everyone, we have opportunity to make changes. I wouldn't offer any alternate proposal now.

Pay Increases — Yes.

Highways — I would favor issuing bonds. Also a reasonable increase in gas tax.

Barnett

Kubert

Wallace M. (Wally) Barnett, 43, 6201 Francis, Lincoln. Salesman. Attended NU. Member Mayor's Drug Committee, Lincoln Alcohol and Drug Committee, Lincoln Lancaster Corp. Drug Project, Sertomas. First United Methodist Church.

School Aid — I favor LB772. There are several proposals, and the Legislature has been struggling for six or seven years for a solution. The majority of the people I talk to want property tax relief. LB772 would give this relief and would solve the school support problems.

Pay Increases — I have always supported state employee cost-of-living pay increases. Sometimes I was in the minority, but I have always felt the working man or woman should be able to keep up with the rising cost of living.

Highways — Push for funds the federal government is holding. With the release of these funds, we could get on with highway construction. Too many times the federal government withholds funds from states until certain criteria have been met. Nebraska should take it to the courts. I do not favor increasing gas tax.

Lawrence James Kubert, 31, 7201 Orchard, Lincoln. Builder, real estate salesman. St. John's Catholic Church.

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772. I favor state aid to schools. But the issue is who pays the increased state taxes? Under present bill, low and middle class families are going to pay more while large land owners and businessmen pay less. The Legislature should pass a school aid bill.

Pay Increases — Yes. Cost-of-living increases are necessary to maintain living standards. However, a successful all-out effort to control or stop inflation would eliminate the need for a cost-of-living increase.

Highways — I have no alternative to present plans.

Layman League; past president Cancer Society, past president Gateway Sertoma, vice president Jaycees.

School Aid — If it is repealed, guidelines already established by the U.S. Supreme Court might compel complete funding for schools by the state which might completely change local school control. Alternative is a return to the costly and archaic 100% district property tax levy which I believe will be held unconstitutional.

Pay Increases — Yes.

Highways — Because of spiraling inflation, we must meet needs either with federal allocations as yet unreceived, increased gasoline tax operators' license fees, etc., or we should utilize the bond method approved by voters and earmark any increased gas tax for repayment of such bonds.

Marge Schlitz, 40, 2600 C St., Lincoln. Homemaker. B.A. Bates College, graduate work NU. Board member Near South Neighborhood Assn., Homestead Girl Scout Council, chairperson Wilderness Park Committee, member Bluestem Group, Sierra Club, League of Women Voters, Common Cause; past volunteer Nebraskans for Peace; Lincoln Friends Meeting.

School Aid — State aid is needed. I hope LB772 is not repealed by voters. If it is, the next Legislative session should work to find an alternative to aid our schools acceptable to voters.

Pay Increases — Most state employees are paid little enough — they certainly deserve annual cost-of-living pay increases. A pay scale more in line with the private sector would reduce turnover and improve efficiency.

Highways — New and improved highways which benefit the State and its citizens should be financed out of general revenue funds if adequate funds are not raised from current gasoline tax.

School Aid — The property tax burden needs lightening. LB772 relieves property tax and shifts burden to income tax. This is acceptable if it brings a property tax reduction and income taxes are not disproportionate. Alternative is an option of income or sales tax availability to schools with limitations.

Pay Increases — The state loses qualified personnel due to competitive salaries offered by private industry. If government is to operate efficiently, it needs trained personnel. Constant turnover hampers government and is costly. Qualified personnel can keep costs down.

Four Seek County Board Posts

Questions for County Board

*Designates Incumbent

Two of three County Commission or County Board posts are up for election. Only residents of the Second Commission District, roughly southeast Lancaster County and Lincoln, and the Third Commission District, roughly west Lincoln and southwest Lancaster County, will vote in the primary. All county residents will vote in the general election. The County Board administers the county's property, finances, claims, budget, zoning, licenses, sets levies and sits as a board of equalization and welfare board. The commissioner's salary is $10,500 a year.

Pay Increases—Do you favor giving county employees annual cost-of-living pay increases even though that might require an increase in tax rates?

Changes—What changes in county government would you propose to meet present-day needs?

District Two Vote for ONE Democrat

Ralph Harlan, 73, Hickman Farmer, stock raiser, builder. Graduate NU. Past county commissioner. Member Kiwanis, Masons, Scottish Rite, Shrine, past director Chamber of Commerce, member Agribusiness Club, county health board, County Officials Assn., health planning councils. Presbyterian.

Pay Increases — County workers should be paid a living wage with consideration given to type of work and performance. Any increase should be on the same basis.

Changes — Changes to meet "present-day needs" could cause chaos. Relinquishment of authority, as has happened in our national government, can be wrong. Honesty, openness and sincere consideration of the needs will cause desirable change. Commissioners must assume responsibilities and not relinquish them to others not responsible to the voters.

Board, Region II Crime Commission. Footprinters Assn.

Pay Increases — County employees should be treated like other employees. But I oppose a percentage increase. A more equitable method is needed so the lowest paid employee gets the same cost-of-living increase as the highest paid. This would not necessarily mean a tax increase.

Changes — Much has been done to improve and modernize county government. The new personnel system, county-city purchasing, various committees and boards and citizen participation has and will continue to increase services and save tax dollars. I plan to continue to work for more efficient government to eliminate unnecessary spending.

District Three Vote for ONE Democrat

H. Bruce Hamilton, 32, 1126 D St., Lincoln. Attorney. B.S., J.D., NU. Former editor-in-chief Nebraska Law Review, former director of the Legal Aid Society of Lincoln, former Peace Corps Volunteer in Ethiopia, member of the county Goals and Policies Committee. Unitarian Church.

Pay Increases — Yes. Paying county employees inadequate wages is hardly the way to reduce taxes. Such pay increases represent only a small portion of the county budget. I will work for increased efficiency in county government and careful expenditure of Revenue Sharing Funds, so employees are treated fairly without increasing taxes.

Changes — I support recommendations of the Arthur D. Little Report for modernizing county government and eliminating duplication and inefficiency. Present county government is archaic, fractionalized. New, honest, enthusiastic leadership is needed to meet modern-day challenges. The tools are a blend of persuasion, legislation and determination.

Pay Increases — The retention of key, trained county employees is essential to efficient county government in today's competitive labor market. I favor fair salary adjustments that do not ignore general economic conditions. Our expanding tax base has made adjustments in tax rates minimal in recent years and should continue this way.

Changes — Expanded use of computer, data processing and machine records in cooperation with city government. Expansion of human services to meet needs of needy sick, aged, infirmed and drug addicts. City-county joint and common planning, building inspection, zoning, emergency, fire, law enforcement, flood control, roads, engineering and purchasing

Lincoln Residents to Decide 4 City Charter Amendments

Revenue Bonds Amendment

Shall Article XI, Section 44 (3) of the Charter of the City of Lincoln, relating to revenue bonds, be amended to provide that revenue bonds shall be sold for such price, and bear interest at such rate or rates payable at such time or times within or without the state as shall be determined by the City Council?"

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR this proposal would abolish the current City Charter-imposed 7% interest ceiling on revenue bonds. Instead of the interest ceiling, the rate or rates to be paid on revenue bonds would be set by the City Council at the time the bonds are issued.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would maintain the current 7% interest ceiling on revenue bonds.

Arguments FOR

Revenue bonds are issued by the city to finance the construction of revenue-producing projects such as capital improvements to the Lincoln Electric System and sewer and water districts. Revenue bonds were issued to pay for construction of the state office building and have been proposed as the financing method for the Centrum project in downtown Lincoln. The bonds are retired with money from the revenue collected from the projects constructed. Passage of this proposal will allow the construction of such projects without delay due to inability to issue bonds at current market interest rates which are at or over the 7% mark.

Arguments AGAINST

Removal of the City Charter-imposed interest ceiling will also remove an accompanying fiscal restraint on the City Council and would, in effect, give the local lawmakers a free hand in issuing revenue bonds at whatever interest rate they choose.

Mayor's Salary Amendment

Shall Article IV, Section 7 of the Charter of the City of Lincoln, relating to compensation, be amended to provide that the annual salary of the Mayor for each term of office shall be established by resolution of the City Council adopted not later than the first day of January immediately preceding the beginning of a new mayoral term of office, all as proposed in the notice of election?"

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR this proposal would set up a new procedure for setting the mayor's annual salary. Under the new procedure, the mayor's salary would be set by the City Council no later than Jan. 1 preceding the beginning of each term of office. That rate of pay, as established under this proposal, would remain the same throughout the four-year mayoral term.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would maintain the current procedure under which the mayor's salary is set by the City Council but with the restriction that the mayor must be the highest paid city government department head. Also, under the current procedure, the Council can change the mayor's salary at any time, including in the middle of a term of office.

Arguments FOR

The current City Charter stipulation that the mayor be the highest paid department head in city government has led to difficulties in giving pay raises to other officials. In practice, it has caused the salaries of several department chiefs to become bunched up at a level just below that of the mayor. Passage of this proposal would remove the requirement that the mayor be the highest paid department head and would thus make it easier from a budgetary standpoint to give raises to other officials.

Arguments AGAINST

When Lincoln voters adopted the so-called strong-mayor form of city government it was thought one way to assure that the mayor maintained his status as the strong administrative leader of city hall would be to mandate the highest paid city department head. Abolishing that restriction may have the effect of eroding the mayor's administrative strength. In addition, under the new procedure, the mayor's salary would remain the same throughout each term of office. Currently, the mayor, like all other city employees, is eligible — at the discretion of the City Council — for periodic pay raises.

Assessment Bonds

Amendment

Shall Article VIII, Section

10a, of the Charter of the City of Lincoln, relating to the special assessment revolving fund be amended to provide that special assessment revolving fund bonds shall bear interest at such annual rate or rates as shall be established by the City Council, all as proposed in the notice of election?

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR this proposal would allow the city to pay interest on special assessment bonds at a rate established by the City Council at the time the bonds are issued. No maximum limit would be set on the interest rate or rates which could be established by the Council.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would maintain the current 6% interest ceiling on special assessment bonds.

Arguments FOR

Special assessment bonds are issued by the city to pay for such things as paving, water, sewer or ornamental lighting projects. At the current charter-imposed 6% interest ceiling, the city finds it difficult to issue bonds because an inflation-plagued economy has pushed interest rates on the open market to levels sometimes above the 6% mark. Passage of this amendment will allow the construction of such projects without delay due to inability to issue bonds at current interest rates.

Arguments AGAINST

Removal of the City Charter-imposed interest ceiling will also remove an accompanying fiscal restraint on the City Council and would, in effect, give the local lawmakers a free hand in issuing special assessment bonds at whatever interest rate they choose.

Installments Amendment

Shall Article VII, Section 22 of the Charter of the City of Lincoln, relating to special assessments and the interest rate on unpaid special assessment installments be amended to provide that the City Council shall at the time of levying special assessments fix the rate of interest charge per annum to be paid on unpaid special assessment installments which are not delinquent and to further provide that unpaid special assessment installments which are delinquent shall bear interest at the same annual rate as that established by law for delinquent general real property taxes, all as proposed in the notice of election?

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR this proposal would abolish the current special assessment installment interest rates of 6% on non-delinquent payments and 7% on delinquent payments. Instead, the interest rate on special assessment installments would be set by the City Council at the time the assessments are levied. Interest rates on delinquent installments would be adjusted to coincide with the rate charged according to state law against delinquent property taxes.

That rate is currently 9% per year.

A vote AGAINST this proposal would maintain the current charter-imposed interest ceilings of 6% on non-delinquent, unpaid special assessment installments and 7% on delinquent special assessment installments.

Arguments FOR

The current 6% and 7% interest rates on unpaid installments and delinquent installments respectively are considered low when viewed in context of the current inflation-tightened money market. Because they are low, a property owner has no incentive to pay his special assessment installments. On today's money market the 7% interest rate almost encourages delinquencies because people can put off paying their special assessment installments and earn more in interest by investing their money elsewhere. (The special assessments are levied against persons who own property which will benefit in some way from the construction of projects such as paving, water, sewer or lighting. The money collected in the form of these special assessments then goes to retire the special assessment bonds issued by the city to finance the construction.)

Arguments AGAINST

Removal of the City Charter-imposed interest ceiling on unpaid special assessments will also remove an accompanying fiscal restraint on the City Council. Linking the interest rate on the delinquent special assessment installments to the rate charged according to state law will, in effect, be giving up one area of city control to the higher level of government.

Lancaster County Officials

*Designates Incumbent

County surveyor is elected on a political ballot to serve a four-year term. The surveyor also serves as ex officio county engineer and county highway superintendent. The office holder must be either a registered land surveyor or a registered engineer, as well as a certified county highway superintendent. The surveyor prepares plats, subdivides farm lands and stakes out lots. As engineer, the office holder prepares plans and specifications for use in advertising and letting contracts for road and bridge work. As highway superintendent, the office holder supervises construction and maintenance of roads, bridges and culverts and prepares road plans. Salary is $21,300.

County clerk is elected on a political ballot to serve four years. Primary functions of the office include certification of motor vehicle titles, maintenance of official county records and recording of county board actions. The clerk also computes the tax mill levy for the county and other governmental units such as school districts and watershed districts. In addition, the clerk prepares the county's proposed budget on the basis of requests submitted by each office. The clerk maintains a list of doctors, dentists, nurses, therapists and veterinarians practicing in the county and issues licenses. Salary is $16,700.

County treasurer is elected on a political ballot for a four-year term. The office is responsible for the collection of all taxes, both personal and real estate, for every governmental unit in the county; inheritance taxes; and other taxes which the state receives. The county treasurer sees that the taxes are disbursed. The office issues automobile licenses and collects taxes on them. Salary is $16,700.

County attorney is elected on political ballot for a four-year term. As legal counsel for the county, the office holder must be an attorney admitted to the bar by the Supreme Court of Nebraska. The county attorney investigates, verifies and files the proper complaints against persons suspected of felonies or misdemeanors. The office also prosecutes all violations. He advises the county board and other county offices, and prosecutes or defends any civil action against or by the county. Salary is $27,300.

County sheriff is elected on a political ballot to serve a four-year term. The duties of the sheriff's office include the protection of life and property; the prevention, discovery and investigation of crime; the preservation of law and order, an enforcement of laws and traffic regulations. The sheriff also handles the collection of delinquent taxes and mortgage foreclosures, as well as serves subpoenas and writs. Salary is $18,400.

County register of deeds is elected for a four-year term. The office holder maintains the county's real estate records, including mortgages, mechanic liens, state and federal tax liens and records of special assessment districts. The office also processes microfilm for other county offices. Salary is $16,700.

Clerk of District Court is elected for a four-year term. The clerk is responsible for the court's clerical work, permanent court records, filing cases, preparing of dockets and papers, handling money and disbursements and the issuance of legal papers. Salary is $16,700.

County Assessor is elected on a political ballot for a four-year term. The assessor's basic responsibilities include the assessment, valuation, and taxation of property under the ad valorem tax system. The office also maintains records concerning the property and computes rates. In addition, the office prepares motor vehicle tax statements information regarding homestead and veterans exemptions. Salary is $18,400.

Highways. — Examination of priorities and realistic highway planning are two steps toward meeting highway needs. Funding "just to get by" is no solution to our highway needs. Failure to consider long-term needs of our highway system results in half planning and added costs. Funding from various tax sources should be examined and outside funding used fully.

George B. (Bill) Burrows, 44, Adams. Farmer. Attended NWU, graduate NU. Adviser Public Welfare and Public Institutions. Past president Lions, member Nebr. Farm Council and Gage FFA County committee.

School Aid — Give relief to property taxpayers. The income tax is a fairer revenue source than sales tax, which takes more from the poor than the rich. State income tax has loopholes. The state should look at high incomes, which escape federal taxes as a source of revenue.

Pay Increases — I favor giving cost-of-living pay increases to all low and moderate income state employees.

Highways — I propose we continue and accelerate the present programs. The Legislature may need to join the battle for impounded federal funds.

32nd District

Maresh

Plessman

Richard Maresh, 58, Milligan. Farmer. Attended UNL. Past member school board, county ASC chairman. VFW, Member American Legion, Grange, Livestock Feeders Assn., Nebr. Soy Bean Assn., Nebr. Assn. of Farmer-Elected Committeemen; past chairman CROP Drive. Methodist Church.

School Aid — I cannot support a bill that reduced average mill levy of high schools districts I represent from 32.60 mills to 27.70 mills, or 15%. The bill was sold on presumption it would reduce taxes by 50% average statewide. I will support a more equitable formula.

Pay Increases — I have supported annual cost-of-living pay increases in the past. We see a drop in farm economy due to falling livestock prices, poor crops and inflation. We will need to know how this will effect the state's tax revenue before we can allocate funds.

Highways — The Transportation Advisory Committee has been conducting hearings on coping with the problems of road building brought on by inflation. It will report to Legislature Dec. 4. I am sure that can be worked out.

George Paul Plessman, Crete. Farmer. Attended Doane College. Former mayor, city councilman. Former president Chamber of Commerce; Jaycees. Past district sales manager, Crete Mills. Bethlehem Lutheran.

School Aid — I favor LB772. It is a beginning at equalizing the tax base. This should be especially noticeable this year when the drouth has made so much land unproductive.

Pay Increases — Cost-of-living pay increases must be met to retain high caliber employees. Job reviews should be made periodically so time and money are not wasted on useless positions.

Highways — While I do not favor big tax increases, at this time it takes taxation to meet highway needs. In the future, a vote by the people for a lottery system might relieve costs.

34th District

Vote for ONE

Kremer

Maurice A. Kremer, 67, Aurora. Farmer. Attended NU. Past member school board member Chamber of Commerce, vice president Mid-west Broadcast. Pleasant View Church.

School Aid — I favor repeal in its present form. Schools in my district do not receive a fair share of available funds. I support the levy of a sales and or income tax on a local basis used locally. This would relieve burdensome property taxes.

Pay Increases — Yes. However, inflation must be terminated. All of us will need to make sacrifices.

Highways — I have always believed highways should be built and maintained by a user tax. Vehicles using roads would be taxed as well as the fuels they consume. The present long-term planning should be continued and taxes levied to meet these plans. Appropriations from the general fund could be justified, too.

36th District

Ron Cope, 63, Kearney. Businessman, farm operator. Member Executive Committee Central Platte Natural Resources District, chairman Tri-City Coordinating Council, chairman Kearney City Planning Commission; Past Executive Vice President Kearney State College Foundation; member National Advisory Committee for Small Business Administration, Knights of Columbus, Elks, Kearney Livestock Feeders Assn. St. James Church.

School Aid — We need school aid legislation. It is very possible LB772 can be improved. I welcome the opportunity to hear alternate proposals and may offer one after more study.

Pay Increases — I favor a standard cost-of-living pay increase for state employees, providing a decrease is made if the cost of living declines.

Highways — Now that I-80 is completed, the State Roads Dept. should put special emphasis on a north-south corridor and secondary and farm-to-market roads.

Jack Cary, 53, Kearney. Cattleman, farmer. Washington and Lee graduate, attended New Mexico U. law school. Past county and state chairman of CART. Member American Legion, AFW, Rotary, National Cattleman's Assn., Nebr. Stockgrowers, Elks. Presbyterian.

School Aid — I am against repeal of LB772. Nebraskans must realize a greater portion of education costs has to be carried by sales and income tax. The property owner has all the taxes he can afford. School financing will have to come from state sales and income taxes.

Pay Increases — State employees should be treated like their counterparts in private business. If labor has their pay increased, state employees should have theirs increased also.

Highways — Highway priorities have been established which should be followed. However, the state needs mass transit for heavily traveled areas. This includes the Platte Valley which does not have Amtrak service from Chicago to Omaha to the West Coast. Better bus service is needed.

38th District

Lewis

Pettitjean

Richard Lewis, 62, Holbrook. Farming, livestock. Attended Kearney State. Past school board member. Member Nebraska Stock Growers Assn., former chairman Nebraska Wheat Com., adviser Farmers Home Administration, local A.S.C. Committee.

School Aid: Oppose. Pay Increases — Yes. Highways — Would not move hastily until we get some reading on state's economy.

Keith Wayne Pettitjean, Clay Center. Teacher. B.S. Kearney State College, M.S. Arizona State; Taught at technical colleges, high schools; U.S. Marine Corp 1942-45; Past president Clay Center Teacher Assn., chairman Clay Center Teachers Association Welfare Committee.

School Aid — I favor LB772. If this bill is repealed, there is no hope of the Legislature taking any other action for several years. LB772 is not the ideal bill. It does not get to the heart of the problem. If it is defeated, our school will deteriorate.

Pay Increases — I favor such raises. Highways — If highways need more money, gasoline tax should be increased.

40th District

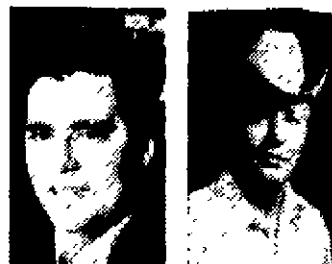

Vote for ONE

John DeCamp, 33, Neligh. Attorney, real estate developer. Graduate NU, NU Law School.

School Aid — I violently oppose repeal. If it is repealed and if I am re-elected, I will use all my ability to insure a comprehensive state aid program is put into law and made operational.

Pay Increases — When you pay "peanuts," you get that kind of work. Better to cut in half the number of state employees and pay them one and one half or two times more than to keep the present number of underpaid, dissatisfied employees. Adequate pay could be given without tax increases.

Highways — 1970-73 highway needs were not met. Solving the inefficiency and incompetence of the past four years in the highway program will cost money. If the administration is not made to meet this highway disaster it has created, it can expect cowpaths for most of our roads.

DeCamp

Schaffer

Larry D. Schaffer, 46, O'Neill. Rancher. Attended NU. Adviser technical college. Member Masons, Shrine, Nebr. Stock Growers Assn.; past chairman Boy Scouts, American National Cattleman Assn., member American Quarter Horse Assn. Presbyterian Church.

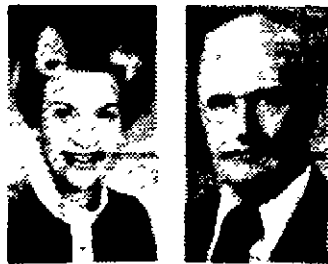

School Aid — I favor repeal of LB772. Its distribution is unfair. A proposal that would interest me would have to include every school-age child in Nebraska — distribution with no strings attached by the state. Tax equalization secondary rather than primary.

Pay Increases — Cost-of-living pay increases are necessary for any employee, but they must be monitored and kept in line. If they required increased tax rates, it would be necessary to provide them.

Highways — Our entire highway system needs revamped — from planning priorities to engineering to completion. Funding would be secondary.

Vote for ONE

Orr

Rumery

Lorraine Orr, North Platte. Homemaker, former bookkeeper. Former State Republican chairman, regional director presidential committee. Area chairman Red Cross March of Dimes, member PTA, Community Playhouse Guild, Chamber of Commerce. Presbyterian Church.

School Aid — Property tax is a burden to fixed-income and low-income property owners and to owners with large families. To meet rising education costs, some means of support other than property tax is needed. That is state aid to education. I oppose repeal of LB772.

Pay Increases — The taxpayers have had all the tax raises they can pay. But the state employees must have adequate wages to meet rising living costs. This is a question where more information on present salaries is needed to answer honestly.

Questions for State Senator

*Designates Incumbent

School Aid—Do you favor or oppose repeal of the state school aid bill LB772? If it is repealed, what alternate proposal for school financing would you propose?

Pay Increases—Do you favor giving state employees annual cost-of-living pay increases even though that might require an increase in tax rates?

Highways — How would you propose to meet highway needs?

Highways — Raising the present tax, fixed percentage sales tax and highway revenue bonds. The favored is a gas tax raise. But it leaves the Highway Commission without funds to match federal money. However, gas tax raise might be the answer.

Myron G. A. Rumery, 68, North Platte. Retired NU station staff. Attended Grand Island College, NU. Member Chamber of Commerce, Oddfellows, vice president Baptist Men of Central U.S.A., American Society of Animal Science, American Dairy Science Assn., Nebraska Academy of Science; past president Rotary.

School Aid — I favor the repeal of LB772. I favor the concept grating relief in payment of real estate taxes. I understand this bill does not insure this. Other tax sources are available — corporations, sales and income.

Pay Increase — I favor giving state employees annual cost-of-living pay increases. I would hope the money could be raised by economic growth and making substantial savings in the departments. Efficiency should be constantly studied.

Highways — By continued use of money from fuel taxes.

Pay Increases — No Reply. Highways — No Reply.

Simpson

Harold J. Simpson, 48, 1805 No. 30th, Lincoln. Warehouseman. Member Serfoma, Woodmen of World, Moose Lodge, Executive Board Nebraska State AFL-CIO; commissioner and umpire Nebraska Softball Assn. Epworth United Methodist Church.

School Aid — I oppose repeal of LB772. It has just become law and needs a chance to succeed or fail. The present $55 million in school aid gives some property tax relief. Additional aid would give more relief. It would bring about quality education in all school districts, too.

Pay Increases — I definitely favor state employee pay increases reflecting the cost of living plus productivity. I agree to increasing tax rates if necessary for employee wages. Any economy in this area should be by scrutinizing present personnel and eliminating those who are not doing the job.

Highways — Construction costs are rising and maintenance and highway programs are falling behind. I propose raising the gas tax and considering using bonds authorized by the people for immediate construction. Inflation is rising faster than interest rates. Bonds end up cheaper than a pay-as-you-go policy.

48th District

Vote for ONE

William E. Nichol, 56, Scottsbluff. Credit bureau owner. Attended NWU. County commissioner; past city councilman, mayor. Member Rotary, Elks. First United Methodist Church.

School Aid — I favor LB772. People do not like property taxes paying for government. They like more equitable sales and income taxes. If LB772 fails, the property tax burden remains. There would be an attempt to say schools are the responsibility of the state and, thus, loss of control.

Pay increases — I favor basing

Bill to Change State Aid To Schools Up To Voters

School Aid Referendum LB772

Shall Legislative Bill No. 772 enacted by the 83rd Legislature of the State of Nebraska in its Second Session, the purpose of which is to adopt the Public School Support Act of 1974, to change the basis for determining the non-resident high school tuition rate, and to provide for increased financial support from the State to the public schools of the State of Nebraska, be retained?

☐ For ☐ Against

Explanation

A vote FOR will provide increased financial support from the state to the public schools of Nebraska.

A vote AGAINST will retain the present basis of determining financial support from the state to the public schools.

Arguments FOR

Constitutionally, public education is a state responsibility. Because of different concentrations of students and taxable wealth in real and personal property, equal educational opportunity is impossible without some tax base other than property.

Increasing state aid from the present average of 15% of school district operating costs to almost 50%, as LB772 prescribes, makes equal educational opportunity more possible. The estimated increased $100 million a year in state aid would involve a revenue shift in school financing from property taxes to broad-based sales and income tax. The result — property tax relief.

Arguments AGAINST

Because of the distribution formula built into LB772, school districts will not get increases in equal proportions. For some districts with relatively few students and a high property tax base the assistance would be minimal. But residents of those districts still would have to pay the increased state sales and income taxes.

There is also a fear that because state role in school financing would increase so dramatically, the state might erode local control of the schools.

Legislature Candidates

Nichol Wilson

Highways — Impose a wheel tax, my number one choice, increase the vehicle tax or increase the license tax.

Ben Wilson, 64, Mitchell. Farmer, rancher. Member Eagles. Four Square Gospel Church.

School Aid — I oppose repeal of LB772. Since it was passed by so large a majority of the legislators, it could be very difficult to pass a comparable bill in the next Legislature. Any bill passed involving taxes should be implemented and if not satisfactory could be modified later.

Pay Increases — State employees should have annual cost-of-living pay increases. This is not inflationary only justified. I see no reason why we would need higher taxes to meet this because higher cost of goods means more sales tax and hopefully more income tax.

Highways — I have no definite plans at present to meet highway needs for the future. A great deal will depend upon what the costs will be and how the economy of the state is at that time.

their wages on cost-of-living increases or decreases.

How Guide Was Prepared

Representatives from the Nebraska and Lincoln League of Women Voters and the Sunday Journal and Star prepared questionnaires which were sent to candidates for public office. The material in this supplement is taken directly from the candidates' answers in their own words as space permits.

All candidates were given a 50-word limit for answers to the questions. Replies exceeding the word limit were condensed to meet space requirements.

Where candidates failed to answer questionnaires, attempts were made to contact them by telephone. Where candidates refused to answer specific questions, it is so indicated by "No answer." "No Reply" indicates candidate did not reply to questionnaire. Biographical information on those candidates who failed to return questionnaires was taken from the files of the Sunday Journal and Star.

In all copy in this section, asterisk (*) denotes the incumbent in the office sought.

Municipal Judges City of Lincoln

Thomas J. McManus
Neal H. Dusenberry
Donald Roger Grant

The governor appoints judges to the State Supreme Court, the District Courts and the Municipal Court in Lincoln after receiving nominations from separate judicial nominating committees.

The judges then serve three year probationary periods after which their names go on the ballot at the next election to determine if they are retained. After that period, a judge is up for a retention election each six years.

The question on the ballot for each judge is standard: Shall Judge be retained? Yes or No.

Granting Pardon to Richard Nixon

By the President of the United States of America

A Proclamation

Richard Nixon became the thirty-seventh President of the United States on January 20, 1969 and was reelected in 1972 for a second term by the electors of forty-nine of the fifty states. His term in office continued until his resignation on August 9, 1974.

Pursuant to resolutions of the House of Representatives, its Committee on the Judiciary conducted an inquiry and investigation on the impeachment of the President extending over more than eight months. The hearings of the Committee and its deliberations, which received wide national publicity over television, radio, and in printed media, resulted in votes adverse to Richard Nixon on recommended Articles of Impeachment.

As a result of certain acts or omissions occurring before his resignation from the Office of President, Richard Nixon has become liable to possible indictment and trial for offenses against the United States. Whether or not he shall be so prosecuted depends on findings of the appropriate grand jury and on the discretion of the authorized prosecutor. Should an indictment ensue, the accused shall then be entitled to a fair trial by an impartial jury, as guaranteed to every individual by the Constitution.

It is believed that a trial of Richard Nixon, if it became necessary, could not fairly begin until a year or more has elapsed. In the meantime, the tranquility to which this nation has been restored by the events of recent weeks could be irreparably lost by the prospect of bringing to trial a former President of the United States. The prospects of such trial will cause prolonged and divisive debate over the propriety of exposing to further punishment and degradation a man who has already paid the unprecedented penalty of relinquishing the highest elective office of the United States.

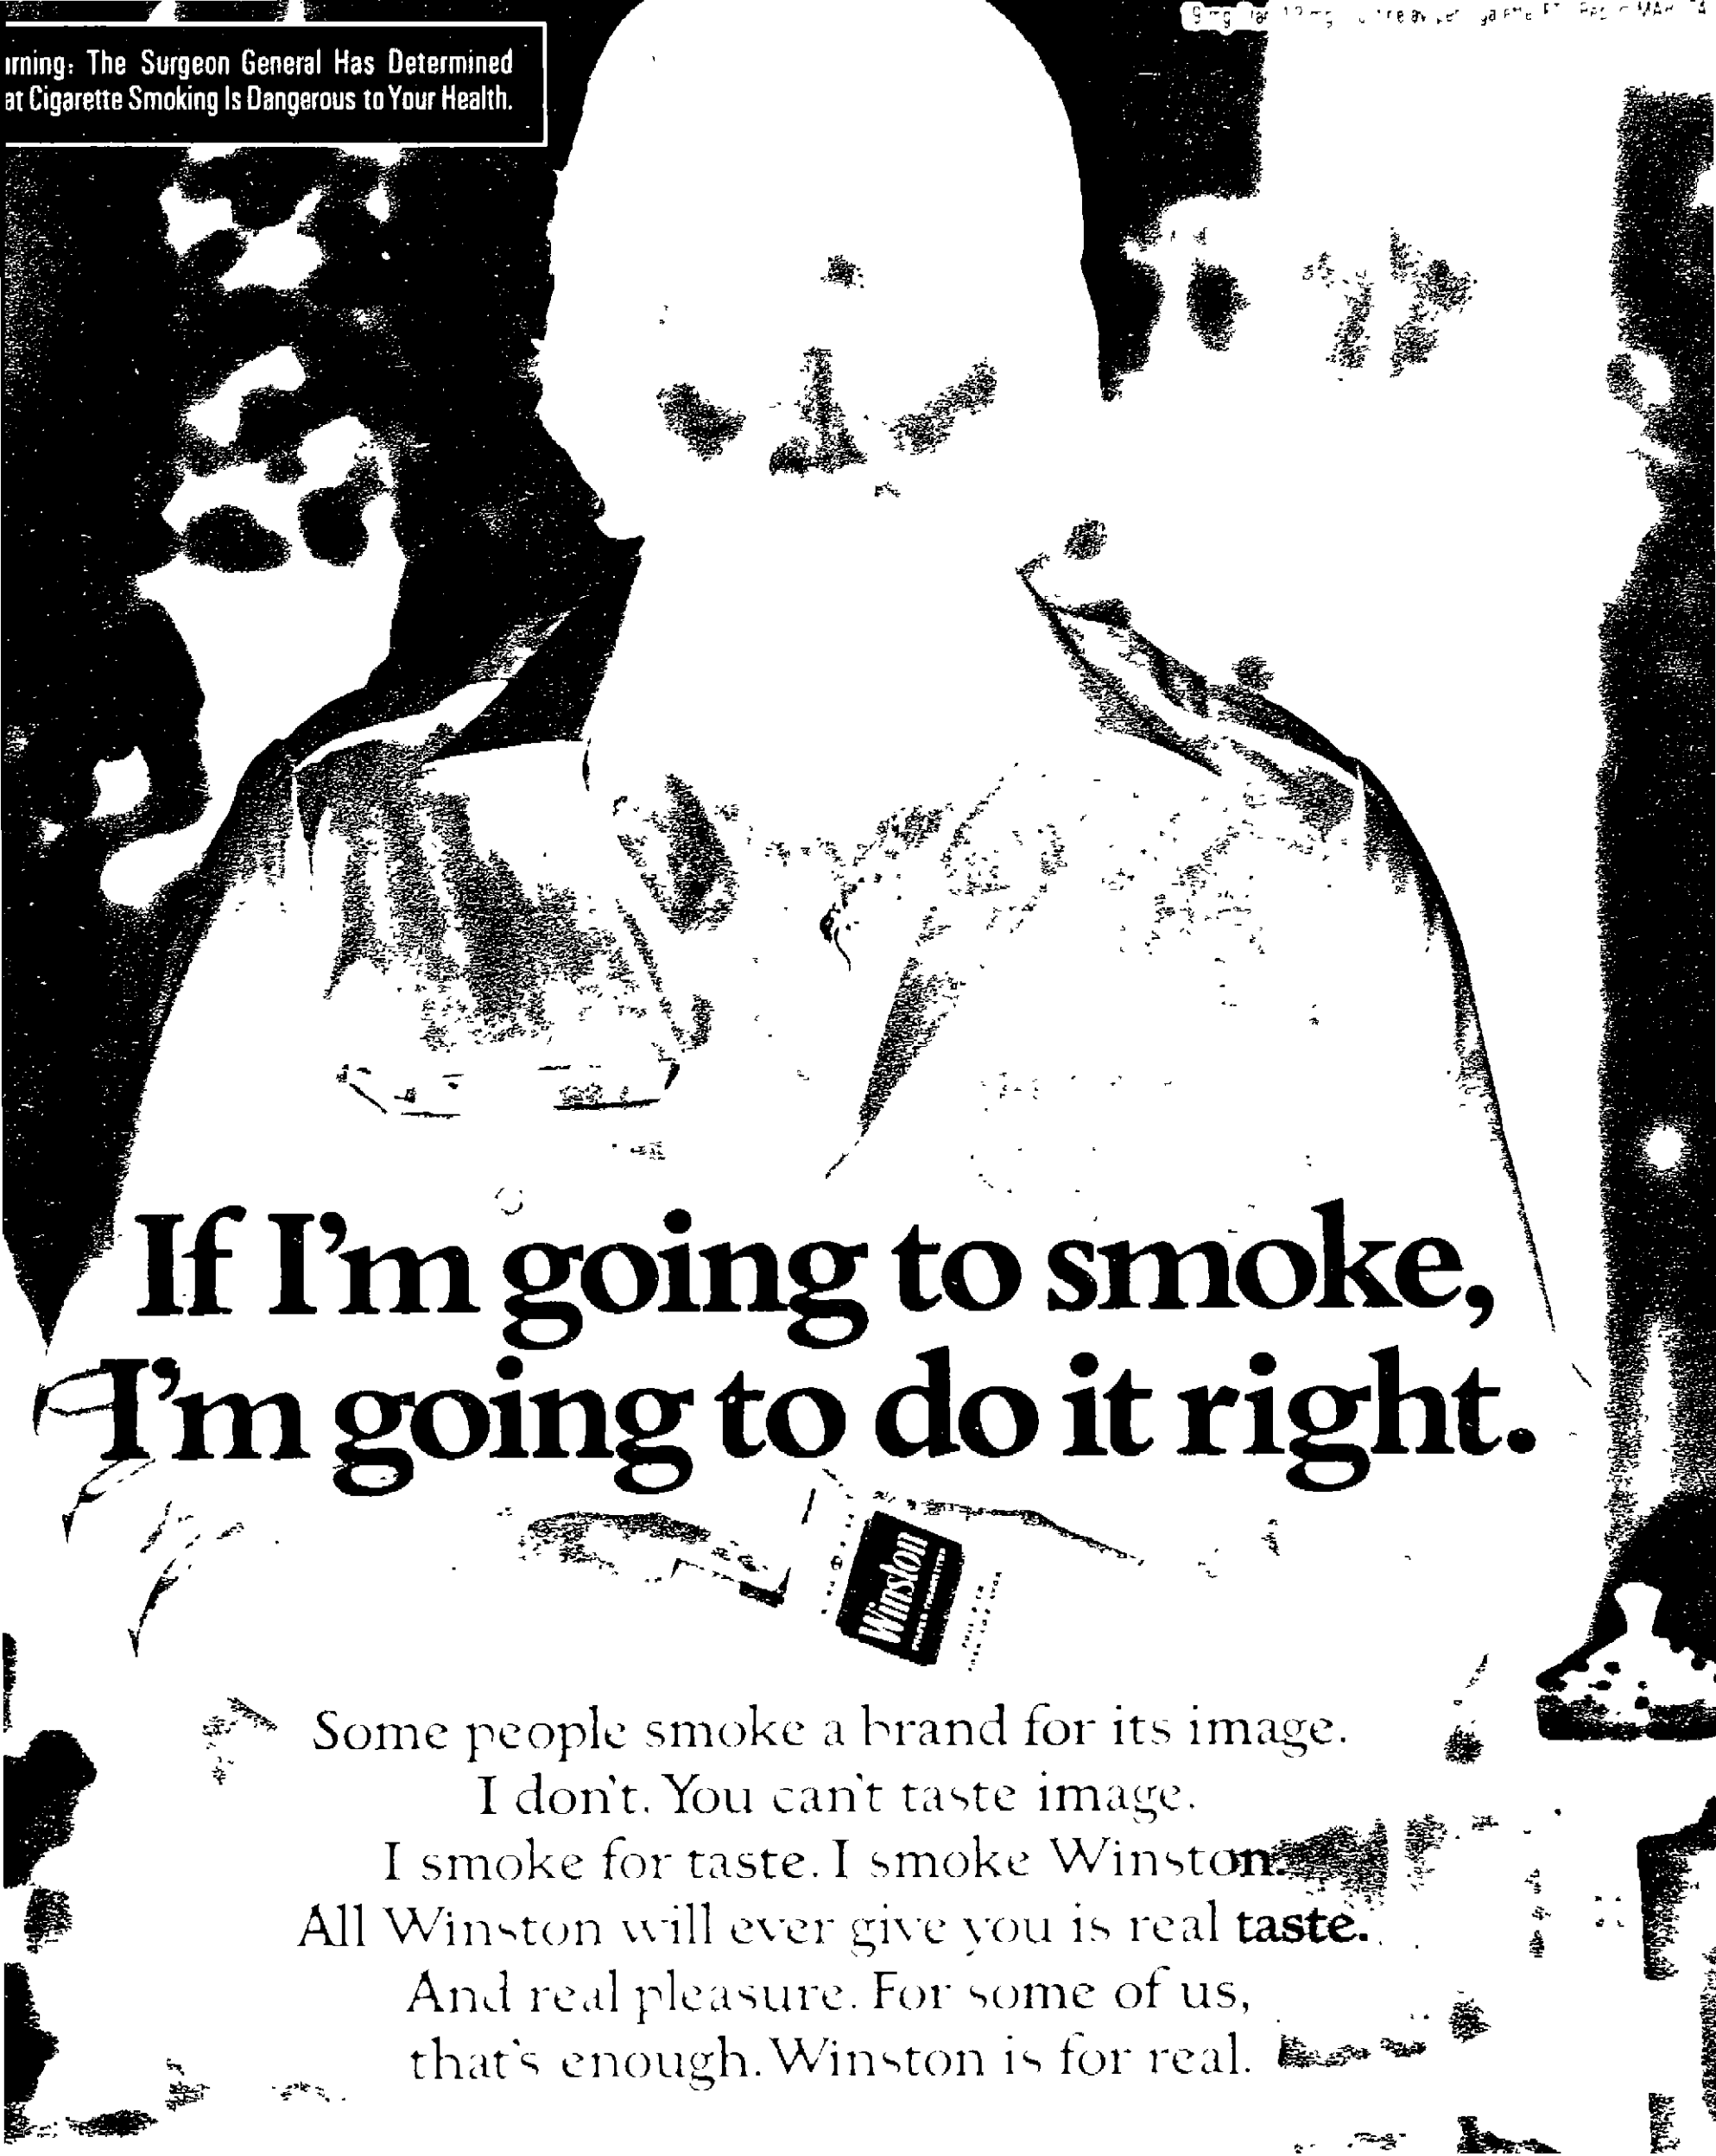

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gerald R. Ford, President of the United States, pursuant to the pardon power conferred upon me by Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution, have granted and by these presents do grant a full, free, and absolute pardon unto Richard Nixon for all offenses against the United States which he, Richard Nixon, has committed or may have committed or taken part in during the period from January 20, 1969 through August 9, 1974.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this eighth day of September, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and ninety-ninth.

Gerald R. Ford

THE PRESIDENT COMFORTS MRS. FORD
THE NIGHT BEFORE HER OPERATION.

Q. Hasn't President Ford made a quiet promise to his wife Betty that he will not run for the Presidency in 1976? Doesn't that mean the 1976 Presidential candidates will be Nelson Rockefeller for the Republicans against Henry "Scoop" Jackson for the Democrats?—Pat Young, Seattle, Wash.

A. Ford is on record as wishing to run in 1976. But he will accede to his wife's request. If she asks him not to run, he will not run. In that event Rockefeller and Reagan will fight it out for the Republican candidacy while Jackson, Mondale, Wallace, Bentsen battle it out for the Democratic candidacy with the possibility of Wallace bolting to a third party.

Q. I heard that Gene Kelly is a widower. How many children does he have? And has he remarried? Where could one send a fan letter to him?—Margaret O., Brookline, Mass.

A. Gene Kelly has been married twice. He married Betsy Blair in September, 1941; they had one child, Kerry, born Oct. 16, 1942. They were divorced in 1957. In 1960 Kelly married Jeanne Coyne. They had two children—Timothy, born March 3, 1962, and Bridget, born June 10, 1964. Jean Coyne Kelly died on May 10, 1973. Kelly can be written to in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Q. Is it true that the Richard Nixons have jewelry worth more than a million dollars, much of it acquired over the years from various foreign governments?—T. S., San Clemente, Calif.

A. Edward O. Sullivan, 49, a cousin of Pat Nixon, arranged to insure jewelry at the White House in 1970-74 for an estimated $580,000, which was $65,000 more than the total Nixon family assets in 1968. In a copyrighted article, The Washington Post identified Sullivan as the insurance broker in Bronxville, N.Y., who supervised all the Nixon family insurance. How, when and where the Nixons acquired their jewelry has long intrigued the Watergate investigators, especially since they learned that "Bebe" Rebozo spent more than $4000 in campaign funds on a pair of diamond earrings for Mrs. Nixon, which were then gifted to her by her husband.

Q. Is Budd Schulberg, who wrote What Makes Sammy Run based on the life of the late Jerry Wald, writing a sequel? I have been told he is writing What Makes Sammy II Run, based on the life of Frank Yablans, president of Paramount Pictures. Any truth to that rumor?—E. L., Los Angeles, Calif.

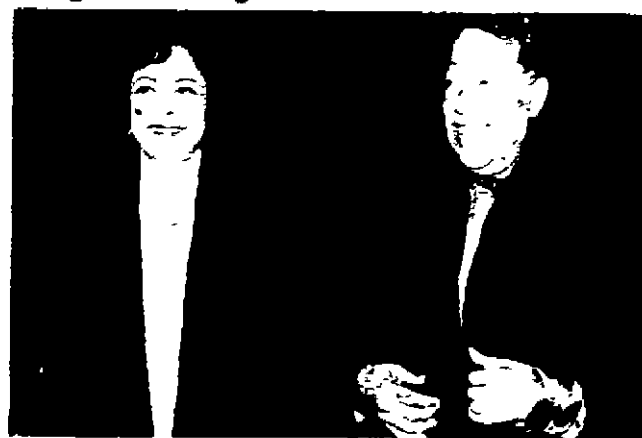

A. None at this point, although Yablans has been the subject of many articles written in the "Sammy" vein.

Q. Isn't the U.S. Presidency too much for Gerald Ford? Hasn't the job cost him 30 pounds? Hasn't his weight dropped from 210 to 180?—F. T., Washington, D. C.

A. President Ford lost 16 pounds in the first six weeks of his incumbency, from 210 to 194, but at the request of his physician. Saddled with all the political and economic sins of the Nixon Administration plus the illness of his wife, he may lose even more. Gerald Ford ascended to the Presidency during one of the most difficult periods in the nation's history, and surely the job will take its toll.

Q. It was no secret that for the last 20 years of his life the late Duke Ellington lived with "Evie." Will "Evie" inherit the Ellington estate or will it go to his son, Mercer?—Ward Sands, Newark, N. J.

A. Mercer Ellington, the administrator of the estate, will see to it that a fair share goes to "Evie." Most probably she will be given the royalties from the Ellington recordings.

DUKE ELLINGTON AND EVIE

Q. Happy Rockefeller seems so unhappy now that Nelson is becoming Vice President of the U.S. At the confirmation hearings which I caught on TV she seemed about to cry. Is she?—Naomi Lockhart, Berkeley, Calif.

A. "Happy" Rockefeller by nature and background is a "very private person." She does not relish the daily exposure of her life with Rockefeller and their two children, their protection by the Secret Service, the chronic digging into her previous marriage to Dr. James Slater Murphy, with their four children. But she is caught in the web of her husband's political ambition, and in any web there is not too much room for maneuver.

CAUGHT IN HIS WEB: HAPPY ROCKEFELLER

Q. I've been told that President Abraham Lincoln, the Great Emancipator, was not particularly interested in freeing the slaves in this country but in preserving the Union at any price. What is the historical truth?—A. Wooten, Hickory, N. C.

A. According to Bruce Catton, one of the nation's foremost historians on the Civil War period, President Lincoln once explained to the noted editor, Horace Greeley, who had also served as a Congressman, that "he would save the Union any way he could. If he had to free all the slaves to do it, he would save it that way. If he had to save it without freeing any slaves, he would do it that way. If he had to free some slaves and leave others in slavery, he would do it that way. But he was going to save the Union...."

BALTIMORE, MD.

It was a routine arrest, the kind some policemen consider the most dangerous. Patrolman Milton Spell flagged down a brown Buick as it weaved through Baltimore's tough East Side. Spell radioed headquarters that he had stopped a drunken driver. Moments later he lay dead in the street, a bullet hole in his chest inches above his badge.

The father of two, a favorite with neighborhood youngsters, had become the second Baltimore policeman shot to death in two weeks.

Among the 2000 persons attending Officer Spell's funeral on a humid August morning was Donald D. Pomerleau, the city's police commissioner. Pomerleau, a 59-year-old ex-Marine, resolved right there to find a way to wrest guns out of the hands of cop-killers.

The commissioner said later he spent a restless night, turning over one plan after another for sweeping the city's streets clean of weapons. The thought of a bold experiment suggested by another officer crept stubbornly back into his mind. The next morning he announced Operation PASS, the nation's first gun bounty experiment, which bought in more than 13,000 firearms in its first six weeks and paid out close to $750,000.

'Guns wreaking havoc'

"What is happening on our streets is senseless," the commissioner says. "Guns are wreaking havoc. I think it's apparent that nationwide gun control legislation is not going to come in the foreseeable future. Baltimore cannot wait."

PASS (an acronym for People Against Senseless Shootings) offers gun owners $50 for any weapon that can be fired and $100 for tips about hidden guns. During its first days the police paid cash on the barrelhead for rifles and shotguns as well as pistols and Saturday Night Specials. Commissioner Pomerleau has since limited payment to the handguns he really wants.

No one could have predicted the response. By late afternoon on the day of the commissioner's announcement lines of citizens were surrendering weapons and collecting cash at police stations throughout the city. With the first rush past, the police now get about 100 a day.

Other cities follow

In ensuing weeks at least seven cities have expressed interest and two, Columbus and Cleveland, Ohio, have proposed gun bounties of their own. In Cleveland, where mandatory handgun registration was vetoed by Mayor Ralph Perk earlier this year, the city council president says he will solicit downtown business, civic and professional organizations for $200,000 with which to pay gun bounties. In Maryland, Gov. Marvin Mandel is considering an extension of the gun bounty to all of the state's 23 counties at an estimated cost of $1 million.

The lure of cash has overcome even fear for personal safety in Baltimore, where the climate of violence had already accounted for 112 fatal shootings by Aug. 22 when Operation PASS paid out its first $50.

One man who surrendered his sawed-off shotgun told the desk sergeant confidentially: "There's someone out there I wouldn't want to know I don't have it anymore." Then he pocketed his money. Another watched with obvious satisfaction as the sergeant counted $5000 into his hand. He had emptied his gun collection of 100 revolvers and automatics.

Amazing variety

Veteran homicide detectives are amazed at the variety of weapons being surrendered. Among them are a Schmeisser World War II submachine gun, a double-barreled cap and ball pistol, a Saturday Night Special that had been converted from a starter's pistol, and an Italian military carbine of the same model and caliber as the one used to assassinate President Kennedy. Three out of five Saturday Night Specials are foreign-made pistols that can be purchased for $35 or less. They are the ones most often used in crimes.

"We're aiming for guns that are kept in the home," Pomerleau says. "We think we'll cut into murders that result from family arguments, when a man reaches for his gun and shoots before he realizes what he's doing." Such incidents account for nearly half of the city's fatal shootings.

Mayor William D. Schaefer has endorsed PASS enthusiastically, believing it takes weapons out of the hands of youthful criminals who panic easily and commit crimes of senseless violence.

Many of those shot to death in such crimes before Operation PASS began were operators of Mom and Pop grocery and confectionery stores. Among them were a butcher who was murdered as he stood behind his counter and a survivor of a Nazi concentration camp who was shot for the few dollars in his cash register.

Retired Police Lt. Frank Grunder Sr., whose son, also a policeman, was shot to death only two weeks before Officer Spell, says realistically that hardened criminals will find ways to obtain weapons despite PASS. "Still," he adds, "it's a good thing, safer for policemen and everyone else, with all those guns off the street."

Mayor Schaefer points out that the asking price of weapons still available has been forced up dramatically. He recently told U.S. Attorney General William Saxbe: "Intelligence data indicates you can no longer buy a cheap gun on the streets of this city." Saturday Night Specials that once cost $20 now sell for $55 or $60.

As a result of Operation PASS, the number of fatal shootings has dropped precipitously in Baltimore. Although the police caution against a premature reading of statistics, the fact is there were one-third fewer fatal shootings during the first 30 days of the experiment than in the same time a year ago. Since PASS began, 20 percent fewer guns have been used in crimes, and tips about hidden firearms have led to at least 84 arrests.

A patrolman whose beat is located in the district where Officer Spell was murdered says there is less trouble in the raucous corner bars now. "The same dudes who used to come swagging in with guns stuck in their belts are either staying away or leaving the piece home. They're scared someone in the bar will turn them in for the 100 bucks."

Finding the funds

There has been some criticism that money for PASS has been siphoned out of the police street patrol budget. Commissioner Pomerleau has tried to find other sources. The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is expected to support the $100 payments for tips about hidden weapons.

Despite its seeming success, certain changes in PASS are inevitable. For one thing, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration has been sharply critical of the experiment's failure to investigate how a person presenting a pistol for the $50 bounty obtained the weapon in the first place.

Says LEAA's general counsel Thomas J. Madden, "As long as it is possible to buy a gun, any gun, for less than $50 and turn it into the police department for $50, the profit motive is present. And the laws of economics indicate that if people can buy guns at a lower price and sell them at the higher price they will do so."

Sears Roebuck and Co. and 10 of the other 12 stores that sell firearms in Baltimore have discontinued sales of revolvers and automatics costing less than $50. One dealer, however, shrugs off the impact of PASS.

Still in business

"I know a guy I could call right now, and say, 'I want a gun. See what you can do for me,' and I guarantee that within a week he'd have one for me," the dealer says.

Others who want private ownership of firearms eliminated everywhere point out that guns can flow freely into Baltimore from outside the city, raising the possibility of a black market.

"Nevertheless," says Commissioner Pomerleau, "it should be evident that removal of 10, 15, or 20 thousand guns from potential theft and use will have an impact on violent crime and senseless shootings. While we will never really know how many lives our bounty program has saved, it is clear to us that PASS meets the mandate of the federal Safe Streets Act to reduce crime in public and private places."

Republican view

counterpart, Mary Louise id of the Republican National e, declared vehemently: "I ident Ford's pardon of Rich- will have little if any effect November elections. Most : believed that the pardon me at some time—and most it it should be given. The only was when. I cannot conceive of anyone voting against Republican candidates just because of the timing of the pardon. There's no connection between the pardon and the issues that Republican candidates all across the country are running on. As the President has said, the major reason for his action was to heal the wounds that have festered too long."

Republican Sen. John Tower of Texas agrees. He says: "In my view the pardon will not impact adversely on Republicans in the 1974 elections. I believe the immediate opposition to the pardon has ameliorated considerably, and there seems to be a growing acceptance of the idea."

Pat Caddell, head of Cambridge Survey Research, an outfit which specializes in political polling, says: "The pardon hurts the Republicans and helps the Democrats. The polls show that most people feel that former President Nixon should have gone on trial. Ford's pardon will not directly affect the election. Rather it has made the political environment more hostile. It has re-awakened the reaction to Watergate in the party sense. And for Republican candidates that's a handicap."

Nancy Hall, assistant campaign secretary for Sen. Peter Dominick in Colorado, explains: "Our telephone polls have indicated a high level of anti-incumbency. The pardon reaction has been very bad for Senator Dominick."

Republican Sen. Peter Dominick of Colorado and his wife Nancy. He, too, seeks a third term, faces close race, has also disclaimed Nixon.

Gary Hart and his wife Lee. Former Presidential campaign manager for Senator McGovern, he's expected to give Dominick a hard fight.

Birch Bayh, incumbent Democratic Senator from Indiana, with his wife Larvella. He seeks a third term in one of nation's 34 Senate races.

Republican Mayor Richard Lugar of Indianapolis and his wife Charlene. He is making a strong bid to unseat Bayh, and has disclaimed Nixon.

Dr. Bill Roy, who is running against Republican Sen. Bob Dole in Kansas, says, "The pardon announcement was bad for Dole and good for me. It took him 72 hours to recover from it."

Sen. Milton Young (R., N. Dak.) who is running against Democrat William Guy says, "The pardon won't hurt me, because I was against it. But in my opinion it certainly will hurt others. I've always sort of run as an Independent."

Keith Peterson, executive director of Republican David Stanley's Senatorial campaign in Iowa, predicts: "By Election Day the pardon won't make any difference. When it was first announced it set politics back in general, but it was a temporary thing. The people of Iowa who disagreed with the decision did not regard it as a deal on President Ford's part, but simply as an honest mistake in timing. This race in Iowa will be close right up to Election Day."

In all probability, if objective political savants are to be believed, Ford's premature pardon should have no decisive effect on Tuesday's elections, but perhaps a contributing one.

The post-Watergate Congress will be elected in a climate of scandal and disillusion. The five Democrats who won upset Congressional victories in six special elections earlier this year have a good chance of holding onto their jobs.

Anger with and disappointment in politicians is generally expressed by voter withdrawal. In Iowa's June 4th primary, only 14 percent of those who were qualified voted. In California's primary, of 10 million eligible voters, 4.5 million went to the polls. Low voter turnout is usually a decided advantage for the incumbents. But these are not usual times.

In the Senate, three Democrats, Hughes, Ervin and Bible, and four Republicans, Aiken, Bennett, Cotton and Gurney, are retiring. And in the House 40 members, many of them ranking Republicans and important Democratic committee chairmen, have also announced their retirement. Moreover, many of the strongest challengers, men like Rep. John B. Anderson (R., Ill.), have decided not to run for higher office at this time.

The electorate is probably more militant than usual, largely because the major issues are bread-and-butter issues involving high prices, high interest rates, and growing unemployment—all against the background of Watergate into which the President seems needlessly to have insinuated himself with a pre-Election Day pardon.

Those men and women, however, who are elected to the 94th Congress this Tuesday will share a unique and historic distinction. They are the ones who will be occupying both houses on the 200th anniversary of the birth of the United States of America.

President Ford signing "a full, free and absolute" pardon for former President Nixon. He then decided to compensate for what proved to be a political mistake by campaigning for Republican candidates in 18 races around the country.

The Presidential Pardon— Will It Affect the Elections?

— by Lloyd Shearer —

WASHINGTON, D.C.

On Aug 9th, when Gerald Ford was sworn in as 38th President of the U.S., there were 435 members in the House of Representatives: 248 Democrats and 187 Republicans. In the U.S. Senate there were 57 Democrats, 41 Republicans, and a single member of the Conservative Party (Sen. William Buckley of New York) allied with the Republicans, and Sen. Harry F. Byrd, an Independent of Virginia.

On Aug. 20th, while enjoying a most euphoric honeymoon with Congress and the people, Ford nominated Nelson Rockefeller as his Vice President, and on Sept. 8th, his previous judgments notwithstanding, he granted "a full, free, and absolute pardon unto Richard Nixon."

Ford declined to wait for the judicial process to run its course so that the American public might learn once and for all the full truth of Richard Nixon's guilt or innocence.

Thus, within the first month of his Presidency, Gerald Ford made two major decisions, both controversial and costly.

The effects

By nominating Rockefeller, he alienated the right wing of the Republican Party, and by prematurely pardoning Nixon, he knowingly disappointed a large segment of the American public. According to a Gallup Poll taken prior to President Ford's pardon-granting a majority of Americans, 58 percent, believed Nixon should be tried for possible criminal charges arising from Watergate. Aware of such sentiments, Ford on Sept. 8, in a prelude to his pardon announcement, declared: "I do believe the buck stops here, that I cannot rely upon public opinion polls to tell me what is right."

Last month the White House mail was running 4 to 1 against the pardon and 3 to 1 against the Rockefeller nomination.

How costly will the Presidential pardon prove on Election Day?

According to William F. McLaughlin, Republican Party chairman of Ford's home state, Michigan, "The best time to pardon Richard Nixon would have been one minute after 8 p.m. on Nov. 5th when the polls close in Michigan."

Other Republican bigwigs share McLaughlin's opinion, pointing out that the pardon cost the party much in morale, fund-raising, and the goodwill Ford had managed to generate during his first days in office, days in which the public regarded him in a tremendous outpouring of feeling as a neutral, non-partisan President.

Whether this alteration in the Ford image will carry over to the polls on Tuesday is questionable. People in general are not happy about the pardon issue. Generally they are disillusioned with politics, politicians and pardons. But it is the condition of the economy that overwhelmingly dominates the elections.

'The gut issue'

"The state of the economy," says Sen. Walter Mondale (D., Minn.) "is the national gut issue. People are interested in the price of food, the safety of their savings, the security of their jobs. The pardon issue will probably have its greatest impact in those races where the incumbents or candidates were strong Nixon supporters and are seeking to downplay the affiliation while the opposition seeks to highlight it."

Three such Senatorial races are approaching the wire: (1) in Colorado where Republican Sen. Peter Dominick takes on young Gary Hart, Senator McGovern's former campaign manager; (2) in Kansas where Sen. Bob Dole tries desperately to disassociate himself from the Nixon excesses in his battle against William R. Roy of Topeka, and (3) in Indiana where Richard Lugar, mayor of Indianapolis and Richard Nixon's so-called "favorite mayor," is trying to unseat Democratic Sen. Birch Bayh.

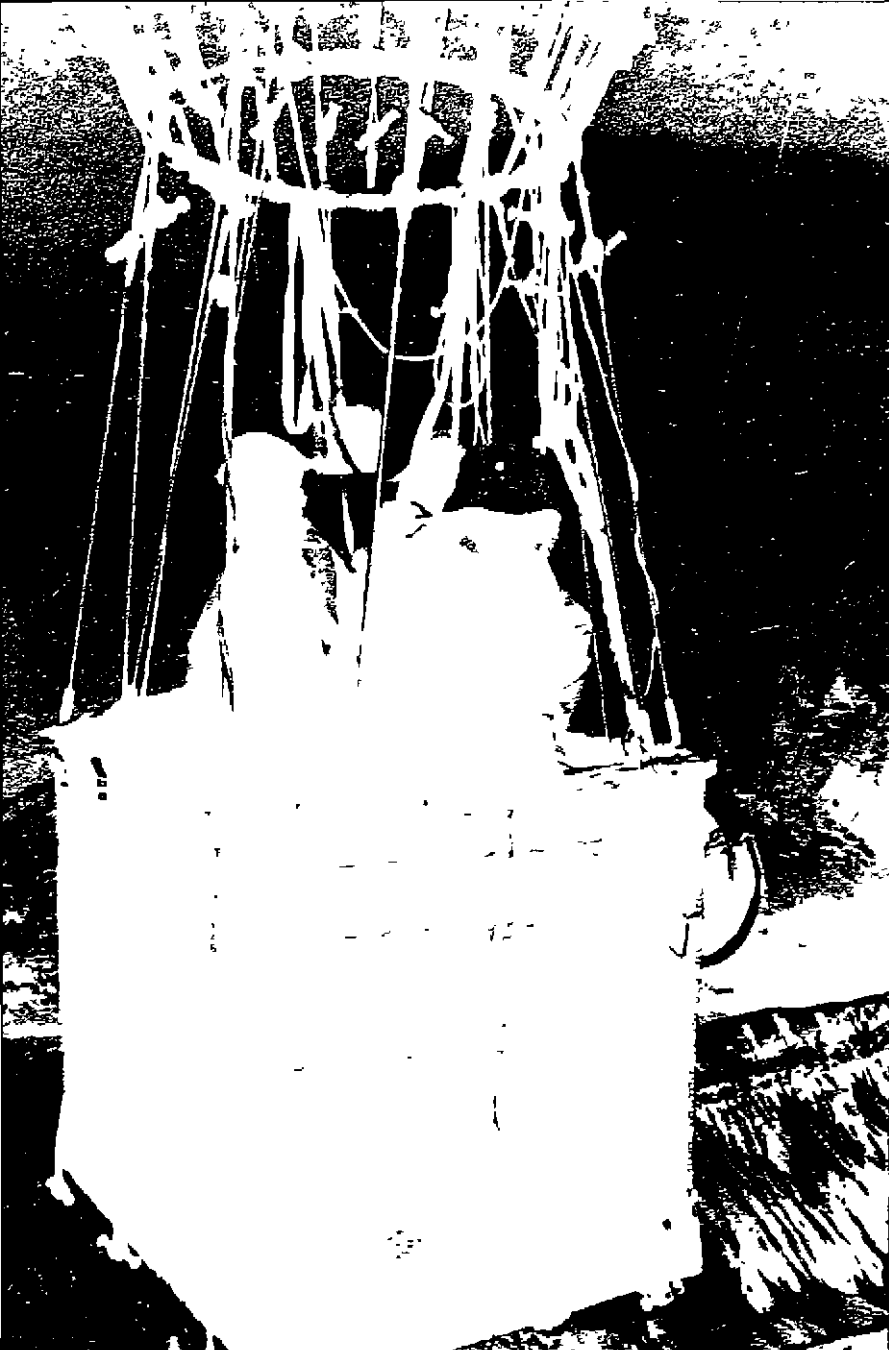

It is in such races that the Democrats are most likely to point to the Presidential pardon as a further tactic in the grand Nixonian coverup of Watergate.

Says Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee: "Ford made the pardon an issue in the campaign, and I can tell you that some Republican candidates for office don't want Ford to campaign on their behalf. The American people hoped to get Watergate behind them. By pardoning Nixon, the President didn't close the door on the mess. He opened it up all over again. The pardon, of course, is not the major issue. The two major issues in this election are inflation and recession brought on by five years of Republican mismanagement."

Credibility issue

Robert Strauss, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, disagrees in part with Bentsen. "I don't think Watergate or Ford's pardon will have much to do with the election," he claims. "President Ford has taken so many different waffles, sides, angles, and contentions on Watergate that his final, conclusive, irretrievable pardon simply convinced people that his credibility left much to be desired."

"When Ford became President," Strauss continues, "it gave heart to many disheartened Republicans. He was Canada: Please add $2.00 to U.S. price. Add $5.00 for shipping.

A time to buy. A time to save.

There's lots of hustle and bustle in GE warehouses these days.

It means that from now until November 29 we're shipping selected GE appliances and Performance color TV to dealers at once-a-year Factory Sale Days lower prices.* So they can lower prices to you.

And you'll get real savings on factory-fresh GE appliances you've been wanting for a long time.

On one or more selected GE models: 18-lb. Filter-Flo[®] washers and matching dryers, big capacity no-frost refrigerators, Potscrubber[™] dishwashers, ranges with the P-7[®] self-cleaning ovens, and General Electric Performance color TV.

Look for Factory Sale Days tags at your participating dealer.

But hurry—while the sale is still on. (And how about Christmas? What could be a more practical, welcome gift than one of these great GE appliances?)

And remember when you buy you'll also get Customer Care[®] service by General Electric. Which means that wherever you are or go in the continental U.S.A. there'll be a qualified GE serviceman nearby.

*Prices and terms optional with dealer. Subject to Fair Trade in Cash and Cdn., and portions of N.Y., N.J., and Mass.

Which are your favorite Benson & Hedges 100's sweepstakes?

You have a choice of 100 prizes, each in its own sweepstakes.

Anything from a new 1975 car to a hundred-million-year-old footprint of a dinosaur. Or a sailboat. A home sauna. A tree house. Or one of 9 trips. Or a zooful of animal crackers. A tubful of hotel towels. A wiggle of live worms and a rowboat to take them fishing. And there are 83 more possibilities.

In any case, any winner may change his mind and ask for 100 ft. of dollar bills ($200) instead.

Each of our 100 winners will receive a letter explaining exactly what the prize includes, what choice there is (if any) of style or color or flavor, and what options there are on deliveries of perishable goods.

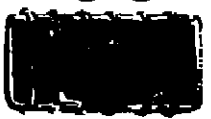

Please read the rules carefully and especially note that each sweepstakes must be entered individually, with each entry mailed separately in its own envelope, and the sweepstakes number in the lower left corner.

OFFICIAL RULES - NO PURCHASE REQUIRED

1. Write the number of the sweepstakes you wish to enter in the space provided on the official entry blank, or on a plain piece of 3" x 5" paper.
2. Hand-print your name, address and zip code on your entry, include with it the front panels from two packs of Benson & Hedges 100's, Regular or Menthol, or the words "Benson & Hedges 100's" hand-printed on a plain piece of paper.
3. Enter as often as you wish, but you may enter only one sweepstakes per entry, and each entry must be mailed separately to Benson & Hedges 100's, at the P.O. Box number on the coupon below, Westbury, New York 11591. Entries must be postmarked by February 1, 1975 and received by February 10, 1975.
4. IMPORTANT: You must write the numbers of the sweepstakes you are entering on the outside of the envelope, in the lower left-hand corner.
5. Winners will be selected in random drawings from entries for sweepstakes, by National Judging Institute, Inc., an independent judging organization, whose decisions are final. Odds of winning will be determined by the number of entries received for each sweepstakes. Winners will be asked to execute an affidavit of release and eligibility. All prizes will be awarded. Only one prize to a family. Liability for taxes is the sole responsibility of the individual winners. In lieu of any prize, winner may elect to receive a cash award of $200.
6. Contest open to all U.S. residents over 21 years of age, except employees and their families of Philip Morris, Inc., its advertising agencies and National Judging Institute, Inc. This offer is subject to all federal, state and local laws. Void in Idaho, Missouri, Georgia, and wherever prohibited, restricted or taxed.
7. For a list of winners, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to BENSON & HEDGES WINNERS LIST, P.O. Box 2476, Westbury, New York 11591.

My eyes had a hard time keeping up with all there was to see . . . a red chalet before it disappeared from view . . . the richness of green pastures dropping away . . . the purple that flashed from the gray and black jagged, mile-high rocks . . . the blue glacier waters cascading from every rock face to start a river. At the snow line a new world seemed to start, majestic yet treacherous. Seeing these summits from such closeness made me wonder that men ever had the nerve to scale them.

What would happen to us if we should be forced down among these peaks?

What was it?

Maybe it was that thought, but at about 14,000 feet, a feeling of uneasiness swept over me—not fear, but a strange feeling I couldn't shake. Could it be a lack of oxygen? Deep breaths did not dispel my trouble. Then it dawned on me . . . it was the absolute silence, something I'd never before encountered. Not even a wilderness on earth is completely soundless. In a balloon there isn't even a wind noise: you are traveling with it, you are a part of it.

Our flight started in Murren, a town nestled 5000 feet up in the Alps. Heidi could have lived there under the snow-capped-Eiger and Jungfrau. Since 1910 it's been the launch site for all Alpine ballooning. Back in those days, all the flights were piloted by a Captain Spelterini (real name Edward Schweizer). He advertised the flights as scientific and invited scholars along, but became rich by taking European royalty as crew.

How did I get into the act? In 1962 Fred Dolder, Europe's outstanding balloonist, formed the International Spelterini Society. The Society meets in Murren, and in 12 years has made 110 attempts to balloon across the Alps and out of Switzerland to Italy or France. Each year the society invites about 20 paying passengers to act as crew for the same reason Spelterini did . . . gas balloon flight is expensive.

The Ajoie's crew

That is how five of us from the United States became crews for the first two balloons to attempt the crossing recently. I was to fly in a small balloon named the Ajoie, piloted by Rolf Gross, a Swiss textile chemist, and outstanding pilot who had logged eight previous Alpine crossings. Our gondola, which looked like an oversized wicker hamper, would hold only three people. The other crew member was John Des Jardins, a young New York executive who has done all sorts of interesting things such as shooting the rapids on the tributaries of the Amazon, climbing Kilimanjaro and flying a hot air balloon.

The Toblerone, a slightly larger balloon, was to take off ahead of us carry-

Gross, the balloon pilot, prepares to throw out sand to let the craft rise by making it lighter. For a descent, the crew releases gas from the balloon ing three other Americans. The pilot was Wing Commander Jerry Turnbull, Britain's foremost balloonist and survival expert. As dangerous as this sport may sound, its safety record is outstanding. Nothing even approaching a disaster has happened until the day of our flight when Captain Turnbull's survival training almost had to be called on.

At 5 a.m. on the 10th day of waiting for the right weather conditions, and winds aloft, the telephone rang in my room. "This is the day!" came the cheery voice of Rolf Gross. I was dressed by 5:05 in climbing boots, knickers and layer upon layer of cotton shirts. A knapsack containing sweaters, toothbrush, shaving gear, French and Italian money and a bottle of champagne had been packed for days. Nothing we were to carry or wear was allowed to contain nylon, for nylon can discharge static electrical sparks, and our balloon would carry 1300 cubic yards of hydrogen.

Four hours to lift-off

Rigging and filling the balloon is a four-hour job, done under the watchful eye of a professional balloon-master. The gas bag is laid out on the ground, and over it goes the net. The gas is inserted through an opening that will be at the bottom when the bag is filled. Balloon flight depends on an exact balance between the lifting power of the gas and the weight of the load carried plus the sand ballast. As the balloon goes up, the gas will expand, since the atmosphere exerts less pressure on the bag as it climbs.

The balloon was given the precise amount of gas to clear the highest summits, at which altitude the bag would be extended to its full diameter. If the balloon goes above that altitude, further expansion of the hydrogen in the completely filled bag would mean that the excess gas would escape out of the bottom of the bag. If gas were lost this way, the balloon would start to go down, because there wouldn't be enough gas now to support the weight.

The balloon would descend all the way to the ground unless the balance was changed. A few handfuls of sand thrown overboard would bring it back to equilibrium. Sand ballast is the lifeline of the balloon. If you want to go up, you throw a few handfuls of sand overboard, if you want to go down, you vent out some gas from the top of the bag through a valve that is operated by a rope. Up and down movements of a gas balloon can be controlled to the inch. There is little or no control over where you go . . . that is up to the air currents.

By 10 a.m. the first balloon was struggling like a drunken monster to get off the ground. The Toblerone was to take off at noon and we were to follow. The air was alive with excitement when the filling process was complete and the bag was struggling against its anchor lines. All of Murren turned out to see the wicker basket being attached to the load ring and netting that covered the bag. Tension mounted as the four men and their gear went aboard. Then the take-off ritual began. The balloon master commanded workers surrounding the wicker basket: "Hands on!" They held the basket down as sandbags were removed.

"Hands off!" The Toblerone struggled to get off but couldn't make it.

"Hands on!" and more sand was removed.

Looked-for command

This was repeated until the balloon was able to sit a foot off the ground without being held. A child could now have lifted the four men and all their gear with a finger. The last sand, to unbalance the balloon and make it go, was discharged . . . the last command was given, "Hands off the Toblerone."

Up she went.

The take-off was graceful, slow, silent. Everybody cheered . . . me too. Little did we know then that in five hours our balloon, the Ajoie, would be

Ski lift

You planned this snow weekend with your friends ages ago. And nothing could make you change your plans.

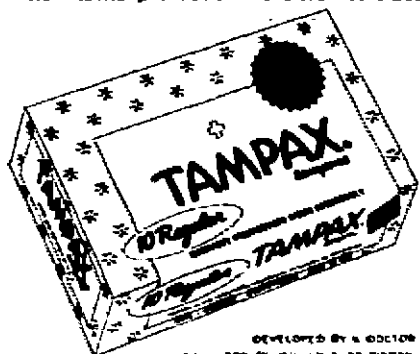

Too bad your period couldn't have happened some other weekend. But you're not worried. You brought along Tampax tampons.

You won't have to give up one precious moment in that deep powder. You feel confident protected by Tampax tampons. They're softly compressed for the best possible absorbency. Worn internally, so Tampax tampons are comfortable and discreet. They give you protection you can depend on, whether on skis or toboggan.

Friends are waiting for you on the slopes. You won't have to disappoint them when you have Tampax tampons tucked discreetly into the pocket of your parka.

safely landing in Italy and the Toblerone would come close to being the first disaster since Spelterini's day.

I was too busy to have any last-minute anxieties as instruments, radio, emergency oxygen, food, personal gear and finally the three of us were hoisted into our wicker basket. It was 1:03 p.m., when the command was given, "Hands off the Ajoie!"

The lift-off was exciting. The visual impact was startling; the perspective kept changing. What has been familiar for a lifetime of seeing . . . trees, houses and landscape, seen from the bottom up, was now being seen from the top down. We three dangled in a new world. Not a word was uttered. We stood in a wicker basket held in a spell. The view of the Eiger, the summit that has defeated and killed so many men, was breathtaking. Suddenly cloud cover moved in. We raced the clouds as they stretched to blanket the snowcaps in white on white. Then, like the end of the first act, the curtain came down and the mountain disappeared. We, too, were engulfed by a fluffy white mist above the Alps at 15,000 feet. In the cloud it was like being in brilliant darkness. Silently we hung in space, oriented to nothing but a basket.

John broke the silence, "What's that noise?"

Reach a goal

I, too, strained to make out the sound, as our ears took over for what our eyes could no longer do. From below, from far, far below, came the sound of rushing water, tumbling endlessly from the Alpine glaciers to the valley floor. Occasionally, mixed with it, were the sounds of cowbells, whose notes ricocheted off precipices. Then abruptly there was absolute silence again as we moved out of the path of the sound waves. Suddenly we broke out into brilliant sunlight, the view was dazzling. In all directions, as far as the world went, the sun played with snow-covered Alps. No longer able to contain ourselves in silence, we exploded in vocal wonderment at the vision. This was what it was all about. This was what I came for.

In our excitement John and I shook hands and laughed foolishly. Rolf, catching our euphoria, called out, "On to Italy!" Then he turned to me and said, "Put on a sweater; it's cold." Though the air temperature was below freezing, I hadn't felt the chill.

Our pilot kept a precise log following our progress across a map. We were doing about 35 mph and the flight took on a festive mood. For the first time we all started to talk. Although we were packed almost like sardines we had been each in his own little world. Rolf pointed to a distant peak, the Matterhorn, then in the opposite direction to the vast Monte Rosa range sparkling in the sunlight. My watch said 1:55.

Then . . . trouble

Rolf confirmed by radio to those back in Murren that we were on a direct course, headed straight for Italy. Then he said in his charming Swiss-English, "We've been at 15,000 feet twice. Let's drop down a few thousand feet and enjoy the ride. Break out the champagne" . . . but we didn't.

At that moment our radio interrupted our serenity. We recognized the crisp English accent of Jerry Turnbull. "This is the Toblerone. This is an emergency! We are losing gas. We have crashed into a 7000-foot alp . . . We're still airborne . . . going down . . . in serious trouble . . . spot us and report!"

The radio went dead.

Rolf urgently tried to make contact. He handed me the microphone to continue the call to the troubled balloon. He valved out gas, and we dropped down a thousand feet to get a better view. Our eyes searched vainly. After a few minutes Rolf radioed Milan to report that our sister ship was down with four aboard. That message would be relayed to Zurich, and Rolf assured us that the famous Swiss Alpine rescue service would act within minutes.

He was right. Airplanes were dispatched, ground-climbing crews alerted; and while we were in Italy a helicopter picked the Turnbull party off the glacier. They were back in Murren before we were. They even got to drink their champagne; we never did.

Our winds took us over the Italian Alps and our spirits rose again over the magnificent lake region. Lago Maggiore and Como were breathtaking. There must have been a thousand shades of green.

Our four-hour, 110-mile flight was to take us into the flat northern Italian farm country. We valved out gas, and flew over Bergamo where a pilot in a small plane climbed up beside us.

Draws a crowd

With our sand ballast getting low, we prepared to land in very still wind conditions. The heat of Italy was rising up to us. We drifted only a few hundred feet over the ancient walled city of Romano di Lombardia. As we passed overhead to land in one of the adjacent fields, we could see a stream of people already following under us. In droves they came: in cars, on bicycles and afoot. We could follow their progress by the cloud of dust that fumed up behind them. Rolf was concerned by the size of our "landing committee." We skimmed at treetop level until the perfect field was directly ahead. Just before our pilot gave the last command, to assume the bent-over, safety landing position, he asked a little nervously, "Where are the people?" I told him to get the balloon on the ground fast, they were gaining on us. We lumbered down the last few feet and touched gently, and then the trouble began.

Our balloon was still half full of highly explosive hydrogen. A thousand excited citizens of Romano, from babes-in-arms to old farmers, swarmed upon us. This was the most dangerous part of our flight. One cigarette could have turned their festival into a disaster.

'Boom,' I said

As the balloon flopped around on the ground, the crowd lunged from first one side then the other to get a better look. The three of us pranced around yelling, "No fuma" (don't smoke). I threw my arms up over my head and hollered "BOOM" . . . The people cheered. I was defeated. How do you tell them, "Explosion!"? With nothing left to do, I bowed to their cheers and took the applause.

Our comic opera ended when the town's one police officer dashed on the scene dressed in his resplendent uniform. Carabinieri Marescillo read our German and French documents as if he understood them and then with a sweep of his hand assumed command. He dispatched a youth to roll up our balloon and lift it on a farm truck. The balloon was stored in a farmer's barn for the night—in the balloon was our champagne.

Making the City Campus Safe

The University of Southern California is a white island in a black sea. It is located in Central Los Angeles in an area that is overwhelmingly black. This same condition obtains for many other city-core universities.

On Sept. 3 this year, at about 2:30 a.m., after the fraternity row security patrol had gone off duty, two USC students, John Davis Jr., 22, and his girlfriend, Donna Louise Walker, 19, were shot to death in front of the Tri Delta sorority house.

USC, situated right smack in the center of the second highest crime area in Los Angeles, is confronted by the same problem that plagues other universities—how to provide a safe campus. Some officials feel it's an almost impossible task in crime-ridden environments. Others think not.

John Lechner, head of security at USC, which has 20,000 students, declares: "We have the finest private security force west of the Rockies, and we're improving it all the time."

The force consists of 44 security guards to patrol the school's 150 acres. The guards are each paid $735 a month plus annual cost-of-living raises. The $735 a month is fixed for the duration of employment, which is the basic reason why there is a 40 percent turnover in guards each year. Of the 44 guards, 30 have some military or professional police experience. Each is required to carry sidearms but is not tested in their practical use.

The guards have no law-enforcement status, are not empowered to make arrests. What they can do is to detain a burglar, rapist or vandal until the police arrive and act as witness if the victim agrees to press charges.

The Southwest Division of the Los Angeles Police Department is responsible for patrolling the streets that cross the campus, and according to Deputy LAPD Police Chief Louis Sporrer, "USC has been relatively free of violent crime."

Police records show only 200 thefts and burglaries for the six-month period February to August, 1974. According to the university security officials, however, nearly 350 burglaries and 200 thefts occurred on the campus proper, which doesn't include off-campus housing areas, in that period. The difference, of course, is accounted for by the number of crimes "reported" to the police.

This year, USC, with an endowment of $160 million, will spend $500,000 on campus security. Ten years ago, it spent $116,580. The guard service has been expanded to round-the-clock security on fraternity row. The main campus has had 24-hour security since 1962. Since 1968 there have been three police-reported campus rapes.

Prize Winner

David Bowie, the unisex rock star, was offered as the first prize in a "dream date contest" thought up by Los Angeles FM radio rock station KMET.

The winner turned out to be a male, Gary Shriek, according to the station, "one of the majority of males who entered the contest."

The date, however, never came to pass. Instead, the young Mr. Shriek received a front-row seat at Bowie's concert and later was accorded the great honor of meeting the rock star backstage.

THE TRUTH ABOUT ARTHRITIS PAIN

- Backache
 - Circulation
 - Nervous Tension
- ...and how you can now get Blessed Relief

Doctors know that no cure for arthritis has yet been discovered. However, a method has been developed to ease the minor pain of arthritis whenever it occurs. Indeed, this same hospital-tested method also helps increase circulation, soothes nagging backache, even eases simple nervous tension to help bring restful sleep without drugs.

You'll discover a new joy in living

Imagine firm, but gentle, "fingers" massaging you where it hurts...in three separate directions: now up and down, then sideways, then in a circular motion. Couple this with controlled warmth penetrating your muscles and joints—and those minor aches and pains of arthritis and backache just melt away, circulation is increased, nervous tension is eased from your body in just minutes. You have to feel it to believe it!

Ask your doctor—proven effective in hospital tests

Fifteen years of hospital tests and over a million dollars in research prove that used as directed Niagara's unique combination of welcome warmth and 3-way massage help give temporary, repeatable relief from minor aches and pains, tension and fatigue. Your life may become active and full again. Peace of mind returns with a remarkable feeling of well-being. Sleep is natural, without drugs or pills. Almost instantly you discover a new joy in living.

Keeping Up... With Youth

College Freshmen—1974

According to a report released by the College Entrance Examination Board, this year's college freshmen are slightly more academically motivated than those in previous years.

In a report, "College-Bound Seniors, 1973-74," the board compared the Scholastic Aptitude and Achievement Test scores and replies to 50 biographical questions of all high school and prep school seniors who took the SAT exams in the last three years.

It reveals that the majority of this year's freshmen "are scholastically apt and studied academically subjects extensively in high school. They have been and plan to be busy with extra-curricular activities, and they are confident of their social skills."

Freshmen preferences in majors include, in the following order: (1) biological sciences, (2) business, (3) health-related majors, (4) social sciences.

For the first time, the CEEB report indicates, as many females as males took the Scholastic Aptitude Tests last year. About 13 to 14 percent of all students taking the tests were members of minority groups.

"The Crusading Handicapper," Nancy Kreisler, and her husband, Jack, tour the country in a mobile home to promote the cause of the disabled on TV. She's appeared on 150 stations.

Some TV talk-show hosts balked at putting a woman in a wheelchair on the air. But Nancy proved a lively guest on shows like this one in Lancaster, Pa.

A Model for the Handicapped

by Suzanne Curley

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. When former model Nancy Kreisler was confined to a wheelchair around 18 years ago, she thought her glamorous life in front of the cameras had ended. Paralyzed from the waist down after a bout with polio, Mrs. Kreisler had to concentrate on the problems of raising three children and running an eight-room house from a wheelchair.

But now that her children are grown, Mrs. Kreisler has used her model's instinct to start an exciting second career—as a TV advocate for the handicapped.

"I decided I might be good at helping other people cope with handicaps and at fighting the discrimination that makes life so difficult for us," she said.

She set her sights on television to get across her message. Four years ago, her husband, Jack, a business consultant, decided to take time off from his work to help his wife reach her goal on TV. The couple purchased a comfortable motor home with their savings, and began traveling across the country, setting up guest appearances for Nancy on TV talk shows.

Cheese for Everyday.

Kraft still brings you the nice · to · have · around · the · house · cheeses.

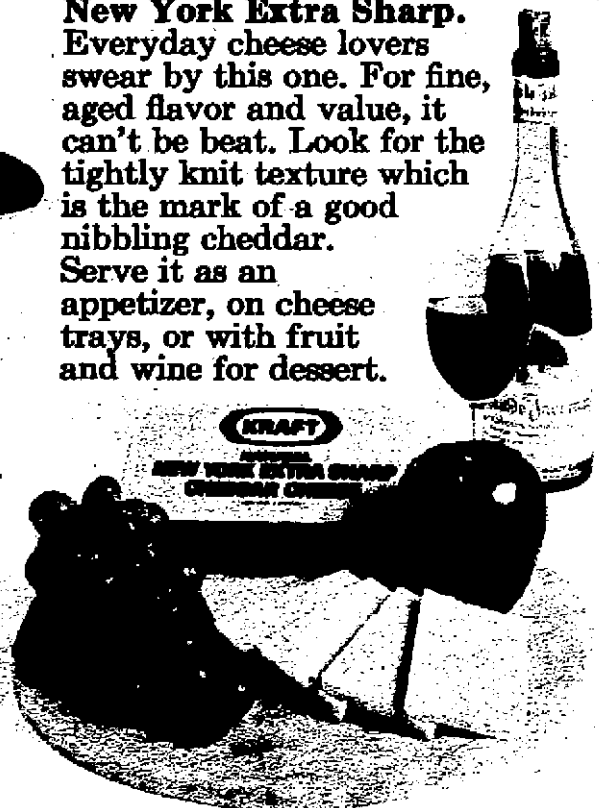

Back when J. L. Kraft delivered cheese to the stores in person, you could choose from a line of fine, everyday cheeses. Very little has changed. Today Kraft brings you that same cheese, conveniently packaged in a whole line of Cheddars and Colbys, in chunks and longhorn styles. You don't have to see the man on the wagon, just the Kraft name on the package, to know: here is consistently fine cheese, still the same good value when it comes to meal planning.

Colby is a mild cheese with an open texture. Serve it for snacks with crackers, rye bread, cold cuts and relishes. The famous longhorn—or half-moon—shape looks as good as it tastes on snack trays.

New York Extra Sharp. Everyday cheese lovers swear by this one. For fine, aged flavor and value, it can't be beat. Look for the tightly knit texture which is the mark of a good nibbling cheddar. Serve it as an appetizer, on cheese trays, or with fruit and wine for dessert.

Sharp Cheddar has the full, clear "bite" that makes it recommended for recipes where you want the cheddar flavor to stand out: omelets, rare-bits, crepes, cheese pies, soups. If you do a lot of cooking with cheese, this reasonably priced, consistently fine cheese is the one to use.

Mild Natural Cheddar Cheese makes a fine dessert cheese because of its smooth, mellow flavor. A slice with apple pie is traditional, but it tastes equally good with any kind of fruit tart or cobbler. It stands alone very nicely, and, by the way, kids love it.

Medium Cheddar will probably be the most versatile cheese in your kitchen. It's ideal for meatless dishes, for all kinds of cooking where you want rich flavor to go a long way. Try it in casseroles, vegetable sauces, cheeseburgers, sandwiches.

HANDICAPPED CONTINUED

In the beginning, recalled Jack Kreisler, "some of the talk-show hosts thought that a woman in a wheelchair would be a downer for their audiences."

The viewers, on the other hand, were enthusiastic. Response to the vivacious brunette's first TV appearance on a station in Philadelphia was so enthusiastic that Nancy soon became a sought-after talk-show personality. Since then, she's been on 150 shows in 60 cities across the country. After each appearance, she's received hundreds of fan letters.

"Every other family in this country has either a friend or a relative who's handicapped," said Nancy. "We're the largest minority in the United States. There are 30 million of us. Another 10 1/2 million are temporarily disabled each year due to accidents or illness and there are 300,000 or so wounded Vietnam veterans."

Letter from jail

Much of her correspondence is from people who, as she puts it "can relate to a woman in a wheelchair because they also have trouble coping with life, even though their own disability might not be a visible one." One young man serving a two-year jail sentence, for example, wrote to say that he found Nancy's optimistic philosophy helpful for prisoners.

Nancy is delighted that she's touched a responsive chord in so many individuals. "But I don't just want to inspire people," she said. "I would like everyone to see that the handicapped are as normal, adequate and loving as the next person. Everyone in the world whether handicapped or able-bodied has some limitation; some are more visible than others. So there's no reason why the disabled should be shut out of jobs, marriage or life in general."

Nancy hasn't always had such a calm attitude toward being handicapped. She admits that when she contracted polio as a young mother she was very depressed. The turning point came when she finally decided to accept her disability.

Handling housework

She soon found that "human beings are remarkably adaptable." At first, tasks like laundry and cooking were difficult and frustrating. But gradually she got satisfaction out of developing tricks and shortcuts to make the housework go faster.

Nancy likes to share these tips with handicapped viewers during her talk-show appearances. To help her reach things more easily, she explained that "my kitchen range is the kind with the controls on the side of the burners rather than in back, and I chose a refrigerator with the freezer compartment on the side instead of on top." She also Nancy makes use of devices like these wooden tongs to ease housekeeping in her White Plains, N.Y., home.

It's a tighter squeeze in her mobile home, but she can handle clean-up chores sitting down.

When Nancy contracted polio as a young mother, household tasks were frustrating. But "human beings are remarkably adaptable," says Nancy, who managed to make a complete adjustment to her new life.

uses plastic dishes and cups to avoid accidents when she reaches into kitchen cabinets with long wooden tongs. Closets in the house have been organized so that the things she uses most often are readily accessible.

Outside the White Plains house, Nancy's basic equipment includes a lightweight, junior-sized wheelchair that maneuvers easily and can be folded up into the car when she goes out for a drive. Her car has hand controls designed for people who have lost the use of their legs.

"The controls work well for everything but my parking," commented Nancy. "But, come to think of it, I never could park straight anyway," she said with a laugh.

Her TV appearances also include a demonstration of convenience gadgets not made especially for the handicapped, such as collapsible canes and magnetic playing cards. Although she doesn't use many of these items herself, she thinks that they may give others creative ideas about how to make their lives more manageable.

Nancy's own adjustment to her wheelchair-bound life has been so complete that sometimes her neighbors forget that she's handicapped. "Occasionally, one will drop by and suggest, 'Let's run down to the store,'" Nancy said with a twinkle in her eye. "When she realizes what she's said, she nearly dies of embarrassment. To me, that kind of forgetfulness is flattery!"

The Kreislers' three children, 24-year-old Jack, who is a graduate student, and high school students Gary, 16, and Dawn, 13 (the latter two adopted), find their mother's burgeoning TV career exciting, and often help research new subjects for talk-show discussions. Lately the family has been devoting its leisure time to dramatizing the plight of the handicapped.

Dangerous amusement

On a recent vacation trip to Sandusky, Ohio, for example, the Kreislers visited a busy amusement park. Aside from having fun, their aim was to point out possible architectural barriers—steep stairways, high curbs and slippery floors—that prove troublesome or dangerous to people with disabilities.

They gave the park high marks in convenience and consideration for the handicapped. Nancy noted that "there was a special reduced-price admission ticket for those who didn't want to go on the rides, and wide, smooth pathways within the park."

"The Crusading Handicapper" as she is known, completed an eight-week tour of 25 TV shows throughout the Southeast this past summer. The many subjects she discussed ranged from employment, architectural and transportation barriers, to adoption, family care and answers to call-in questions from TV viewers.

Wherever the Kreislers go in their travels around the country, the problems of the handicapped take precedence over everything else. Jack Kreisler said, "What pulled Nancy through was a strong belief in God, a book or two on positive thinking, and the feeling that life is too short to be uptight. Nancy believes you are only as handicapped as you think you are. She's 100 percent committed to this whole thing."

Although it has been suggested to Nancy to host a general-interest talk show, she prefers segments that would inform the disabled and educate the able-bodied in a light-mannered approach. "If all I do is teach people that disabled is not a dirty word," she said, "I'll feel I've done something toward changing the bad image that handicapped people have had to endure for far too long."

Painful elimination is unnatural.

Many people have experienced painful elimination. And many have come to accept this as if it were natural.

But there's nothing natural about it.

No matter what your age, you should have comfortable elimination.

And Serutan makes this possible.

Serutan is the effective laxative that forms a smooth gel in the lower digestive tract, where it combines with intestinal waste to give you comfortable relief.

There's no strain, and no cramps. That's because Serutan, with its natural ingredients, adds the necessary moisture and bulk to work with your system for smooth, easy results.

If you suffer from painful elimination, try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

WHATEVER HAPPENED TO PATTY HEARST?

It's been nine months since Patricia Hearst, 20, 5 feet 3, 110 pounds, brown hair, brown eyes, was kidnapped, dragged, drugged, or otherwise forcibly removed from her apartment in Berkeley, Calif., by a group of revolutionaries self-named the Symbionese Liberation Army.

At this writing, Patty Hearst remains undiscovered, despite the fact that 75 FBI agents and countless police officers in San Francisco and Los Angeles have been charged with finding her and are still working on the case. To date they have interviewed some 24,500 people concerning her possible whereabouts.

The FBI recently distributed new "mug shots" of Patty and the SLA members, Emily and William T. Harris, supposedly her bosom companions, and these are plastered on post office walls all over the country. They have provided no help.

Since the highly publicized shootout in Los Angeles on May 17 in which six members of the Symbionese Liberation Army, including its leader, "Marshal Cinque," were killed, the SLA has apparently gone out of business. Moreover, the hundreds of tips concerning its members that once flooded into the FBI offices have dwindled to a mere trickle.

Patty Hearst, daughter of newspaper publisher Randolph Hearst, has apparently gone underground, a fugitive from justice, FBI-described along with her friends, the Harrises, as "self-proclaimed members of the Symbionese Liberation Army and reportedly in possession of numerous firearms, including automatic weapons. William Harris and Patricia Hearst allegedly have used guns to avoid arrest. All three should be considered armed and very dangerous."

Patty Hearst was indicted by a federal grand jury on June 6, 1974, in San Francisco, for a bank robbery and the use of a weapon during a felony.

Her conversion from rich man's daughter to armed revolutionary has triggered a spate of books on her life by at least a dozen authors. Steven Weed, the fiancé with whom she lived in Berkeley, is reportedly writing one such work. John Lester, spokesman for the Hearst family, is writing another.

Shana Alexander, a Newsweek magazine columnist, has reputedly been advanced $200,000 for her book, A Social Study of California Life, in which Patty Hearst is the major case study. Fred Soltysik, brother of "Wizmoon" Soltysik who was killed in the Los Angeles shootout, has penned In Search of a Sister.

Colson Westbrook, a prison instructor once targeted for extermination by the SLA, is working on a book to be called The Nigger Who Came Too Close. Marilyn Baker of KQED-TV, who did some of the most outstanding investigative reporting on the case, has finished a Patty Hearst book. In addition, there is Cinque the Slave by Donald Freid and Lake Hedley.

All these works at this time are or will be long on surmise and short on substance. The only one who knows the beginning, the middle, and the end of the Patty Hearst caper is Patricia Campbell Hearst, alias Tania, FBI No. 325,805 L 10. Until she writes her book, most of the literature published on the subject is likely to be dross and floss.

WANTED FBI

THE FBI'S FIRST SPANISH-LANGUAGE WANTED POSTER WAS ISSUED IN PATTY HEARST CASE.

If you smoke menthol.

Anybody who smokes knows there's a controversy about smoking going on. And that most of the controversy is about 'tar' and nicotine.

Yet when we ask the average menthol smoker why he smokes a menthol cigarette, he almost always tells us that he smokes a menthol because it doesn't have a hot or a harsh or a scratchy taste.

Well, Vantage with menthol doesn't have a hot or a harsh or a scratchy taste either.

But what Vantage Menthol also doesn't have is anywhere near the 'tar' and nicotine most of the other menthols have.

And that's something we thought a menthol smoker would want to know about.

Vantage Menthol tastes every bit as cool, every bit as refreshing as any menthol cigarette you ever smoked.

But it has only 11 milligrams 'tar' and 0.9 milligrams nicotine.

Don't get us wrong. That doesn't mean Vantage Menthol is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine menthol around.

It does mean that Vantage Menthol is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette that you'll enjoy smoking.

You don't have to believe us.

All you have to do is try a pack.

While Senators will continue to do this, a Congressional campaign-reform bill limits honorarium income to $15,000 a year.

Most Senators in their reports this year indicated either no contributions and disbursements or simply pointed out that all political contributions were handled through their various campaign committees and were therefore not subject to the reporting rule.

The Senators, however, did list their various 1973 honoraria. And the record shows that Sen. Hubert Humphrey, the loquacious orator from Minnesota, topped everyone with $65,650 earned from 44 speeches. In 1971 the Minnesota Democrat earned $83,451 from lecturing, which shows he's slipping on the lecture trail.

During 1973 James Abourezk, the freshman Democratic Senator from South Dakota, garnered $49,425.15 in honoraria, most of it paid to him by Americans of Arabic heritage.

Topping all Republican Senators in 1973 was Barry Goldwater of Arizona who pulled down $44,733. Goldwater's lecture agent is Harry Walker, Inc., of Boston.

In fourth and fifth rankings for 1973 come Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson (D., Wash.) with $39,575 and Sen. William Proxmire (D., Wis.) with $38,625.

Herewith a list of the Senate's top money-makers, with their 1973 and 1972 earnings:

THEY TALK FOR MONEY

In 1968 the U.S. Senate passed a resolution containing the rule that Senators and Senatorial candidates were required to make public the amount and source of each honorarium of $300 or more received during the preceding year.

Senators were also asked to list the sources, amounts and disposition of political contributions received by them as well as the source and amount of any gift in excess of $50 from persons other than relatives.

30 DAYS!

"MAGIC INCH"

This top grade Mediterranean briar incorporates a sensational invention that contradicts every idea you've ever had about pipe smoking. It completely eliminates breaking-in. Tars, sludge, bite, and bitterness never reach your mouth. You get cleaner, cooler, tastier, moisture-free thoroughly enjoyable smoking. You can try it before you buy it.

It's the first pipe in the world that's guaranteed to give unadulterated pleasure to smokers.

E. G. Carey

Give it 30 days—

No cigarette, no cigar, nor any other pipe can give you the full rich flavor, aroma, deep down satisfaction, enjoyment, and peace of mind that you get from a Carey Pipe.

You may be a pipe smoker with a rack full of pipes and still searching for the ideal smoke, or perhaps you would like to switch to a pipe to cut down on cigarettes or expensive cigars.

The Carey Pipe may look like any ordinary pipe, but it's a lot different! In fact, there's nothing like it in the whole world. The Carey Pipe is made of the finest aged Mediterranean briar—but, its big secret lies in the exclusive patented "MAGIC INCH," cleverly concealed in a bite proof nylon stem.

It's Not a Filter

The "Magic Inch" is not a filter that gets soggy and loaded with foul smelling goo. A soggy, foul smelling filter transmits its stale foul odor into each successive puff of smoke, creating more problems than it solves.

It's Not a Trap

The "Magic Inch" is not a trap collecting moisture that gurgles with every draw. It is not a trap that must be cleaned after every smoke.

It's Almost Magic

Not my magic but NATURE'S OWN MAGIC. Warm winds pick up moisture by evaporation from the oceans, lakes, rivers, and streams, lift it high into the atmosphere where the cooler upper air squeezes it into drops of water that fall back to earth in its most perfect state of purity. Just as the colder upper air of the atmosphere causes rain, the cool air entering the "Magic Inch" chamber through the special louvers of the patented Carey stem, causes immediate condensation of the moisture in the smoke where it drops to the bottom of the chamber, is absorbed by the natural fiber sleeve of the "Magic Inch," and in turn, is evaporated into the outside air. No accumulation ever remains to form sludge or slugs of bitter tasting goo. The "Magic Inch" also mixes purifying oxygen with the smoke from the tobacco, in perfectly controlled proportions, cooling the smoke, eliminating all tongue bite, and creating MELLOWNESS, MILDNESS, and SWEETNESS that was never before enjoyed in pipe smoking.

Today, over one hundred and fifty thousand pipe smokers smoke Carey Pipes almost exclusively. They all got started by accepting my most unusual offer to test a Carey Pipe for 30 days, without any risk on their part whatsoever.

They were all granted the same option which is yours also. After 30 days, if you agree that the Carey Pipe is the best smoke of your life, you may keep it; if you don't agree, whack it with a hammer and return the broken pieces to me. The trial has cost you nothing! How many businesses are that sure of their product?

THE RIGHT TO PICKET

Housewives! Take care! Eight million household workers now have the right to picket the homes of their employers. A recent ruling by the California Court of Appeals holds so.

The case which stimulated that ruling involved Walter Annenberg, publisher of TV Guide and Richard Nixon's appointee as Ambassador to Great Britain.

Annenberg owns one of the most lavish of all the estates in the Palm Springs area. He has his own private golf course, and he employs at his Palm Desert, Calif., home a permanent staff of 38 domestics.

In February, 1971, when Annenberg refused to discuss his workers' request for a salary increase, they struck his home, carrying picket posters.

Annenberg, who entertains the great and the near great of this world and who on occasion has turned over his estate to the Richard Nixons, went to court "to get rid of the pickets because it was embarrassing to his guests."

Lionel Richman, an attorney for the AFL-CIO Laborers Local 1184, represented the workers and carried their case to the Court of Appeals which ruled that "when one accepts employment in a private home he or she does not thereby become some kind of second-class working citizen."

CONTROL CAMPAIGN

In order to popularize birth control in the rural areas of Thailand, contraceptives are currently used as money. For example, the bus fare into Bang Lamung from outlying villages is 12 condoms.

The idea is to popularize the acceptance of contraceptives, to break down cultural inhibitions and traditional embarrassments by handling them freely.

Mechai Viravaida, director of community-based family planning service explains, "The bus drive makes excellent condom salesmen—so do the boatmen, the teachers, shopkeepers—in fact, who realize the great we have in the country for planned parenthood. Thailand, as large as Colorado and Wyoming combined, has more than 3 million people.

One of Viravaida's favorite photographs is of a small boat, jammed with fruit and vegetables chugging along a remote canal with piles of contraceptives nestled among the melons and nailed to the boat a large sign which reads, "Community Based Family Planning Volunteer. Get Your Contraceptive Pills and Condoms Here."

REBUILDING YOUR HOME: HOW MUCH?

If an earthquake or fire or some other disaster destroyed your home, how much would it cost to place it at today's inflation-ridden prices?

If your home was constructed in October, 1960 for $20,000, it would approximately $48,000 replace it in October, 1974.

According to Marshall Swift, a Los Angeles publisher of valuation statistics, the number (multiplier) by which the original cost is multiplied to obtain an approximate current cost is 2.910 for 1950 homes; 2.302 for homes built 1955; 1.992 for homes built in 1960; 1.820 for homes built in 1965, and 1.333 for homes built 1970.

my FAVORITE jokes

by gus christy

EDITOR'S NOTE: "I started out working in a very tough joint in Chicago. I'll never forget my first boss—black hair, black shoes, black tie—his name was Whitey. One time he came up on stage and introduced me. They turned the spotlight on him, he thought he could make a break for it—climbed up over the curtain, disappeared, and nobody's seen him since."

"And then," reminisces Gus Christy, "there were those awful hotels. I remember once when someone set off a bomb and wrecked the lobby. It was terrible, it must have done $11 worth of damage."

Christy's comedy has gone through a lot of stages (including 12 years as a member of the team, Lewis and Christy), but he feels he does two things best: picks on people, and at the same time, gains a rapport with them, which is why, if he's being heckled, he's well prepared. "For instance, when I see three guys sitting ringside, I may say, 'Heck, three guys, no girls—computer date?'"

Christy's played the top clubs, is a regular on the Playboy circuit, was held over at the Las Vegas Hilton, and has made numerous TV appearances on the Griffin and Tonight shows.

Here are some of his favorite jokes and stories:

I recently bought a home, and I was a little unhappy with it. I finally called up my real estate agent. I said: "Listen, I want to talk to you about my roof!" He said: "What about it?" I said: "I want one. Everyone else has one!"

It's really an old house, though. The agent said it was "around" 50 years old. When I smoothed it out, it was closer to 100. I've got the only house in town where the fireplace is made out of wood!

My real estate agent was a Green Beret, and I realized later the significance of this experience in his life. He was taught to lie while being tortured.

A helpful son

I also realized that owning a home would be a lot of work, but, before I bought the place my son kept telling me, "Don't worry, Dad. I'll help. I know where my head is at." So do I! Till 12 noon it's on a pillow!

That kid never did a day's work in his life. All he does is lie around. One day he got sick; he had a fit. My wife wanted to call a doctor. I said: "Leave him alone, the exercise will do him good."

Repairs, taxes, etc.

Yes, a home can be very expensive. There are roof repairs, garage repairs, taxes, mortgage. No wonder they say you can't take it with you. Of course not! It goes before you do.

But, looking at the total picture, I am glad I bought my home. I was really selective about it, too. The real estate agent must have shown us 30 houses before we finally decided. Every morning he'd pick us up, and we'd spend the whole day driving around looking. He earned every penny of his $5000 fee: $3000 for commission, and $2000 for gas.

The one thing I don't worry about is gas. I've got a great car. I get about 40 miles to the gallon. Of course only three cylinders work! I go from zero to 60—in four days. I ran over a piece of gum—had to put it in low to get out.

I come from a large family. My folks only had enough college money for two—so they went.

A guy wants to commit suicide. He figures the best way to do it is by drowning. So, he ties a weight around his neck and jumps off a pier. Halfway down he sees a fish floating up with a balloon tied around its head.

A really conceited guy who's very disliked around the office, goes on a company golf outing. He's superconfident. He walks up to the first hole, looks it over and says, "Well, this looks like a two-stroke hole. One good drive and a putt should do it. And he hits the ball, just barely grazing it, and the ball dribbles off about two or three inches. So, he confidently strolls up to the ball, looks at it, and says: "Now for one heck of a putt!"

The secret of life is to think positive. I knew a guy who was a complete failure. I told him: "Think positive." He did. Today, he's positive he's a failure.

FINGERTIP MATH

A book that shows you how to solve math problems you never would have believed a mini-calculator could do.

*N*ow, Encyclopaedia Britannica... the world's most authoritative reference work... has been totally redesigned to bring you and your family a far more readable and informative encyclopaedia than ever before available.

This startling, all-new encyclopaedia actually costs less than the average of all other top-rated encyclopaedias on a cost-per-word basis. It outmodes every other encyclopaedia ever published. In a dramatic, 3-part arrangement that makes finding and knowing easier than ever, it provides immense help in personal growth and in homework assignments, and, as never before, is a great help to students and adults in everyday learning.

More useful... in more ways... to more people. The extraordinary usefulness of the NEW ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA is founded on a simple objective... the desire to serve the three basic requirements of a meaningful, family encyclopaedia. So, ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA is arranged for three distinct purposes into three distinct parts—an arrangement that makes it far easier to read and to use than any previous edition!

1. TO GET AT THE FACTS QUICKLY AND EASILY. This need is served by the 10-volume Ready Reference and index (Micropaedia), containing 102,000 short articles, each less than 750 words, and written in a style that makes them quickly and easily readable.

2. TO DISCOVER THE MEANING OF THE FACTS.

This need is served by the 19 Knowledge in Depth volumes (Macropaedia), containing 4,200 authoritative articles on major subjects, providing the reader with knowledge in depth and with the understanding, insight, and wisdom that is available in every field of learning.

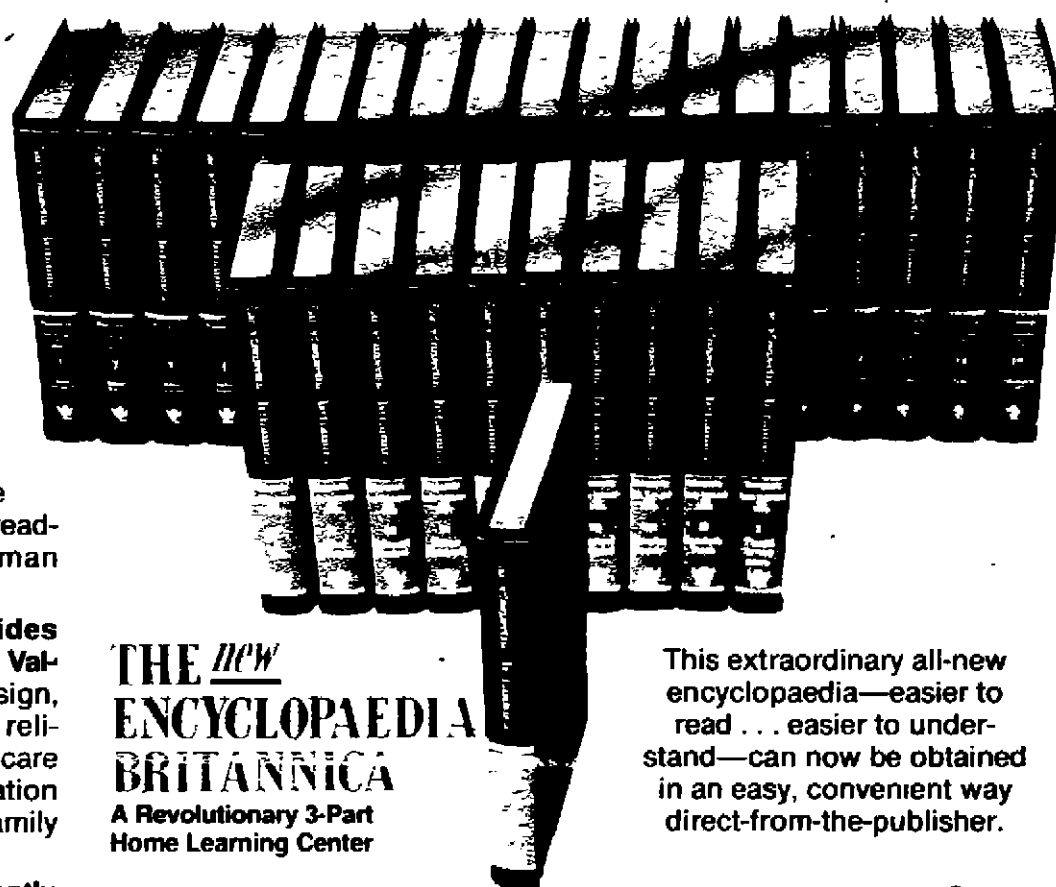

3. TO EXPLORE ENTIRE FIELDS OF KNOWLEDGE. This need is served by the one-volume Outline and Guide (Propaedia), which is a readable outline of the whole of human knowledge.

THE NEW BRITANNICA Provides Thousands of Subjects of Practical Value. Special articles on interior design, medicine, science, mathematics, religion, politics, health, sports, child care and much more... useful information that can make everyone in your family better informed.

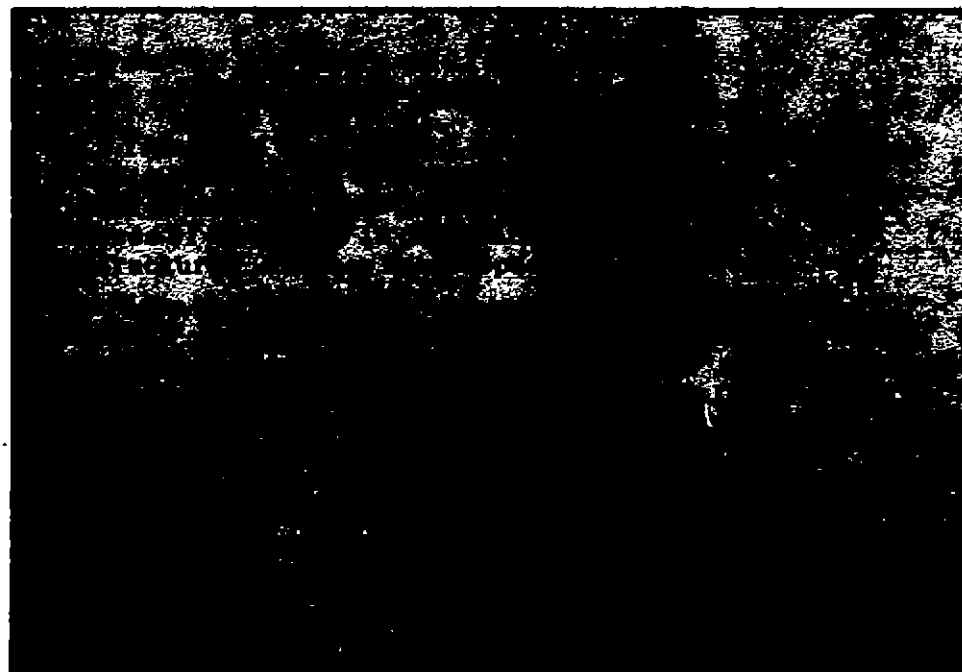

THE NEW BRITANNICA is Abundantly Alive With Colorful Illustrations. Over 24,000 magnificent maps and illustrations—thousands in vivid color. And the illustrations are an integral part of an approach which brings life and greater meaning to the facts.

Immense Value in Homework—Never Before As Useful to Students! For students, THE NEW BRITANNICA is indispensable. It is the finest, most complete reference in the world. It helps develop the active, alert minds that bring success in school and later life.

Good Earth ALMANAC

ONE OF THE MOST PRODUCTIVE, health-Ful and Fun plants is the Jerusalem artichoke. French explorers found the American Indians cultivating this native American plant. Jerusalem artichokes grow from 3 to 5 feet tall. The leaves are rough and are shaped like an egg at the base, tapering to sharp points. The flowers are yellow from 2 to 3 inches wide resembling sunflowers, except the centers of the blooms lack the brownish seeds. Although Jerusalem artichokes grow wild over much of North America, they are a favored garden plant and may be easily grown in your backyard.

Jerusalem artichokes are grown just like potatoes, by planting eyes from their tubers. They are frost-free and can be planted in the fall or spring. In some parts of the country you can dig whenever you need, even during the winter (if the ground isn't frozen solid). Planting eyes are available from garden and seed supply companies.

The Jerusalem artichoke, also called the American artichoke, produces a potato-like tuber which has a delicious nut-like flavor and may be prepared and cooked just like you do potatoes.
